To-day's Baseball Weather.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The following special forecast of the weather in New York to-morrow was made for THE NEW YORK TIMES to-night by Prof. Edward H. Bowie of the United States Weather Bureau:

"The indications are the least bit doubtful, but if it rains it will not be until late in the afternoon or in the evening. There will be clear weather enough to give ample time for the game. The temperature will be warm—about 70—and the winds will be light and variable. It will be what every one interested will call a fine day for the game."

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—When the spectre of a crushing 6 to 0 defeat haunted the Giants at Shibe Park to-day and 20,000 hostile fans were taunting them in their humiliation, McGraw's men threw themselves into the fight in desperation and started a magnificent rally, which cut down the clouting Athletics' margin of victory to a lone run in the fourth game of the world's series. The score was 6 to 5.

The New York batsmen fell upon Bender savagely in the seventh and eighth innings and had the stolid Chippewa on the verge of collapse. Shafer was crouched at third, waiting to dash home with the tying run. On vital punch was needed to end the reign of the tottering Indian. Red Murray was at the bat. If the Mackmen were to be put to rout, it must be done at this time, and quickly. Murray didn't measure up to the dramatic situation. He lacked the essential wallop.

McGraw pitted his last pitching hope against the batting terrors. He was confident that Al Demaree, with his resin ball, would hold the Athletics in check. Demaree swept through the National League this season, mowing down every team that faced him. He looked like the pitching find of the year. In four innings Demaree's slow, round-house curves were riddled, and he was slugged out of the game. McGraw had played his last card and couldn't win the trick. Rube Marquard came into the game while the Mackmen were in the glory of their batting spree, and he, too, was batted lustily before he finally settled down to the kind of twirling the Athletics could not reach.

It was not the Baker-Collins batting combination which brought about Demaree's ignominious exile. Baker and Collins took an afternoon off and let Barry, Strunk, and Schang do their part in the limelight. Modest Jack Barry was absolutely lacking in consideration for the Giant pitchers and poled out two doubles and a single.

Once started, the Athletic avalanche didn't stop until six runs had been piled up. Bender was working smoothly and easily, and for six innings held the Giants to two hits, both singles by Larry McLean. To New York fans it seemed incredible that the crafty, resourceful Indian could again humble the Giants as he did in the opening game.

His pitching to-day was slow and deliberate. With marvelous control, the Indian flirted with the corners of the plate. He knew the weaknesses of the batsmen and made the most of this knowledge. His weakness in the seventh and eighth innings was not the weakness of tact or judgment. It was the plain physical failure of the tired arm of a man who is no longer young.

Athletics Arise to an Emergency.

The Athletic team seems possessed of unlimited latent strength. They hold much playing ability in reserve, which crops out when the crisis comes. The Mack machine never works so smoothly or so well as in a pinch. When the danger is greatest they do not fail to do the right thing.

There was something commanding and impressive in the way the team rallied around Chief Bender in the eighth. When his strength was ebbing and his curves were being stripped of their trickery, in the fury of the Giant uprising, and it looked as if a great pitcher was done for, his team mates scented the danger and rushed to his aid. Merkle's prodigious homer had given the Giants three runs in the seventh, and McGraw's men swung into the eighth inning full of fight and courage.

Herzog sent a single to left, his first hit of the series and the rally was on again. Doyle shot a grasser at Collins, who fell as he choked the ball. He came up again as if on springs

WOMEN BAN THE AIGRETTE.

Social Leaders to Try to Stop Destruction of Bird Life.

Women prominent in society who are members of the Women's Auxiliary of the New York Zoological Society, have pledged themselves to use their best efforts to protect the egret and birds of paradise which now are threatened with extinction.

A resolution to this effect was passed at the last meeting of the auxiliary held at the Colony Club. The members also resolved to try both by influence and example to stop the use of the feathers of these birds for millinery purposes.

The members during the Summer sought the co-operation of the women of Great Britain, France, Germany, and Italy in this effort to set the fashion in a direction which is not destructive to bird life.

Mrs. H. Fairfield Osborn is Chairman of the auxiliary. Other members of which are Mrs. Stephen H. Olin, Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Richard Irvin, Mrs. Thomas Hastings, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Mrs. Ralph Sanger, Mrs. Richard Stevens, Mrs. Goelet Gallatin, Mrs. J. F. A. Clark, Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mrs. Henry Hoyt, Mrs. Willard Straight, Mrs. William B. Osgood Field, Mrs. Charles Sheldon, Mrs. Richard Trimble, Mrs. Walter E. Maynard, Mrs. William V. S. Thorne, and Miss Amy Townsend.

SLAYS GIRL AND HIMSELF.

Youth Shoots His Companion Near Crotona Park Entrance.

On a pathway near the east entrance of Crotona Park, in the Bronx, at 11 o'clock last night, Nathan Sogolowitz, 19 years old, of 3,758 Third Avenue, fired a revolver at the head of his girl companion, and as she fell to the ground, placed the muzzle of the weapon at his temple and fired again. He died at once, and she died fifteen minutes after she had been carried from the ambulance into Fordham Hospital. There were no witnesses to the shooting.

The name "A. E. Hemmil" was cut into two keys which the girl had in her handbag, and the initials "B. S." and "E. O." were on the signet rings she wore. She had no hat. The girl appeared to be about 22 years old.

In the youth's pocket were found a card sent to him by "Clara," and two letters written some weeks ago by Pauline Catlan of 318 Littleton Street, Newark. There was nothing in their contents which interested the police. Sogolowitz was the youngest of six sons of Herman Sogolowitz, a tailor. The boy was a skilled photographer.

Army Engineers Report Against Plans of Harbor Line Board.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The board of army engineers considering the relocation of harbor lines on the New Jersey side of the Hudson River opposite New York City has reported adversely upon many of the features of the plans proposed by the New Jersey Harbor Line Commissioners.

Secretary Garrison to-day addressed the following letter to the New Jersey Harbor Line Commissioners:

"I have received through the chief of engineers a report of the New York Harbor Line Board upon modification of the United States pier headline on the west side of the Hudson River from Weehawken, N. J., north of Fort Lee, N. J. Above a point about opposite West Eighty-sixth Street, Manhattan, an advance of the existing pier headline is proposed, reaching a maximum of 400 feet opposite West 134th Street. In the lower part of the reach, viz.: from about opposite West Eighty-sixth Street, Manhattan, to about opposite West Twenty-eighth Street, Manhattan, the board is of the opinion that hydraulic conditions and the best interests of navigation require that the pier headline be moved landward from 60 to 100 feet.

"Before deciding upon these proposed changes of the pier headline I desire the views of those interested, and will give a personal hearing for discussion of the question at some mutually convenient date. If you wish to be present please inform me before Oct. 27 what date would be convenient to you."

BOYS PESTER A CINGALESE.

Find It Great Sport to Let Down the Hair of a Stray Foreign Fan.

It did not need the suitcase lettering "K. V. C., Colombo, Ceylon," to mark as a Cingalese the black-bearded man who boarded an express train at the Wall Stret Station of the Subway shortly after 6:30 o'clock last night. His costume, with its long skirt of gold-braided blue cloth, and his coiffure, with its long coil of black hair, held in place by a gem-set comb, bespoke a native Cingalese.

Except for the fact that every time the train lurched or jarred he fell over the suitcase, he was faring well enough until he caught the attention of some office boys, who poked at the stranger, cried "Votes for women!" and were otherwise offensive. Just as the train was pulling into the Grand Central Station one boy grabbed the comb in the stranger's hair and fled, leaving the Cingalese with his hair hanging halfway down his back.

There were storms of laughter on the part of the boys at this race humor, and the visitor found himself pushed on the station platform. Those who gathered about him recognized the English accent of his flawless speech, heard that he was a Cambridge man fresh from Shibe Park, bound up-State a little way to the home of a friend. Several offered sympathy, and a woman offered hairpins.

Gratefully seizing the hairpins the Cingalese fan took up his position before the panel mirror of a slot machine, put up his hair, and went his way.

Workers Want Steel Suit Dropped.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Petitions purporting to be signed by employes of the United States Steel Corporation and urging the Department of Justice to discontinue its prosecution under the Sherman law, were received at the Department to-day from Representative Burke of Pennsylvania. The petitions say that the employes are more than satisfied with the company's treatment of them.

TRACE 100 BOMBS TO GANG; 15 HELD

Nine Are Taken Here and Seven in Troy as Black Handers and Counterfeiters.

LEADER KILLS HIMSELF

Murder, Horse Stealing, and Counterfeiting Are Brought to Light Through Federal Aid.

TWO CRIME CONTRACTORS

Sold Services of the Band, the Men Charge, and Assigned Tasks According to Talents.

With nine prisoners in his net and with four full confessions in his hands covering more than ninety pages of typewriting, Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty announced last evening that he had caught the band of organized blackmailers who for considerably more than a year have been systematically exploding bombs in all parts of this city. As members of the same board, six men were arrested last night in Troy by Secret Service men, charged with counterfeiting. One of the Troy band, Steven Pasquali, killed himself just after he was arrested.

It was not merely that he had caught a band of blackmailers that Dougherty rejoiced, but that he had caught the band of blackmailers, and that the stories written on the pages of the confessions accounted for nearly every one of the more than a hundred bombs exploded in this city within the past year.

The wholesale arrests—constituting one of the biggest day's work in the history of the department—were made with the co-operation of the New Jersey authorities and the United States Secret Service men. They were made on the basis of the stories told on Thursday night by two young men arrested in New Jersey for some hold-ups along the Palisades and locked up in the jail at Hackensack. The completeness and the bitterness of the revelations made by these chance prisoners was due to the fact that there had been a serious falling out in the gang over the division of the spoils.

As the Hackensack prisoners told the story, and it was repeated last evening by Mr. Dougherty, the operations of the gang shaped themselves into the system of a carefully directed organization. The bombs were exploded, either for the purposes of extorting money from the small merchants suspected of prosperity, or because the gang had been hired to throw them to satisfy the enmity of some one willing to pay the fee that sometimes was as high as $150.

Bombs for All Purposes.

Perhaps a jilted swain wanted the home of the girl's family shattered by an explosion. The gang could be hired. Perhaps an envious Italian grocer wanted a neighboring rival put out of business, at least temporarily. The gang could be hired for that. And perhaps a striking union wanted the factory of some stubborn employer wrecked. The gang could be hired for that.

According to Mr. Dougherty, the bomb which was exploded some weeks ago on the premises of Klee & Co., clothing manufacturers, at Fourth and Lafayette Streets, was the work of the gang, hired by the Tailors' Union for $150. The bomb did little damage to the loft, but it threatened the liberty of an entirely innocent youth who had come there to collect the pay for a day's work. He was later turned out in court.

As the confessions tell the story, the gang was divided according to the intelligence and skill of its members, two of them working always as "lighters," one giving over his better education and imagination to the writing of the blackmailing letters, one dealing out the dynamite needed, buying it if necessary and gauging the strength needed, depending on whether the victim was merely to be frightened or was to be visited with a really damaging explosion. One of the members was the "stall," "watchman," or "lighthouse." His task was to hover in the neighborhood of the marked house or store and when the time came to lift his hat and pass on out of danger, having given the signal to the "lighter" to put his cigar to the fuse.

Murder and Theft Confessed.

Horse-stealing and horse-poisoning also figured in the confession and, somewhere in it, in a way Mr. Dougherty was not minded last night to explain, appeared a full account of the motive and manner of the murder of an Italian named Restivo, who was killed at Chrystie and Stanton Streets some two months ago. He, it seems, had been the Italian "lighter." An occasional case of arson is also mentioned.

The confessions obtained by Mr. Dougherty point to two men as the leaders of this band, which made a business of blackmail. One is Antonio Leventino of 214 Chrystie Street, a grocer, who is variously referred to as "Scoffone" and "Sapone." He is held in $7,500 bail charged with extortion, and the confessions make him out the designer of the bombs and the custodian of the dynamite.

The other is Pietro Gimbrono of 132 Eldridge Street. He says he is a diamond dealer, and he is pictured as the writer of the threatening letters. Mr. Dougherty says that $83 in counterfeit money was found in his pockets when he was arrested.

The confessions were made, first by Alfred Lehman, otherwise "Eddie Schmidt" or "Smithy," late of Woodhaven and now in the Hackensack jail awaiting Mr. Dougherty's pleasure, and second by John Rizzo, or "The Chicken," a slip of a boy, also in Hackensack.

When these stories were told to the detectives who had been sent over to sound the men, the series of arrests started, with Italian detectives working silently in all the boroughs, in most cases seeking men whom they already

THE START AND THE CONDITIONS

Start at 3:30 P. M. from aerodrome at Oakwood Heights, Staten Island.

Course is around Manhattan Island; a distance estimated roughly at sixty miles. Contestants will fly to Governors Island, thence up the East River to the Harlem River, over that to the Hudson River, and down the Hudson River to the aerodrome.

Time will be taken from the instant the wheels of the aeroplanes leave the ground until they recross the starting line (in the air) on their return. The contestants will be sent away at two-minute intervals.

Prizes offered by The New York Times to the three contestants who complete the course in the shortest time are as follows: First, $1,000; second, $750, and third, $500. The Aeronautical Society will give silver cups to these three aviators.

Further particulars of the race will be found on Page 24 of this issue.

BOASTED THEY HAD MRS. RUMSEY'S GEMS

Two Prisoners Thought to Know of $75,000 Robbery from Home of Harriman's Daughter.

Two men were arrested and taken to Police Headquarters late last night, where they were held on suspicion that they were concerned in the theft of a pearl necklace worth $60,000 and other jewelry worth $15,000 from Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, wife of the sculptor and a daughter of the late Edward H. Harriman. The jewelry was taken from the Rumsey home at Narragansett Pier last July, and the thieves escaped without leaving any clue to their identity. The necklace that was stolen was a wedding gift to Mrs. Rumsey from her mother.

The men arrested last night and who at 1:00 o'clock this morning were being questioned at Police Headquarters by Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty and Inspector Faurot, head of the Detective Bureau, said they were James Stewart of 320 Manhattan Avenue and Hastings Wiley Mason, a janitor, of 61 West Ninety-seventh Street. Both the prisoners were said to have denied that they were concerned in the Rumsey theft. Commissioner Dougherty asserted that up to 12:30 o'clock this morning detectives working on the case had not found any of the stolen jewelry.

Immediately after the discovery of the theft of his wife's jewelry, Mr. Rumsey retained James M. Armstrong and Daniel F. Finn, ex-police detectives, of this city, to work on the theft, and these two men have given their undivided attention to the case since that time. The arrests last night were made by Detectives Owens, McGann and McManus, on affidavits made by Armstrong and Finn.

According to Commissioner Dougherty, Armstrong and Finn said that they had information that Mason, the janitor, had informed persons that he had Mrs. Rumsey's stolen jewelry in his possession. Stewart, who has a long criminal record, according to the police, asserted also, the detectives said, that Mason had possession of the loot. Mr. Dougherty said this morning that the prisoners admitted having made the statements in regard to the jewelry, but they maintained that they were joking when they did so.

Stewart's picture is in the Rogue's Gallery and his number is 2842. Inspector Faurot said that he had been in prison seven times for burglary, forgery, picking pockets, and other crimes. So far as the police records show Mason, the other prisoner, has not been known as a criminal.

In their talks with Mr. Dougherty both prisoners denied knowing anything about Narragansett Pier. Mason said he had been there once but added that it was more than fourteen years ago. Stewart said he had never been at the Pier in his life. The two men will be arraigned in the Tombs Court this morning.

GIRL DRIVES CAR; 3 HURT.

She Tried to Get Control of the Wheel and Ditched the Auto.

A touring car, owned and driven by E. J. Winn of 242 West Forty-ninth Street, was wrecked in Central Avenue, Yonkers, last night and three of those in it had to be taken to St. John's Riverside Hospital. They were George C Lee of 66 West Ninety-fifth Street, who had his right leg broken; Miss Celia Jackson of 242 West Forty-ninth Street, who had a broken arm, and Miss Delia Bates of the same Forty-ninth Street address, who was suffering from shock and bruises. Winn escaped with slight injuries.

Witnesses of the accident said it was caused by one of the women trying to drive. She reached out to grasp the wheel and Winn tried to prevent her. The car swerved so sharply that both the wheels on the right side collapsed against the curb, and all the occupants of the car were thrown out.

WIFE SUES DR. BLAKE FOR A SEPARATION

Charges Desertion Under "Influences Known to Me," but Does Not Name Mrs. Mackay.

Mrs. Catharine K. Blake, wife of Dr. Joseph A. Blake, applied yesterday to the Supreme Court for an allowance of $1,500 a month temporary allimony and $5,000 counsel fees, pending trial of a suit for separation against her husband, the well-known surgeon. She also asked that Dr. Blake be required to pay $5,000 to settle bills incurred by her since last July, when she said he had cut off her allowance of $600 a month.

William C. Hamilton made affidavit that papers in the suit for separation had been served on Dr. Blake on Tuesday at his office, 108 East Sixty-fifth Street. The papers in the suit were filed with the alimony application in an out-of-way office on the ground floor of the Court House and Clifford C. Boese, the clerk in charge, refused to allow them to be inspected. Supreme Court Justice Pendleton later ordered them to be made public.

Mrs. Blake asserted in her papers that she had no desire for a legal separation from her husband, but brought the action simply to get the support to which she was entitled. She said that she and her husband, who were married on Dec. 17, 1890, had lived happily until four years ago, when under influences known to her, but which she declined to state in her papers, he began to treat her with coldness and indifference, "and at times with harshness." There was no mention in the papers of Mrs. Katherine Duer Mackay, on whom Mrs. Blake has had papers served in a $1,000,000 suit for the alienation of her husband's affections.

The separation suit is based merely on charges of desertion and non-support. Mrs. Blake complained that for more than two years her husband had been "absent from her." At first she said he allowed her $1,000 a month and paid for the college and school expenses of his two sons, as well as all extraordinary household expenses. He also allowed her to occupy premises at 901 Madison Avenue owned by him. A year ago he rented these premises and she moved to 36 East Seventy-fifth Street.

When she took the East Seventy-fifth Street house she said it was on the assurance that her allowance was to continue to be $1,000 a month, but her husband reduced it against her protest to $600 a month, and on July 1 stopped payments altogether. She admitted that he had paid bills before July 1, which she said she had been obliged to incur because of the $400 a month cut in her allowance. Mrs. Blake said that her own income, which amounted to about $5,000 a year from a trust fund, was wholly inadequate to keep her and her sons in the state to which they had been accustomed. Both her sons, she said, were in delicate health. They are Joseph A. Blake, Jr., 21 years old, a student at Yale, and Francis H. Blake, 12 years old, a student in a private school in this city.

Mrs. Blake told the court that her husband's means were ample to make the provision for which she asked. She said "he has been and still is one of the leading surgeons of the City of New York and as such has an income of from $75,000 to $100,000 a year." To the best of her recollection, she said, their household expenses were $40,000 a year. She added that Dr. Blake owned 601-603 Madison Avenue, a very valuable property, given up to stores and apartments, and real estate worth $64,000 at Litchfield, Conn. She also asserted that he had large investments in stocks and bonds.

Mrs. Blake's application will come up for argument in the Supreme Court on Friday.

THREE CANADIAN LOANS FAIL

Alberta Issue the Latest and Most Unsuccessful in London.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—It was announced to-day that of the $5,000,000 of 4½ per cent. stock offered for subscription here by the Government of the Province of Alberta as much as 88 per cent. had been left on the hands of the underwriters.

This makes the third failure of a Canadian loan issue within a week. On Oct. 4 the announcement was made that only half the issue of $4,503,500 made by the City of Edmonton had been publicly subscribed, and on Oct. 9 that only 14 per cent. of the issue of $2,306,000 offered by the City of Vancouver had found purchasers.

HUERTA ARRESTS 110 LEGISLATORS

Throws Into Penitentiary Deputies Who Ask About Fate of Vanished Senator.

SOLDIERS INVADE CHAMBER

Cordon of Troops Flung Around It—Missing Lawmaker Had Criticised President.

MUTINEERS KILL OFFICERS

Garrison Near Mexico City Revolts on Hearing of the Fall of Torreon.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 10.—One hundred and ten members of the Chamber of Deputies, who had signed resolutions of warning to President Huerta as the result of the disappearance of Dr. Belisaro Dominguez, Senator for Chiapas, last night, were arrested to-night and lodged in the penitentiary.

Five other Deputies who signed the resolution were absent this evening when a cordon of troops was thrown about the legislative building and several hundred soldiers invaded the chamber.

The arrests followed a demand by President Huerta that the Chamber withdraw the resolution, which carried the threat that the Deputies would abandon the Capitol owning to an alleged lack of guarantees for their personal safety.

Senator Dominguez early in the month made a speech in the Senate violently attacking Huerta, saying that not only had nothing been done in Huerta's régime toward the pacification of the country, but that the present situation in the republic was infinitely worse than before. He said the currency of Mexico had depreciated, fields had been neglected, and towns razed, and that famine threatened. He added that this situation was due first and foremost to the fact that the Mexican people could not resign themselves to be governed by Huerta.

Before the hour for the regular opening of the session of the chamber, at 4 o'clock this afternoon, the basement and roof of the building were packed with troops. Scores of policemen were scattered through the gallery.

When the Deputies were in their places, the Minister of the Interior, Manuel Garza Aldape, entered the Chamber. Simultaneously several hundred Federal troops lined up in front of the Chamber. Señor Aldape took the platform and read the reply of President Huerta to the resolution warning him of the Deputies' intention to dissolve the Parliament and hold their sessions elsewhere, and demanding an investigation of the disappearance of Senator Dominguez.

The reply said that President Huerta could do no less than consider the resolution an act of unjustified aggression and transgression of the rights of the other two powers—the executive and the courts.

When the arrests were made, a few of the leaders were placed in automobiles. The other deputies were loaded into the street cars and taken to the penitentiary.

Meanwhile, similar demands to recant had been made on members of the Senate who concurred in the chamber's resolution. A committee of Senators called on President Huerta and signified their willingness to comply with his demands. The Senators afterward formally withdrew this action.

In anticipation of possible trouble heavy patrols of troops are on the streets to-night. The rapid fire guns, which were posted in the interior courts of the palace in February, again are in place and quantities of ammunition are at hand.

Huerta's Troops Near Capital Enraged by Torreon News.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 10.—The evacuation of Torreon by the Federal forces just before its occupation by the Constitutionalists is beginning to show its effect in the capital. A small detachment of troops in Provisional President Huerta's army broke out in rebellion last evening in Tlalnepantla, a suburb of this city.

The soldiers who engaged in the local revolt turned on their officers before the latter had an opportunity to escape. The officers were killed by the mutineers.

Further violence was prevented when other troops combined to put down the mutiny. It is feared, however, that this tragedy will have a great effect on the morale of the garrison here.

Huerta Postpones His Banquet.

Another result of the passing of Torreon into rebel hands has been the postponement of the annual banquet always given by the President of the Republic for the Members of Congress. This step also was influenced by Gen. Huerta's desire to await such action as the Congress

WILSON FOR FREE TOLLS?

London Times Says He's for Repeal of Canal Act Provision.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 11.—The Times hails with satisfaction the prospect of an early repeal of the free-tolls clause of the Panama Canal act which its Washington correspondent reports, stating that President Wilson, after conferring with John Bassett Moore, counsellor of the State Department, announces that he is convinced of the correctness of the British contention that free tolls for American shipping are a violation of treaty obligations.

The paper's correspondent adds that it is undecided yet whether the President will present his view to Congress in a special message or personally communicate it to Democratic leaders, but that action will be taken either at this session or early in the next.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The only obtainable information here last night regarding the report from London that President Wilson would urge the repeal of the Panama Canal act provision giving free tolls to American vessels was that he had not taken any action thereon.

Aged Russian Tells Naturalization Clerk It Is Never Too Late to Mend.

The oldest man who has ever applied for citizenship in Brooklyn presented himself yesterday afternoon in the Naturalization Bureau in the Hall of Records in that borough. He was Louis Platters, 84 years old, of 111 Scholes Street. When the aged applicant had announced his intention of renouncing the Czar of Russia, Clerk A. Y. Nicoll asked:

"Why do you wish to become a citizen so late in life?"

"Oh," responded Platters, "it is never too late to mend. You see, I just had a notion that I would like to die a citizen of this great country, although I feel that it will not be for a long time yet."

PLUNGES UNDER CAR TO DIE

In His Haste Suicide Threw Down Women in His Path.

An unidentified man committed suicide by throwing himself beneath the wheels of a trolley car last night at Flatbush and Church Avenues, the busiest corner in Flatbush.

For some time the man had stood in front of the old Dutch Reformed Church, where he had attracted some attention because he wore neither hat nor shoes. Suddenly he ran toward a Reid Avenue car, knocking down several women who were in his way and pushed himself beneath the car and between the front and rear wheels.

There was nothing on the man to identify him. The body was taken to the Morgue.

RENO, Nev., Oct. 10.—George W. Hammer, a well-known pioneer of Nevada and California, died suddenly yesterday at Bodie. He will be buried to-morrow in the casket he made himself 20 years ago for this specific purpose.

Hammer, who was a skilled cabinet maker, maintained that the people were being robbed by the coffin trust in the prices charged and decided he would beat the trust in his own case. Through all these years his casket has stood in the corner of his workshop. Hammer was 87 years old.

WOODRUFF IN GRAVE PERIL.

Has Only Been Conscious Once for a Moment Since Last Sunday.

This bulletin of the condition of Timothy L. Woodruff was issued late last night by the physicians in attendance in his apartment at the Ritz-Carlton:

The condition of Timothy L. Woodruff is still unchanged, and he continues to be dangerously ill.

WALTER B. JAMES, M. D.
NORMAN E. DITTMAN, M. D.

In discussing his father's condition with the reporters late last night, John E. Woodruff said that his father had been unconscious since last Sunday night, with the exception of a minute interval last night when he recovered consciousness and asked the physicians who were with him what they were doing. The doctors felt encouraged for a moment, until he again relapsed into unconsciousness.

KEEP NEILSON GOWNS.

Mrs. Hunnewell Also Loses in Customs Seizure Case.

Collector Mitchel yesterday ordered the baggage of Mrs. Hollis H. Hunnewell, who arrived here on the France, from Havre on Sept. 26, to be seized, as she had failed to declare wearing apparel in her trunks valued at $600. Counsel for Mrs. Hunnewell has applied for relief, and her petition has been sent to Washington.

In the case of Mrs. Frederic Neilson, mother of Mrs. Hunnewell, who arrived on the same ship and it is charged, failed to declare wearing apparel purchased by her abroad, the Collector ordered the goods to be seized after a hearing at the Custom House yesterday. The papers have been sent by the Collector to United States District Attorney Marshall for his consideration.

Mrs. Neilson's attorney, who was present at the hearing, maintained that her omission to declare the goods was due to the fact that the goods were packed by a maid without her knowledge. He gave notice that he would take the matter up with the United State District Attorney with a view of obtaining the release of the goods.

Included in the baggage that was seized yesterday by order of the Collector, were articles valued at about $300 belonging to Mrs. Neilson's other daughter, Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, who was not a passenger on the France. These goods, it was said, would be released upon the payment of the duty. Mrs. Frederick Neilson is a sister of the late Frederick Gebhard.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 10.—The fate of William Sulzer now rests with the fifty-seven Judges of the High Court of Impeachment. They will begin their deliberation on the verdict next Monday afternoon, just two months to a day since the Assembly passed the initial resolution leading up to the impeachment proceedings. That was on Aug. 13.

The two branches of the Legislature have been summoned for eleven o'clock on Tuesday forenoon, in the expectation that it will have been decided by that time whether Mr. Sulzer is to remain in office or whether he is to be replaced in the Governor's chair by Lieut. Gov. Martin H. Glynn.

Before a decision is reached on that momentous question the High Court of Impeachment must render its verdict of guilty or not guilty by a two-thirds vote and answer these two questions provided in the rules:

"Shall William Sulzer be removed from his office of Governor of this State for the cause stated in the article (or articles) of the charges preferred against him, upon which you have found him guilty?

"Shall William Sulzer be disqualified to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State?"

Must Vote on Each Article.

The Articles of Impeachment must be voted on article by article, and each member, as his name is called by the clerk of the High Court of Impeachment, must rise in his seat as he gives his answer of guilty or not guilty. Before the main question is put the court must decide the pending motion of whether the three articles dealing with the administration of the campaign fund and the use of some of the contributions in the stock market shall stand or be stricken from the indictment against the high respondent.

A motion to eliminate the three articles in this group—Articles 1, 2, and 6—was made by the counsel for Mr. Sulzer before the taking of testimony began. The contention was that these articles dealt with acts committed before Mr. Sulzer took office. Judge Cullen ruled that this motion should remain open until all the evidence was in, all the arguments had been heard, and the High Court was prepared to proceed to the consummation of its purpose, the return of a verdict.

There is little doubt at the Capitol to-night regarding the final settlement on this motion. All questions before the High Court, except the main questions bearing on the guilt or innocence of the respondent, his removal from office, and his elimination for all the future from places of trust and honor, are decided by simple majority vote where the bigger questions require a two-third vote.

The oratorical battle which began yesterday was continued before the High Court of Impeachment to-day by counsel representing the prosecution and the defense.

Parker's Ringing Attack.

When court opened Alton B. Parker again took the centre of the stage, to complete his summing up for the Board of Managers. There was little more than the closing peroration left, and the early arrivals in the Senate galleries were treated to an unusual feast of oratory at the very opening of the session, when Mr. Parker launched into a ringing denunciation of Mr. Sulzer.

"Stripped to his quaking flesh," Mr. Parker said, "he stands now naked before this tribunal, without a rag of his attempted vindication clinging to his deformed and mutilated manhood. Every disguise has been torn from his back, from the petticoat in which he trusted for safety to the armor of defiance in which he threatened to attack and expose a political leadership to which we have found him suing for a merciful obliteration of his misdoings and offering the bribe of his submission."

D. Cady Herrick, chief counsel for Mr. Sulzer, made an eloquent appeal for the acquittal of the respondent. His remarks stood out in strange contrast to the vitriolic attack of Mr. Parker. Mr. Sulzer was pictured by Mr. Herrick as an honest but eccentric man. The attorney did not seek to excuse his client's method in obtaining campaign funds and admitted that Mr. Sulzer had low ethical standards, but argued that no criminal intent had been shown, and therefore the charges had not been sustained.

"In reaching your verdict and determination as to whether the respondent has wilfully done wrong," he said,

FINAL PLEAS BEFORE THE SULZER IMPEACHMENT COURT

"you must take into consideration the nature and the history of the man and the nature of the offenses. Some members of his court have known him for years; known his lack of business habits and business methods, of his carelessness in money matters; of his overweaning ambition, known of his egotism, known of his proneness to consider those things which are the creatures of his imagination as actual facts, but none of you in the past has ever regarded him as a dishonest man, a perjurer, or a thief—and that is what these charges come down to."

Brackett's Stinging Eloquence.

But the climax came only with the appearance of Edgar Truman Brackett in the afternoon. For two hours he denounced William Sulzer in unmeasured terms, and then soared to heights of lofty eloquence as he appealed to the members of the High Court of Impeachment to find the respondent guilty and to impose upon him the most severe penalty in its power—to remove him from office and sign his political death warrant by disqualifying him for any post of trust or honor in the future.

Before Mr. Brackett spoke the Court debated the question of whether to adjourn until next week or go through with the rest of its work before separating. Judge Werner, of the Court of Appeals, said there were reasons why it was undesirable for the members of the Court to return to their various constituencies during the deliberations, after all the evidence was in. Finally it was decided by a vote of 49 to 4 to sit until the arguments had been finished and to meet on Monday afternoon to deliberate on the verdict.

Before the adjournment was taken Edgar M. Cullen, the Presiding Judge, cautioned the other members, who were about to return to their home districts for the week-end, against the political or popular pressure that in some instances might be awaiting them, with a view to influencing their judgment.

Judge Cautions Court.

"We should not tolerate, any one of us, the approach by any person concerning the merits of the cause we are about to decide," said Judge Cullen earnestly. "We should not allow it to be spoken of in our presence. Whatever your minds may be, keep that to yourselves and your associates until we finally meet to determine this case at the hour to which we adjourn. I hope we will comply with this caution. It is necessary to avoid scandal, to give confidence to the administration of justice, and, after a correct decision of the cause, the next necessary thing is that people should believe that it has been decided properly and without the intervention of extraneous influence."

PARKER FLAYS SULZER.

Says He Stands Naked Without a Rag of Vindication Left.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 10.—The first hour of the morning session was occupied by Alton B. Parker in concluding his argument, begun yesterday afternoon. The court and the large crowd of spectators gave close attention to his peroration, in which he urged the High Court of Impeachment, for the honor and protection of the State, to sustain the impeachment against William Sulzer, remove him from office and bar him from holding any position of public trust or honor in the future.

Mr. Parker cited Tilden's assertion that a personal crime, altogether disconnected from the office a man held, might tend to disqualify him for continuance in the public service and as such become proper cause for impeachment. He said that neither in England nor in this country was the question of what should constitute cause for impeachment settled by the lawmaking bodies. It always was left to the High Court of Impeachment itself, he said. In the Constitution of the State, Mr. Parker said, there was no limitation with regard to causes for impeachment. Consequently, it devolved upon the Court of Impeachment to determine whether there was good and sufficient reason for the removal of William Sulzer from office.

"I would like to ask your Honors to answer for yourselves, if against any member of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, under impeachment charges such as these, and with proof such as is before you, would there be a single vote in this chamber against his removal and his disqualification?" said Mr. Parker.

"I say, upon your consciences, that there can be but one answer to that question: you would vote to remove him and to disqualify him.

Crimes Not to Be Condoned.

"It has been urged that William Sulzer was elected by the people, and that the people knew him when they picked him for his present place.

"Of course, an election is no answer to charges of misconduct committed thereafter. It has been sometimes urged by writers that it was for misconduct which happened before. It has been common reading that where offenses were known and the subject of discussion and were passed upon by the people at the polls, that they had the right to condone the offenses, but it never had been suggested before this trial that the offenses which were committed afterward, after the people had passed upon it, were within the rule which led to the suggestion that an offense which the people had condoned ought not to be passed upon by a Court of Impeachment. The people have never condoned these offenses. They were not known to the people. They were committed in the dark during the campaign for the office, and some of the offenses, the filing of statement and the taking of oath, those two offenses covered by Articles 1 and 2, were committed after the election had taken place.

"The purpose of the trial upon impeachment is to protect the honor of the Commonwealth, the liberties of the people and the coffers of the State from the dangers of usurpation by public officials found to be unworthy of the people's trust and unfit to hold the high office with which they have been honored and whose official tenure is a public menace.

Fundamentals of Impeachment.

"The purpose of the Constitution in its provsions for impeachment is not to castigate the wrongdoer, but to insure to the people just and honest administration by furnshing a method for the removal of all officials found by its tribunal to be guilty of such offenses as make them plainly the wrong instrument for the administration of good government. It is the people of a sovereign State, whose liberties, lives, and happiness are in the hands of its public officials, who are entitled to the first consideration and the prime protection of this court.

"Therefore, the question to be considered is not, is this defendant guilty and to be punished by deprivation of office, but, rather, is he is guilty and therefore a menace to the State while he holds in his contaminated hand the power conferred upon him by our Constitution and laws.

"Whether there was ever a day when William Sulzer was fit for great public office we need not inquire. We may shut out his past with a shuddering hope that he may have been, and inquire whether the consideration of his conduct is so closely connected with, so immediately prior and so necessary a condition precedent to his induction into office that it constitutes a part of his Gubernatorial career.

"With all defenses in, and swallowed whole, and with all the scapegoats cruelly overburdened with his responsibilities and the misdeeds from which he alone benefited, these facts yet stare William Sulzer in the face and defy refutation.

Sums Up the Charges.

"That the defendant collected personally many thousands of dollars for campaign purposes and appropriated most of the total to his personal use.

"That he committed perjury in swearing to a false report of his expenditures, the former being many times the amount acknowledged; that he swore to a sum as his total collection which was less than the amount of a single contribution paid to him personally in cash in the same office in which he committed his perjury.

"That he deliberately, with an intent which could by no possibility have been honest, sought to procure the contributions in such form and to make acknowledgment thereof in such form as should best elude detection. That even as he took pains to conceal the receipt of campaign contributions, so did he strive by trick and device to conceal his dishonest conversion of sums so collected.

"That he sought, by the exercise of the power and prestige of his high office, to prevent the truth and the full truth being told by witnesses called to testify before the committee and this Court of Impeachment.

"That he in effect suggested a barter of appropriations for legislative votes for a bill he sought to pass.

"That he sought to coerce the action of members of the court through influence brought to bear on those he, in his narrow and mistaken view, deemed powerful to accomplish that coercion.

"That he has been guilty of contempt of this high court, of gross misconduct in office, of high crimes and misdemeanors, and of such unlawful, dishonest, and dishonorable conduct just prior to his induction into office and during the term of his office as utterly unfits him to be a servant of this sovereign people of this high office or any other office or post whatever.

Defy Majesty of the State.

"These acts constitute willful and criminal violations of public duty and personal dishonor, they defy the majesty of a sovereign State, insult the intelligence of a free people, and outrage every sense of honor.

"Before this bar this defendant stands guilty of these offenses charged by the impeachment and proved by uncontrovertible evidence. Before the bar of the court of public opinion this defendant stands condemned on the evidence here presented, and on the further damning testimony of his shifty defenses and of his futile efforts to dodge, by technicalities, the trial of the issues before this High Court in which evasion public opinion, with a freedom not permitted to judicial opinion, finds direct evidence of guilt. That same public opinion takes cognizance of the fact that the defendant here is suffering from such a severe attack of moral nearsightedness that even when directed by a myriad scornful fingers, he cannot discern the dishonest, criminal, and dishonored nature of the acts proved.

Pathos of the Situation.

"Even justice must see through its severe eye something of the pathetic in this defendant's frantic efforts to cover the nakedness of his wrongdoing. Defiance, defense, justification, prevarication, denunciation of his accusers, attempts to suppress and falsify testimony, and efforts to cast the blame elsewhere—each in turn has been stripped from his quaking flesh until he stands now naked before this court, without a rag of his attempted vindication clinging to his deformed and mutilated manhood.

"Every disguise has been torn from his back, from the petticoat in which he trusted for safety to the armor of defiance in which he threatened to attack and expose a political leadership to which we have found him suing for a merciful obliteration of his misdeeds and offering the bribe of submission.

"No act of his shows more perfectly the complete baseness of his character, unfitting him utterly for any public or private trust, than does his efforts to coerce the members of this court through channels his warped intellect mistakenly instructed him held the power of coercion."

FINAL PLEA FOR SULZER.

Herrick Says Removal Verdict Would Shake Public Confidence.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 10.—At the conclusion of Mr. Parker's speech, D Cady Herrick, the venerable leading counsel for the defense, arose to make his final appeal. His was the last appeal on behalf of the high respondent before the members of the high court were to go into that solemn seclusion to decide the fate of William Sulzer.

In beginning, Mr. Herrick expressed surprise at the argument made by Alton B. Parker that an official could be impeached for acts committed as a private citizen. He said that this was contrary to every public and authentic writer on the subject of impeachment. He urged that it had been held again and again that while a man might have shown himself unfit in private life in some respects, this should not militate against his retaining public office to which he had been elected. He quoted Macaulay's essay on the trial of Lord Clyde.

"Not a single great ruler in history can be absolved by a Judge who fixes his eye inexorably upon one or two unjustifiable acts," he said. "Bruce, the deliverer of Scotland; Moritz, the deliverer of Germany; William, the deliverer of Holland; the great deliverer of England, Cosmo, the father of his country; Henry IV. of France; Peter the Great of Russia, how would the best of them pass such a scrutiny? History takes wider views, and the best tribunal for great political cases is the tribunal which a unbiased future will erect of history. Reasonable and moderate men of all parties felt this in Clyde's case. They could not pronounce him blameless, but they would not abandon him to the lowminded and rancorous pack who would run down and worry him to his death.

"A man may be unfit in some respects. He may have committed indiscretions or worse in his private life, and yet we are to judge of him, of a public official, by what he does in public office and in no other way.

Appeals Against Prejudice.

"I feel a sense of embarrassment and difficulty in discussing the cause of this respondent before a tribunal, so many of its members—I say it with all respect—not prejudiced, but predisposed against his case and against him; some by reason of opinions previously formed upon a partial investigation and consideration of the facts. To such members of this tribunal I say that your bounden duty is to lay aside all previously formed opinions.

"Again, some of you are members of a powerful and imperious political organization that has kept the respondent in public life for years and has placed him where he now is in more than one respect. Differences have arisen between that organization and this respondent. Many of its members believe him to be ungrateful and disloyal. Who is right and who is wrong I know not; whether the allegiance and loyalty demanded by that organization came in conflict with the allegiance and loyalty that he owed to the State I know not; whatever the causes of these differences may be with that organization you are bound to disregard them. He is not on trial for disloyalty; he is not on trial for ingratitude, and you have taken a solemn oath to try him impartially upon the charges here brought against him and nothing else.

Not a Question of Ideals.

"Then there is another class of people who think, as the late learned Chief Justice, he is unfit for public office by mental equipment, personal habits, and political ideals. That by reason of all these things he is utterly unfitted to hold the high and dignified position of Governor of this great State. But he is not on trial for unfitness for office. The people passed upon that.

"All these things that I have referred to are well calculated to predispose you against the respondent, but for none of these things is he on trial. The spirit of fair play should characterize the conduct of every man in public life toward his political adversary. That requires him to play the game according to the rules. That requires a man, a political leader when he has made a mistake in putting a man into public, to smile and bear the weight of his error without wincing, and not even attempt to remove him from office by unlawful means to remedy the evil, but not to repeat the mistake again. And the highest sense of honor that should actuate all high-minded men requires that you men free your minds of all preconceived opinions and personal feelings.

"Nay, more; the solemn oath that you have taken before Him, to whom you yourself must some time appear for judgment, requires you to cast out all prejudice, all ill feeling, all passion, and judge this man upon the law and upon the facts as applied to the law and nothing else.

"In a tribunal like this, composed of the Justices of the highest court of this State for the administration of ordinary civil and criminal justice and of Senators together, a decision made, if not in accord with what the people believe to be right, strikes a deadly blow at the confidence of the people in the administration of their laws.

"Now, without any disloyalty to William Sulzer, I may say that he is a mere incident in these proceedings; that my effort is very largely on behalf of the dignity and honor of the State, and the preservation, if it can be preserved, of the confidence of the people of this State in the administration of the law. I have got beyond the time when political honor and preferment is for me, but I have a deep respect and affection for the State.

"I have a great respect and affection for the highest tribunals of this State, and of the individual members, and I want nothing to happen that will impair the confidence of the people in this tribunal. My interest is that by no decision should any reflection be cast upon the administration of justice, or any new impetus be given to the feeling that at present exists against the administration of justice—stirred up and enlarged upon by demagogues and political leaders of singular ability and disingenuousness.

"With those things in mind, it seemed to me that this is particularly the time and peculiarly the case when the court should not go beyond what is written in the law. The question of fact will always vary in the different cases, but the law itself should be clear and definite, and no loose construction should be given to it to accomplish the overthrow of any department of the Government or the occupant of any department.

Fears Seed of the Recall.

"I say, with this history of impeachments and the law hitherto related, that an extension of the power of impeachment to acts done before taking the office and before becoming a public official will be regarded as reaching out for a victim and making the law fit the case. It will do more than anything ever did in this State to bring about the recall of Judges and judicial decisions, or it will at least cause a reconstruction of our whole judicial system.

"This is not mere idle declamation for the purposes of this case, but it is the result of careful investigations. Those people who think there is no feeling of unrest in regard to the courts, the administration of the law, and of lawyers, are not honest with themselves or are not acquainted with the public condition of affairs. I was charged with investigating this subject nearly a year ago, and the conditions that I found existing I dare not report in full, for fear of increasing that public discontent. Don't blind yourselves. Stop and think of the enormous vote cast last year upon a platform attacking our courts and proclaiming belief in the recall and the recall of judicial decisions.

"So I say that it behooves us that this case shall be decided in such a manner that the people will believe and understand. And the lawyers, too, because many of them share in this feeling I speak of."

Ridicules Coercion Idea.

Mr. Herrick took up Article 7, which charged Mr. Sulzer with using his official influence to affect the vote of lawmakers and their political action. This has reference to the disclosures before the Frawley Investigating Committee of how Mr. Sulzer sought to influence Senator Emerson and Assemblymen Prime and Sweet to vote for his Direct Primary bill.

"There is no evidence of coercion," said Mr. Herrick. "Why, gentlemen, it is almost too ridiculous to talk about. We all know, as practical men, what is being done every day in legislative matters, not only in Albany, but in Washington, from time immemorial. No man who is fit to be an executive, who is interested in procuring legislation in what he believes to be the interests of the people, but what uses more or less of the influence of his office to induce members of the legislative bodies to agree with him.

Cites President's Acts.

"What is being done for the last few months in Washington? Yet would any one say that President Wilson should be impeached because, forsooth, he is holding up political appointments in various States of the Union until he sees what Senators and members of Congress will do with his currency and tariff bills to carry out the pledges of the party platform?

"Whoever thought of impeaching the wielder of the 'Big Stick' for his influence he used over members of Congress when he brought the Senate of the United States to its feet and humiliated the House of Representatives by the exercise of executive power and influences? Go back to the history of this State and to the history of the United States for the last fifty years, and where is the executive that has not attempted, not by bribery, gentle coercion, if you please, to bring about the enactment of those measures that he believed he was pledged to carry out and that he believed his party platform obligated him to carry into effect and enforce?

"To say that there was bribery, coersion, attempted in either of these cases is the height of absurdity. I refuse to discuss it longer.

"The next article is equally absurd; the Stock Exchange bills. I think the late learned Chief Justice did not discuss those. He was evidently ashamed to do it. The ridiculous proposition that a man who was the owner of stocks, who has not sold them short, but is the owner of them, endeavored by these bills to affect the stocks in his hands.

"I am amazed at the Managers, that they ever had the audacity to place them before the Court as an article of impeachment by which a Governor of this great State should be removed from office and disqualified. Why, to use the language of a late Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals, the evidence to support these charges that I have so far reviewed is insufficient to 'hang a yellow dog.'"

Personal Gifts of Money.

Regarding the campaign fund charges Mr. Herrick said the contributions that he had failed to report had been given to him for personal purposes, involving no obligation to report them.

"Public men in the past have not been above receiving assistance from wealthy friends," said Mr. Herrick. "The Boston merchants kept Webster in public life. Jefferson received gifts. Charles James Fox was kept in public life by gifts. McKinley's debts were paid off that he might become a candidate for the Presidency.

"Many of these contributions were evidently intended to relieve him from financial embarrassment, not only during the campaign, but during the time when he should come into the performance of the duties of this great office with its wholly inadequate salary. Using money so given to him for his own purposes and uses was not a betrayal of any cause or any principle.

"Certainly no fault can be found with him because instead of using such money to buy votes with, he used it to buy stocks, or for any other purpose that would be beneficial to him. The purpose for which the money was given, in the language of Justice Conlan, was to 'Buy a hat and a new suit of clothes.'

"I am not going to argue that much of this money was not used for the purchase of stocks. There is no crime in that unless he stole this money. Legally, he had a right to use it to buy stocks. Not ethically, not in good taste, but as a matter of law.

Brings in Mrs. Sulzer.

"That brings me to the testimony of Mr. Ryan. A little bit of Mr. Ryan's evidence throws a flood of light upon this case and explains many things. We have not sought to bring the wife of the respondent into this case. It has been our effort to keep her out. Her name was first brought in, so far as the evidence appears, on the order that was given to Josephthal, signed by the defendant, for Mrs. Sulzer. Why? Because she had said in the first instance when they were in camp in Gettysburg, that her husband had a large loan upon stocks that belonged to her. He stopped her talking. He would not talk business with a woman. He saw the Governor and the Governor told him of this loan upon stocks that belonged to his wife. So when he came to give the order for the stocks, after the story that he had told to Josephthal, there was nothing else for him to do but to sign it as the agent for his wife.

"I said that there was a little of Mr. Ryan's testimony that throws a flood of light upon this case, and some things that may seem to be mysterious to you. In speaking of the interview that he had with Gov. Sulzer he quoted the Governor as saying that he did not want to drag his wife into the situation and put her upon the stand. This illuminates the whole situation.

"Imagine yourself in his place. There are some things that a decent, manly man cannot do to save himself; some things that a man of even low ethical standards cannot do to shield himself; some sacrifices of others that he cannot allow to be made even at the risk of losing high position and being forever disqualified for political preferment and honors. Which would you do, run the risk of losing an empty honor of being Governor, empty if held with dishonor, or lose the respect of every decent and honorable man in the whole United States by saving yourself at the expense of the honor and integrity of the one you are bound to love and protect."

In closing, he said that during more than twenty years of public service there had never been a breath of suspicion against the honesty of William Sulzer.

"But now," he exclaimed, "he stands charged with stealing money, with plundering his friends, with seeking contributions for one purpose and using them for another, and committing perjury to conceal the fact.

"These things, it is said, bring shame and disgrace upon the State. They do. The fact that a great party nominated and the people elected to be Governor a man of the low ethical standards of this respondent must be conceded to be a shame and a disgrace to the State of New York, but it is not for those things that you are to remove him from office.

"When these things became known those people who had the good name of the State and its fame at heart would have withheld them for the honor and dignity of the State instead of bringing them forth for the purpose of removing from their path the man who seems to have been an obstacle in doing things that were a great deal worse than anything that is charged up against the Governor.

Can't Harm Honest People.

"There is no object in removing this man. The term is short. The people can throw him out soon. The Legislature is adverse to him. He can do no harm except to investigate wrongdoing, stop graft and corruption. He can do no harm to the right-thinking, well-meaning people of the State. Why then bring these impeachment proceedings except to stop and halt the investigations which Mr. Hennessy says are under way—"

At this point a rap from Presiding Judge Cullen's gavel broke in on Mr. Herrick's address. Mr. Sulzer's counsel was reminded that Mr. Hennessy had been ruled out as a witness, and enjoined him not to make any reference to Mr. Sulzer's chief inquisitor and political factotum. Mr. Herrick was almost at the end of his argument, anyhow, and continued in another minute, which he devoted to pleading for a verdict free from partisan bias.

BRACKETT'S CLOSING SPEECH.

Likens Sulzer to Pharisee in Pointing to Stilwell's Crimes.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 10.—The last word by counsel was said in the impeachment trial by ex-Senator Edgar Truman Brackett of Saratoga, who began his closing argument for the Managers of Impeachment at 2:55 in the afternoon and ended it at 4:45 o'clock.

Mr. Brackett's speech was full of scathing invective and ringing denunciation, delivered with gestures as vigorous and emphatic as the words themselves. He first expressed his own pride and gratification in being able to participate in the present high proceedings.

"No one even slightly acquainted with the history of this greatest of the States and of the names that make that history a glorious one," said he, "can avoid a prideful satisfaction that in the performance of duty it is given to him to plead in behalf of her good name. It is with that pride and that satisfaction that the Managers of the Impeachment come before you in this final stage of this historic trial to press upon you that you cast out from her service one who has forgotten her honor and has been faithless to the high trust she reposed in him."

Warns Against Public Clamor.

Speaking to the Senate members of the High Court, he cautioned them not to be influenced by public clamor:

"From the beginning of the impeachment proceedings brought against William Sulzer, nay from the time that his crimes were first whispered around these halls, on behalf of the defendant there has been a persistent and studied attempt to terrorize the members of this court, and every person associated with this prosecution. Every means known to the demagogue has been attempted to accomplish it. The press, a few of its members venal, many of them thoughtless of the grave situation presented, have daily paraded much hopelessly bad law and have direfully threatened those who were so singular as to say that they doubted the wisdom of allowing a criminal to remain in the Executive chair.

"To all those who have doubts as to whether justice would here dominate," he said, "who have sought to discredit in advance the patient fairness by which every right of the defendant has been here conserved, to all right reverends and wrong reverends everywhere professing to find here, not the solemn performance of a duty laid on you by the law but only an opportunity to strike a political enemy, I send greeting, inviting them to come and see how, under the strictest forms of law, divesting themselves of every unworthy motive or thought, the representatives of a free people come together and give judgment."

Calls Sulzer's Answer a Lie.

Referring to Mr. Sulzer's campaign collections and his affidavit, Mr. Brackett said:

"The answer he makes is typical of the man. He comes here admitting the mere formal facts that he was Governor and was a candidate for Governor and did file a statement. And thereupon he solemnly, in the face of all the people of the State, filed with this great court an answer which is itself an infamous lie when he says that he denies each and every one of the facts set up in Article I."

Taking up Mr. Sulzer's sworn statement that he had received $5,460 and expended $7,724 in his campaign, Mr. Brackett said:

"Thereby he meant to have the people of the State believe that he had been elected by the contributions of sixty-eight small contributors, who altogether had given him less than $100 apiece as an average. And the thought that was in his little mind was that the public would believe that the great common people were the ones who were his friends and the only ones who had contributed anything to his election. All of the great interests that cluster around Broad and Wall Streets; all of the interests that might come here and want legislation; all of these interested in politics were carefully left off the statement, and it was only the little men, contributing, as I say, less than $100 apiece, that had risen in their might and made William Sulzer the Governor of the State. It was only they who had contributed, as he certifies to the Secretary of State."

Ryan and Schiff Money.

Mr. Brackett then enumerated some of the checks that had been suppressed.

"Take the contribution of Mr. Ryan," said he. "Can any rational man think for a single minute that when William Sulzer affixed his signature to the statement that he had received during the campaign $5,460, that there was not running in his mind at the very instant that he did it 'and I have got $10,000 of Thomas F. Ryan's money in my pocket this minute as clear gain'?

"What about the $2,500 of Mr. Schiff's. Certainly it never was a personal contribution to William Sulzer. Then what on earth had it doing in the Sarecky account?

"Let us get away from the sham and the pretense that the Schiff check was anything else than a contribution made for campaign purposes. Do you think when he came to make his false certificate that he, the Apostle of the Plain People, did not know that there was the $2,500 check of Jacob H. Schiff by which he was fully the gainer? So the certificate was false. When he put his name to the affidavit and swore to it he knew to a lie and he knew he was swearing to a lie, and whether or not he was guilty of legal perjury that would justly land him in the State's prison, he was guilty of the moral perjury, he was guilty of all the blackness of intention, of all the guilty heart that he would or could have been had he sworn as required by the statute, and he believed he was.

Set Court to Laughing.

"But the first of January comes, and from that moment he is a converted man. Like Saul of Tarsus on his way to Damascus, there came a light. He became a consecrated man and devoted himself thenceforth to the service of God and humanity in the People's House.

"Oh, Saul! Oh, Saul! Persecutor of the Saints, but the greatest of the Apostles! What foolishness has been attempted through the years because of that sudden conversion of yours on the way to Damascus!

"Saul saw a light, but he respected it. He repented of his sins. He did not go around trying to suborn perjury. When he got together the few Christians in the upper chamber, wherever he could get them, to preach the Word, after his conversion, he did not whisper to one of them that if he was sworn he hoped he would be easy on him. Before he opened the meeting with prayer, he didn't call one of them aside and see if he could send word to tamper with the court that was going to try him.

"Can you imagine Paul telephoning to Gamaliel that he was the same old Saul? And 'can't you make it more than $7,500?'"

A round of laughter burst from court and galleries alike and the solemn Court of Appeals Judges in their sombre robes put their hands before their faces and shook with laughter.

Mr. Brackett pleaded with the court not to allow the election law to be made a joke.

"If you hold this man guiltless of crime in connection with this law," he cried, "at least members of the Senate have the decency to introduce a bill to repeal it, and have it done quickly and thoroughly."

He then took up Article 4, charging Mr. Sulzer with practicing deceit and fraud in order to keep Sarecky, Colwell, Fuller, and all other witnesses from testifying before the Frawley Committee. The mere malicious intent, he held, and not the consummation of those efforts, was sufficient to bring the offender under the statute defining the crime.

When Mr. Brackett brought in the testimony of Henry Morgenthau and Duncan W. Peck, of how Mr. Sulzer had said "it's easy on me" and treat the affair between us as a personal matter," he exclaimed:

"Do criminals find it necessary to solicit witnesses to tell the truth? Is it not presumed that they will do so? What was there in the high character of Mr. Morgenthau that led the defendant to believe that he would testify to anything other than the truth? Did he think that, unless thus solicited, the witness would swear to a lie? It is unthinkable. And mark that what he wanted done was something that Mr. Dougherty said that they would just hold the man as a witness.

These arrests were made after Commissioner Waldo had tried scheme after scheme for ending the bomb explosions, the steady and uninterrupted succession of which threatened to remain a blot upon his administration. Detectives who ventured near the problem and failed were reduced. Patrolmen who might have made arrests and did not were penalized in every way, and for several months the word had gone out that the Commissioner wanted the bomb men.

Every energy of Capt. Tunney and Capt. Jones of the Second and Fifth Inspection Districts was devoted to this one field, and it was their men who picked up the thread in New Jersey. How many more arrests will be made before the thing is finished, the Deputy Commissioner would not say last night, but it was learned from him that arrests were being made last evening up in Troy, N. Y., and that the whole story had yet to be told.

Mr. Dougherty says that "Smithy" gave the names of more than forty places where he had exploded dynamite bombs and that he had named more than forty other places attended to by other men. He says, too, that "Burk" was able to give from memory the names of as many victims and to give correctly the addresses and the approximate dates when the explosions occurred. Remembered explosions in Seventh Avenue, in Ellizabeth Street, in Prince Street, in the upper East Side, in Chrystie Street—all these figure in the ninety typewritten pages.

Science in Bomb Threats.

According to the "Burk" story, the best store of dynamite came from upState, where he himself had found it left accidentally by some railroad workmen. He had brought it to town and turned it over to "Scoffone." "Scoffone," it seems, knew just how to estimate the strength of a bomb and just how many sticks were needed to intimidate a man into paying on the next demand.

He also knew how to wrap the sticks in silk so as to give the "lighter" more time to get away. And they all learned that, whereas Sicilians and Neapolitans were apt to give money quickly at the first hint of a blackmail threat, the Calabrians were far less tractable, and were only too apt to run to the police with the letter. One time a prosperous grocer had stationed his three brothers on guard over his premises, and the "lighters" had to wait for three weeks before the cautious "lighthouse" had seen fit to give the signal.

In still another case, "Smithy" said he had blown up the wrong store by a mistake in the signal of the lame man, and he told of one third-floor job where after he had waited outside in vain for any sound of an explosion he had gone up to investigate, only to find the dynamite broken and scattered all over the room. He never had been able to conceive an explanation for that, and the memory of it frightened him.

"Burk," Mr. Dougherty says, got his name from an up-State farmer who adopted him when he came out of an orphan asylum. He had lived for a while on that farm, but even as a youth had been caught in a burglary and, under suspended sentence, had come to New York to start life over again.

Six Others Arrested in Raid—False Notes on New York Bank.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 10.—A search of six months by Government agents for a gang of counterfeiters, ended in this city to-night when United States Marshal Irving and two Government detectives assisted by several of the local police, raided the cellar of a house at Federal and Eighth Streets and arrested Charles Ash, his wife, Winona Ash, Edward Barry and his wife, Annie Barry, Paul A. Florian, and Carle Van Natton, the latter a resident of Brooklyn. Stephant Pasquali, an Italian, took a quantity of acid and died in fifteen minutes. He had long been sought by the Federal authorities.

The police found a complete outfit for making counterfeit notes. Sixty thousand dollars worth of five dollar notes on the Irving National Bank of New York, finished on one side only, were found in the room.

knew by reputation. Two of the men arrested were Anthony Sadaytis, known also as "Joseph Polaski" and "Burk," and Rocco Piccielli, called by his companions "Zump" or "Zuppo" because he walks with a limp. From these, too, confessions were obtained, and they show "Burk" and "Smithy" as the lighters, while the lame man was the "lighthouse." "Smithy" is a German and "Burk" is a Pole. "Smithy" says they had never been able to get more than one Italian with enough nerve to do the actual lighting of the bombs and that he had been murdered.

Only $15 for a $150 Bomb.

The secret of the wholesale capture, as Mr. Dougherty read it last night, was the bitterness which "Smith" felt against the tyrannical and grasping "Scoffone"—accused as guardian of the dynamite. And that bitterness he traced to the cheating in the division of the reward for a certain "job." That job was the Klee loft explosion in Lafayette Street. "Smithy" says he was to have received $40 for that piece of work and that he and the two that helped him received only $15 apiece. His resentment flared up when he heard that the price for the job had been $150.

Getting some dynamite, then, on his own initiative, he took it to the grocery store of "Scoffone"—the custodian of the dynamite—at 187 Chrystie Street, and had the pleasure of wrecking it without being caught. It was his revenge, and when at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, Mr. Dougherty, Inspector Faurot, Assistant District Attorney Manley, and several detectives walked into the cell tier of the Hackensack Jail with the man called "Scoffone," "Smithy" shrieked with triumph from his cell.

"And do you know who blew up that store of yours?" he yelled through the bars. "Well, I did it!"

And the outbreak was followed by a torrent of profanity. "Scoffone" trembled in the grip of the detectives.

"Yes," he said slowly, "and you killed my little girl."

For the little five-year-old Leventino girl died from the shock of that explosion.

"You killed my little girl," the man repeated, and then he flung himself savagely at the cell. It was some time before they could control him, and before they could drag him from the bars he reached through and pointed to his enemy's forehead.

"When I get out," he said, "I'll put a bullet right there."

Even "Smithy" went white, but, after a minute he laughed, and with a taunting gesture of derision, he predicted that it would be a long, long time before "Scoffone" was free to carry out his threat.

Secret Service Men Jolt.

The seventh arrest made late last evening was that of Giuseppe Fiorentino, a poolroom proprietor of 529 Broome Street. He had been arrested twice before, but discharged each time. The eighth was that of Angelo Massiero of 198 Mott Street. He had two revolvers in his pockets when he was taken into custody. In both cases, Capt. Henry and other detectives of the Secret Service joined with Mr. Dougherty's men, and in both cases the men are charged with having passed counterfeit one-dollar, two-dollar and five-dollar bills.

The ninth arrest was that of an Elizabeth Street cafe proprietor, who was picked up by Detective Inglisa. There is no accusation against him, and Mr. Dougherty said that they would just hold the man as a witness.

These arrests were made after Commissioner Waldo had tried scheme after scheme for ending the bomb explosions, the steady and uninterrupted succession of which threatened to remain a blot upon his administration. Detectives who ventured near the problem and failed were reduced. Patrolmen who might have made arrests and did not were penalized in every way, and for several months the word had gone out that the Commissioner wanted the bomb men.

might take in regard to the question of postponing the election scheduled for Oct. 26.

Officials of the Department of War still are unable to account for the action taken by the Federal commanders in ordering the evacuation of Torreon by the Government troops who garrisoned it.

A correction of the original official dispatch in regard to the loss of Torreon by the Government asserts that Gen. Ignacio Bravo had no part in the evacuation of the city. It is explained that he had been retired from active service when the order to the Federal troops to march out of the port was issued. Gen. Bravo, therefore, will not be tried by court-martial, as was intended when the statement that he had participated in the abandonment of the city was received.

Flying Column for Torreon.

Additional Government forces were entrained last night to be hurried toward Torreon and to join the big military movement for the recapture of that city. The new detachment included the Fifth Battalion of Infantry and other commands. It is thought that the Huerta regulars now engaged in the dash to the north total 13,000 troops of all arms. The plan is that they shall be rushed in a compact column against Torreon.

Owing to illness, Gen. Villar, who was designated yesterday to command the flying column that has been mobilized to retake Torreon, will not be able to perform that duty. He has intrusted the command to Gen. José Refugio Velasco, Governor of the State of Mexico. Gen. Velasco will be replaced in his Gubernatorial post by Gen. Felipe Mier.

Details of the capture of Torreon by the insurgents still are lacking. It is rumored that Gen. Alvirez, the Federal commander, who was put to death with his staff by the rebels, was defeated at Aviles instead of Laloma. He was not sent to Durango, it is said, but made a sally against the Constitutionalists.

ATHLETICS AGAIN; STOP GIANT RALLY

and snapped the ball to Barry in time to force Herzog at second. Fletcher jammed a hot grounder at Bender. The Indian gathered it and turned quickly, making a swift, perilously wide throw to Barry. Here's where the modest, reliable short stop saved the Indian's scalp. With his toe tucked into the bag, Barry stretched out as far as his arms could reach and the ball smacked full against his bare hand. Quickly his glove covered the ball and it stuck, Doyle being forced at second. If Barry had missed that throw, it is hardly possible that a tie score could have been averted, and the game might have been won by the Giants. Burns came up next and cudgeled a two bagger to left, scoring Doyle. Then came Shafer's whistling three bagger, which sent Burns home.

The game stopped. Harry Davis rushed out to whisper words of encouragement to the fast fading Redman. Collins and Barry patted him on the back and delayed the game. They were stalling for time, to give Bender a chance to pull himself together. Ira Thomas of the Mack strategy board, ran out where Reggie Brown was warming up and told him to be ready to go into the game. Bender saw this and knew what it meant. He was being knocked out of the box in a world's series game. No, his great pitching career musn't end that way, after all these years of glory and fame. Bender begged Harry Davis to let him stay in a while longer.

Tilly Shafer took a big lead down the third base line, the Athletic infield came in and set for the batter. And now Red Murray, if there ever was a time when you should deliver a hit, this is it. Slug it, chop it, murder it, but for goodness sake, whale it somewhere out of reach of those crouching, waiting Mackian infielders. Murray hit the ball and Shafer started for the plate. A nasty, bouncing grounder spurted at Eddie Collins. Just as easily as he would stoop over to pluck a buttercup, Collins reached for the ball, whirled about and shot it at Stuffy McInnis and the Giants were beaten.

The New York outlook isn't bright. The count is three to one against them now, but McGraw isn't downhearted. Not at all. He never is. Last year the Red Sox of Boston had them in the very same hole, but the Giants recuperated and caught up with them, even if they were crushed in the final game. He still has Matty to shoot back at them at the Polo Grounds to-morrow. And with Matty in there pitching, the team will play as they never play behind other pitchers. There's still hope.

The Noisiest Game.

Shibe Park was jammed to capacity when the band stopped playing and Connie Mack sprung a big surprise on McGraw by sending Bender out to warm up. Connie wanted to show the home folks just how the big Indian beat the Giants in New York on Tuesday. Before 2 o'clock all the streets leading to the park were crowded with those who had no chance at all of getting in, but hung around to hear the noise. It was the noisiest game of the series here, for the Athletics got such a big lead early in the game that victory looked certain as the visits of the rent collector.

Speculators reaped a harvest along Broad Street this morning, and tickets brought as high as $15 each. The 4,000 bleacher seats which went on sale at 8 each at 11:30 o'clock were all gone in a short time. The line for the $1 ticket windows formed early, and thousands went away in angry disappointment because Shibe Park wasn't as big as the Coliseum at Rome.

There was a good deal of commotion on Lehigh Avenue about 1:30 o'clock when "Germany" Schaefer of the Washington Club was arrested for speculating. "Germany" had two extra tickets, and was looking for somebody to sell them to at the regular price, $2. He did not see any familiar faces so he offered them to a deserving looking citizen. A policeman saw him in the act of turning over the tickets, and arrested him. The patrol wagon came and as the ball player started for the station house, the crowd guyed him unmercifully.

"Say, 'Germany,' they can't arrest you for that," some one shouted.

"I told them that, but they wouldn't believe me," answered Schaefer.

At the police station Schaefer explained the situation and was released. The officer on the desk first listened to his tale of woe and then said: "How do we know you're 'Germany' Schaefer?"

"Listen," said the comedian, "and I'll tell you a funny story. I'll make you laugh, and then you'll know."

Schaefer told an old story, but it was new in Philly, and they let him go out to the game.

One of the best jobs in Philadelphia during a world's series is that of a policeman. The entire force sit about the outfield on soap boxes, just inside the fence, and all they have to do is watch the game. Pretty soft. They don't even have to go into the crowd to recover the balls which are knocked foul, as they do in New York. Here the people are so honest that every ball is thrown back.

The sun hasn't peeked through the clouds once during the series. It tried hard to yesterday and after shining just a little bit before the game, disappeared again as the Mackmen started to leather the ball. The sun wants to see the Giants win, but every time it gets ready to look down on the fray Baker or Collins is at the bat, so it draws itself into seclusion again.

Mack has used the same identical team in every game, changing only the batteries. McGraw has been forced to change his crippled team every day and when the national argument opened to-day, Snodgrass and Merkle were both in the line-up but limping badly. Snodgrass lasted only three innings, for he hurt his injured leg again in trying to run to first. Fred Merkle would never have been able to make a home run unless his terrific drive to left in the seventh inning had bounded into the bleachers. As it was, it took him two minutes overtime to limp around the bases.

Finding Mr. Demaree No Puzzle.

The only consolation in yesterday's defeat was that neither Baker nor Collins had a hand in the daily destruction of the Giant pitchers. Demaree got his first taste of Philadelphia hospitality in the opening verse, when, with one down, Rube Oldring slapped a perfectly healthy three-base drive to right field. Then the artist-pitcher began to wonder what he would draw in his next cartoon. As a pitcher against the Athletics, he showed that he was a fine cartooner.

Collins pushed a grounder at Merkle, and the disabled Toledo Blade soaked the ball home and McLean decorated Oldring with the ball as he slid into the plate on his manly chest. Umpire Egan favored with the loud remark, "You'r-r-e out." Rube didn't believe it, but that didn't matter.

The Giants' first opportunity to display any activity was in the second, when, with two out, Bender hit Murray on the wrist with the ball and gave him a life. Larry McLean jammed a hit to centre, but Merkle ended the proceedings by lifting a foul to McInnis.

The Athletics' first unit was duly authorized in the second after Merkle had missed an opportunity to make an out when he muffed Barry's foul fly. Merkle wasn't so much to blame, considering his injured leg. Ordinarily the catch would have been easy for him. McInnis opened this round with a safe poke to centre. The ball fell between the other cripple, Snodgrass, and Doyle and Murray in a spot which none of the three could quite reach. Strunk sacrificed, and then Barry fouled to Merkle, who dropped the ball over in front of the right field stand. It was a life for Barry, and he celebrated his luck by smashing a two-bagger to left, which scored McInnis. Demaree showed good sense and walked Schang, for Bender was an easy out on a balloon to Burns.

Demaree was further convinced that the Athletics could hit on Fridays as on other days, in the fourth, when they jarred him rudely from the pastime. After McInnis had been tossed out at first, Strunk got an infield hit by his rapid traveling, and went to third on Barry's slam to left. Barry went to second when the ball was thrown to third. Demaree thought that he wouldn't pass Schang this time, and he has been sorry for that thought ever since. "Li Hung" ripped a single to centre, scoring Strunk and Barry. He went to third on McLean's passed ball.

Bender then laid a grounder along the carpet in front of first. Crippled Merkle made a game attempt to scoop it, but overran the ball and got an error for his trouble. Schang ran home on the play. After Murphy lifted a fly at Doyle, Oldring got another hit. Collins almost caught the New Yorks napping when he spilled a bunt in front of the plate, but the ball was right close to McLean's large shoe, and Larry threw him out at first. That was the end of Demaree.

Oldring's Dazzling Play.

Dazzling work by the Athletics put a damper on an imposing Giant opportunity in the first half of the fifth. Murray sojourned at first because of Bender's generosity with passes, and McLean got his second hit. Up to that time Larry was the only Giant who could solve the Indian's service. McLean's lumbering slowness on the bases again stared McGraw in the face, and he sent Claude Cooper in as a pinch runner. After Bender had fanned Merkle, Harold McCormick, who pinch hits more or less when he feels in the mood, was sent in to bat for the banished Demaree.

To McCormick's credit it ought to be mentioned that he was just boldly grand larcenied out of a fine three-base drive. It happened this way. Harold poked it so that the ball shot to left field on a line. Oldring galloped in to greet it, but it didn't seem as if there was a chance of the two moving bodies meeting on friendly terms. Rube, being a persistent sort of a person, kept right on traveling, and when the ball was about to nestle on the sward he plucked it in a way which was a great surprise to the ball, as well as a stunning shock to Mr. McCormick. Harold thinks there ought to be a law against that sort of thing. Cooper then tried to steal second, but Schang made a beautiful throw to Collins and the Texas sprinter was very much out.

Marquard's old friend Frank Baker was the first man to face him in the fifth inning. Rube fed the ball on the outside of the plate as far from Baker's bat as the rules allow. Rube struck out the famous author of the home run, which showed that Rube is smarter than many people supposed. Rube then tossed McInnis out at first.

With two out, trouble began to brew for Marquard. Strunk walked and Barry lammed another two-base drive to left field, sending Strunk around to third. Up to the bat ambled Schang, ready to do the right thing in a pinch.

The young catcher banged out another single to centre which lured Strunk and Barry across the plate. That was four runs Li Hung was responsible for. This done, Bender was fired out by Marquard.

The Indian's first sign of weakness came in the seventh when Burns got an infield hit. Shafer skied to Collins and Murray singled to left. Burns and Murray manipulated a double steal. After Wilson fanned, Merkle hammered a long hit to left, which bounded into the frenzied folk in the bleachers, and Burns and Murray trotted home ahead of the limping first baseman.

The assault on Bender continued in the eighth. It looked like the end of the fast-weakening Indian. The Athletics saw the game slipping out of their grasp, and rose heroically to the seriousness of the situation, and saved the day just when defeat was about to rest upon them. Murray failed to produce a hit in the pinch, and the Giants' only chance was ended.

To-day's game was the last in which the players participated in the receipts. The players' share of the four games is $135,163.80. The winners will receive 60 per cent. of this and the losers 40 per cent. Twenty-five players on each club are eligible to play in the series, and each player on the winning club will receive $3,244 and the players on the losing team $2,162 each. The players' share this year is $11,925 less than last year. This is because of the limited seating capacity of Shibe Park.

HOW GIANTS FELL INNING BY INNING

Detailed Story of the Athletics' Third Victory in the World's Series.

NEW YORK RALLIED IN VAIN

Bender Came Back Strong in the Last Frame and Beat Back McGraw Batters.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Another capacity crowd was on hand at Shibe Park and on the housetops overlooking the field when the Giants and Athletics came together to-day in the fourth game of the world's series. It was the last day in which the players figured in the gate receipts and the sight of another big gathering was a joyous one for all concerned. Changes in the outfield and in the National Commission rule against standees had cut several thousand dollars from the players' melon, but all were satisfied that they had been fortunate in drawing so well under poor weather conditions.

There was no doubt about McGraw's pitching selection as he had broken from his usual custom Thursday night and proclaimed that Demaree would undoubtedly get the call. Mobile Al was the only one warming up near the New York bench for some time before the game was called. In front of the Philadelphia bench Shawkey, Brown, and Bender, warmed up, but no one figured on the Indian. When the announcement was made that Bender would go in again, it caused as much surprise as when Bush was named for the game at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Bender usually likes a four-day rest and it was thought that he was being groomed for the Saturday battle against Mathewson in New York. He told Mack he would like to go in, showed Lieut. Harry Davis and Danny Murphy that he was fit, and Mack nodded his approval.

For the fourth successive day Mack sent the same team of regulars to the field. McGraw had Snodgrass working in the outfield during the preliminary practice, and at game time he decided on a shift. Herzog, who had failed to get a hit in the first three games, was benched, Shafer was brought in from centre field to play third, and Snodgrass went out to the middle garden. It was the first time McGraw had all his regular infield and outfield in position since the series began.

First Inning.

Bender got a great reception as he strolled slowly to the box, and he retired the Giants before the fans were fully settled for the game. Snodgrass popped an easy fly for Baker, Doyle gave Strunk an easy chance in centre field and Fletcher hit the first pitched ball on fast bounds to Barry for an easy out at first.

The third pitched ball by Demaree had the New York pitcher in trouble. Murphy filed to Snodgrass on the second ball and Rube Oldring, following his custom of the past three days, got the first hit of the game. He cracked the first ball pitched to him to the right field fence for three bases, but was out at the plate a minute later when Collins hit to Merkle. It was a hard-hit ball and Merkle made a pretty stop. Before throwing a ball to Baker Demaree tried to catch Collins napping and finally threw to first as Eddie set sail for second. Collins went down fast and slid into the base as Merkle's throw arrived. Baker popped the first ball and Herzog grabbed the foul near the Athletics' bench.

Second Inning.

Burns lofted gently to Murphy and Shafer fanned, getting a full swing on each strike. Murray was hit on the arm and the hit-and-run play was successfully worked. Murray taking third on McLean's single to right centre. Merkle gave McInnis a chance to make a pretty catch of his foul near the New York bench.

McInnis opened with a drive to centre which Snodgrass almost got after a long run. Strunk's sacrifice, Demaree to Merkle, sent Stuffy to second. Barry, after his pop foul had been muffed by Merkle, showed his appreciation by doubling to the extreme left field corner, and McInnis trotted home with Philadelphia's first run. Schang walked, and Bender, who was warmly welcomed by the fans, hit an easy fly to Burns. Snodgrass did not have to move for Eddie Murphy's loft.

Third Inning.

Demaree hit the first pitched ball to Murphy, Snodgrass bunted his first offer, and Bender's throw beat the limping Snodgrass to first. That was enough for McGraw, and he told Snodgrass to stay on the bench. Herzog going to third and Shafer to centre field after Doyle had filed to Strunk.

Oldring grounded weakly to Demaree and was out at first. Burns ran to the foul line and pulled in Collins's long fly, and Baker was easy again with a bounder to Doyle.

Fourth Inning.

Umpire Egan and Fletcher had an argument on a called strike in the New York half, and Egan had to warn the New Yorker. Fletcher finally flied to short right field, Collins making the catch. Burns popped up the first ball to Baker, and Shafer again struck out.

Then the usually quiet section of the Mackian artillery opened fire on Demaree. McInnis was easy with a grounder to Doyle, but Strunk hit so fast to third that Herzog could only block the ball as he fell. Barry lined solidly to left centre for his second hit, and Strunk beat Shafer's peg to third, Barry taking second on the throw-in. Schang chased the pair home with a stinging drive just out of Doyle's reach, and went to second on Shafer's throw-in. A short passed ball put Schang on third, and he counted on Bender's slow roller, which got away from Merkle. After Murphy flied to Doyle, Oldring sent the Indian to second with a single to centre, but McLean threw out Collins on his short bunt.

Fifth Inning.

A fine peg by Schang and a marvelous catch by Oldring pulled Bender out of trouble in the fifth. He walked Murray on four pitched balls and Jack hurried to third on McLean's single, which bounded off Collins's foot. Cooper was sent in to run for McLean. Merkle fanned for the first out and McCormick was sent in to bat for Demaree. He lined hard and fast to left field, but Oldring came in at top speed, reached down and grabbed the ball off the grass tops. If the ball had got away from Rube it would have cost two runs besides putting another run close to the plate. With two down McGraw signaled Cooper to steal and Schang nailed him by a great throw to second.

Marquard was on the firing line for the Giants in the fifth, with Wilson behind the bat. Rube made a glorious start by fanning Frank Baker and tossing out McInnis after grabbing Stuffy's hot drive with his gloved hand. Then he wabbled and walked Strunk on four pitched balls. Barry was again the man of the hour, and his double to left field put Strunk on third, Burns missing a catch after a great try. Schang found the same situation confronting him as in the pervious inning, and he singled to the same spot, scoring Strunk and Barry. Bender hit the first ball back at Marquard, and Rube got the Indian at first.

Sixth Inning.

The Giants were tamed again very quickly. Herzog hopped an easy one at Barry and was out at first. Doyle fanned, and showed his disgust by throwing his bat away. Fletcher gave Strunk an easy chance in centre.

The Giants had a kick with Umpire Egan while Oldring was batting in the sixth, after Doyle had tossed Murphy out. Marquard pitched one over the plate when Oldring was out of the box and insisted that it be called a strike. Doyle and some of the other Giants joined in the protest, but Egan waved them aside. Oldring finally fanned and Wilson threw him out at first. Collins popped to Fletcher.

Seventh Inning.

Bender's first trouble broke out in the seventh, after he had held the enemy to two hits in six frames. Burns got a hit on a slow roller, which Barry could not field, and went to third on Murray's solid slam over Baker's head after Shafer had popped to Collins. As Wilson struck out, Burns and Murray worked the double steal and both rode home on Fred Merkle's clout into the left-field bleachers for a home run. The ball hit in front of the stand and went into the crowd on one bound over the low fence. Marquard went after the first ball, and his slow roller to Bender ended the inning. McGraw had sent Fromme out to warm up, but there was no reason to change, as the bases were empty when Marquard's turn at bat arrived.

The Athletics could not fathom Rube's slants in the seventh and went out quickly. Baker hit a high fly for his Maryland neighbor, Herzog, and McInnis went out to the same player, Herzog getting the ball near the Athletics' bench. Strunk grounded to Doyle for the third out.

Eighth Inning.

The Giants resumed their attack on Bender where they had left off in the previous inning, Herzog hitting the first ball for his first hit of the series. This brought orders for Brown and Shawkey to warm up. On a hit-and-run play Doyle met the ball squarely, but Collins made a pretty stop and tossed the ball to Barry for a force play on Herzog. Fletcher hit the ball just as hard and Bender just had time to block it. He threw badly to Barry, but the latter made a fine catch and tagged second, forcing Doyle. This catch undoubtedly saved the ball game as well as the Indian. Burns doubled along the left field line and Fletcher scored from first. The first ball that Bender pitched to Shafer was cracked out to the right field wall for three bases and Burns rode home. From the Athletics' dugout Ira Thomas ran to left field to look for Brown and Shawkey, while Dan Murphy walked to the centre of the diamond to confer with Bender and the Philadelphia infielders. The crisis was at hand and all realized it. The tying run was almost at the plate, but Murray hit a first ball to Collins for an out at first and the inning was over. That catch by Jack Barry had saved the day.

In the Athletics' half Marquard again traveled like a champion. Barry made a bid for his fourth hit, but Murray got the ball in deep right field. Schang drew his second pass. Bender got a big hand from the crowd and he filed to Murray for the second out. Eddie Murphy ended the inning with a grounder to Doyle, who touched second, forcing Schang.

Ninth Inning.

Manager McGraw sent up two pinch hitters in the ninth, but Bender had settled and nothing like a rally developed. Crandall, who batted for Wilson, hit to Collins and got the usual treatment. Merkle popped an easy fly for Eddie Murphy and Grant, who batted for Marquard, went out on a pop foul to Schang after he had Bender in a hole with three balls and two strikes against him. The Athletic players held a jollification meeting around Schang after the final out, though the catch was not a difficult one. This game was the first of the series that did not go nine full innings.

230 PITCHED BALLS.

Chief Bender Makes 115 Deliveries —Giant Men Hurl the Same Number.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Pitching records of to-day's game at Shibe Park between the Giants and the Athletics show that less energy was expended by the pitchers than in the two previous games. Chief Bender went through the nine innings with 115 pitches, averaging slightly less than thirteen pitches in each inning, while Demaree and Marquard had to pitch 115 balls in the eight innings that the Athletics spent at the plate. Demaree tossed over sixty-two in his four innings' of service, about sixteen pitches per inning, while Marquard got by with fifty-three pitches in four innings, or thirteen per inning.

Sixteen batsmen required only one pitched ball to finish their time at bat, but only three of the sixteen hit safely. The lucky ones were Oldring and Shafer with triples, and Herzog with a single—his first hit of the series. The other thirteen hit into fielders' hands for outs.

Collins had the 3-2 count in the third inning and Baker had the same in the fifth, but neither of the noted sluggers could hit safely when the ball was put over, and both went through the game without getting a hit. Murray and Strunk walked on four pitched balls, but no player fanned on three. Following are the pitching figures by innings:

Bender—7, 16, 6, 10, 17, 11, 26, 9, 13. Total—115.
Demaree—7, 19, 11, 25. Total—62.
Marquard—20, 13, 7, 13. Total—53.
Grand total 115.

M'GRAW SAYS TEAM IS FIGHTING YET

Recognizes Its Chances Are Slim, but Its Spirit Is Still Unbroken.

BAD PLAYING, BAD UMPIRING

And No Luck In Getting the Breaks, Says Giants' Manager — Praise for the Playing of Mackmen.

By JOHN J. McGRAW.
Manager of The Giants.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 10.—Let the fans, who holler at me when the Giants are losing and I am out on the coaching lines, roast to-night if they want to. Let the fans who want to sympathize, sympathize, but don't come to me because we don't want sympathy. The roasters have a fine chance to roast since my club is now two games behind on the series. The Athletics need to win only one more. But let the fans that are still determined to win stick because we are fighting yet.

This is not going to be a story of explaining or apologizing for my ball club because we have lost three games. It is my club with the players picked out and placed in their positions by myself so that if we are behind on the series there is nobody but yours truly to blame. And I want to add that I am proud to manage any team which can come against a six-run lead and bring itself up to within one of a tied score. They show that they are fighting. It is just that fighting spirit which may pull us out yet although, of course, our chances are slim. The final and deciding victory is ever the hardest one to push over and the Athletics have us fighting and cornered. They may get a battle yet.

My team died scrapping, which is the most encouraging sign of the afternoon. There were not many others, from the umpiring of Mr. John Egan of the American League to the wonderful playing of Schang and Barry who are the freshest heroes on the Philadelphia roster. There were more arguments between the players on the opposing teams this afternoon and less of the good natured bantering that had marked the series so far. The strain is beginning to tell. Not a kind word was spoken in our dressing-room as the club dressed. One of the youngsters started to whistle and had not turned loose a bar before his musical efforts were muffled with a fusillade of towels.

"Can the whistling" came the chorus. "This is no time to whistle," said the man next to the whistler. "We've got to get out there and play baseball now. We haven't played much of any yet."

It is this "crabbing" spirit that I like to see under the conditions. It shows at least that my club is not yet beaten without a fight. In other words, their backs are not down.

Bad Umpiring, Bad Playing.

The umpiring of Egan on balls and strikes to-day may have been responsible for this "crabbed" spirit. It was positively the worst of the series. He made a lot of joke decisions on balls and strikes, and he missed them on both clubs. But I noticed he was not calling any bad ones against the Athletics when we were up close there, and they went to the bat only one run in front in the eighth inning. It is true we did not have any "breaks" to-day, but we are used to that because we haven't got any in so long.

Bad judgment in the pitching and batting also helped to beat us. Barry was pitched to wrong and so was Strunk. My pitchers will not go into a world's series and work as they do in the regular season.

I also started the game with Snodgrass in centre field, hoping to get the benefit of his batting, and thinking he might have luck enough to get away with it without any hard chances. As the luck broke, he got the only fly which required a hard run, and was unable to reach the ball. This gave McInnis a life that ultimately was turned into the Athletics' first tally. I was entirely to blame for starting Snodgrass, knowing that he was lame, but I was trusting to luck, and I don't have any. The Giants don't seem to have any luck in October. The limping Merkle lost an easy foul on Barry in this same inning because of his bad ankle, and this muff gave Barry a chance to make his first two-bagger which drove McInnis home. Some may call this bad baseball, but I call it "bad breaks." Merkle would have caught that ball easily except that he twisted his ankle just as he wheeled, and the twinge of pain threw him off his balance.

"Something is going to break now," said I on the bench. "It always does when a club loses an easy chance like that."

The next minute Barry pumped out his two-bagger.

Behind Bender the Athletics played a great game. It is a wonderful team in an important series, but it is a lucky crowd, too, because the players never seem to "boot" in a pinch or make mistakes. My critics will declare that this is great baseball. Of course it is, but the best of them "boot." Bender needed all the support that he got because he had a hard game on Tuesday. I did not expect that Mack would send him back at us so soon, but thought he would give him another day's rest and work him to-morrow at the Polo Grounds.

As soon as I saw the Indian was going to work, I warned my batters to make him pitch as much as possible, figuring that, if my pitcher could hold the Athletics, we would get to Bender when he weakened in the closing innings. He weakened all right, but he had so many runs to fall back upon by this time that we could not catch him.

The fourth inning was the round in which my club went to pieces and which beat us. The Giants looked badly in the first half of the game, being unable to hit Bender at all and making several foolish plays. In the last half of the game they looked like a ball club batting hard and taking chances. As I have frequently said, any team looks better when it is hitting.

Saw Victory Near in the Eighth.

Bender was weakening so perceptibly in the eighth that I thought we would surely be able to tie the score, but luck again held us back. Two balls which were turned into outs, should have gone for base hits with even a shade of the "break." The first one of these was McCormick's drive in the fifth inning with men on first and third bases. He had gone into the game to hit for Demaree, and, with the count three and two he drilled one to left field that looked as safe as Government bonds. For a minute I thought that Oldring was foolish to try to come in on the ball because of the danger of getting through him and rolling to the fence. Mack's left fielder made a final lunge and got the ball. It was a wonderful catch, but Oldring took a long chance to make it. If that ball had gotten away, we would certainly have had the run which we needed so much at the finish.

The real heart breaker, however, was Fletcher's smash in the eighth. Bender had begun to weaken in the seventh when two singles put runners on the bases. Merkle bounced a home run into the left field stand, and our first three runs of the game were scored. It was a nice hit by Merkle and I was glad to see him get it because he has been unjustly roasted from time to time in World's series. He has been playing in this one with an ankle so badly swollen that if any of the men that roast him had it they would be in bed.

Herzog opened the eighth with a single, this being his first hit of the series. Things have been breaking badly for him this Fall. Doyle banged the ball hard, but it went straight to the ever-present Collins. The play was a difficult one, and the ball was hit so hard that Collins was partly carried off his feet, but recovered in time to force Herzog at second.

Fletcher picked one out and whanged it hard. The ball took one bound and went at Bender with great speed. He had no time to attempt to field it, but it hit him in the chest and hung there for a second until he could get his hands up. Nineteen of the same kind of hits out of twenty would have bounded off the pitcher for a single. If the ball had caught Bender in the shoulder or arm it would have bounced and Fletcher would have been safe, and Doyle would have reached second.

As it was, Bender whirled and let drive at second base to get Doyle. He had to make the play fast, and his throw to Barry was wide of the bag—it also caught him going the wrong way—but the agile shortstop was able to swing off the bag and get the ball. If it had ever gone through him, Bender would have blown, because Doyle would surely have scored and Fletcher would have advanced a base. Burns singled a minute later, a solid blow to left, and Shafer followed with a long triple that drove home both runs and brought us within one of the Athletics. The tieing run was on third base when Murray hit to Collins for the final out. It is very bad taste to hit to Collins at any time.

That is how the game went. It is a story of lost opportunities in the opening innings. Our pitching could not hold the slugging Athletics—Schang, Barry, and Oldring doing most of the damaging batting to-day instead of Collins and Baker, as in the previous games. Then we worked back into the game, back into a fighting position, with a chance, and the luck cracked on us. May be it was not luck, but when two balls are hit as hard as those two in the eighth, or that blow of McCormick's in the fifth, and are converted into outs I consider it tough luck.

I suppose that everybody wants to know what I am going to do now. I expect to pitch Mathewson again to-morrow. Doubtless Mack will come back with "Eddie" Plank in an effort to close out the series. I have been told that Plank cannot pitch with so short a rest. I do not look to see him put up any such battle as he did on Wednesday. If Mack starts Plank, we should not have any trouble making runs off him after the first few innings, when he begins to tire. The Athletics figure the same way about Mathewson and think that they will have little trouble hitting him this time.

It is generally a lot of trouble for anybody to hit Matty any time, and if we win to-morrow, what am I going to do? I am not figuring more than one game ahead now, but it would not greatly surprise me to see the series settled by a seventh game. Maybe that is personal optimism, but they have got to beat us the four before we quit, and that fourth one is the hardest to win for any club, just as the game which cinches the pennant is the toughest.

WHEN THE GIANTS' CHANCES LOOKED GOOD.

HOT ROOTING IN TIMES SQUARE

Hope of Big Crowd Watching Electric Scoreboard Died Hard.

A mighty cheer went up from the crowd of 15,000 persons in Times Square watching THE TIMES's electric scoreboard yesterday when Demaree was announced as the pitcher for the Giants.

Many wagers were made that Demaree would win over Big Chief Bender, who was slated by Connie Mack to repeat. The first inning proved satisfactory, even if the Giants did not score, for Demaree held the mighty Quaker sluggers scoreless, which was expected to give him confidence. A gasp went up in the second inning when the Athletics began their relentless attack on Demaree. A lead of one run cast a gloom over the fans. This was intensified in the fourth inning, when the Philadelphians added three more tallies to their score, making the total four.

There was a general feeling that Bender would again prove too much for the Giants, as the latter, with discouraging regularity, fell victims to the Indian pitcher.

The first ray of sunshine came in the seventh when Merkle smashed out the long hit that bounded into the bleachers, sending in two men ahead of him. As the lights flashed at first, second, and third bases and finally at the home plate showing that Merkle had made a home run, the cheers could be heard several blocks away. Half the Athletics' lead had been cut down in one inning, and two more remained to be played. Hope was again revived, and many at least pretended they saw victory for their favorites.

Then came the eighth inning and with it two more runs for New York, making the margin but one run. Again the yell smote the top of The Times Building, and the fans became delirious. Each succeeding play was watched with increased interest, and when the Athletics, in their half of the eighth, were retired, a sigh of relief escaped the spectators. The suspense did not last long as the New York players failed entirely in the ninth, and the Athletics were returned victors by a 6 to 5 score.

TICKET SELLER HELD.

To be Tried for Speculating—Prices Slump for To-day's Game.

The baseball ticket scandal received another airing yesterday, when Richard J. Donovan, 33 years old, of 380 West Twenty-first Street, a ticket seller at the Polo Grounds, was arraigned in Harlem Court charged with a violation of the anti-tipping law. He waived examination and was held by Magistrate Freschi in $500 bail for trial.

Harry N. Hempstead, President of the New York National League Club, who appeared as complainant, and Miss Edna Judlin, secretary of the finances of the organization, together with Rubie Weller, made affidavits against Donovan, who was in charge of one of the ticket offices at the two-dollar gate. According to the affidavits, Donovan delivered to Weller 101 two-dollar tickets of admission to the game between the Giants and Athletics on Thursday, for which he received $300. Of this sum he put $200 in the cash drawer to pay for the tickets and retained $100 for himself. It was alleged that two fifty-dollar bills were found in his possession when searched in President Hempstead's office.

There was little doing among the ticket offices and speculators on to-day's game. The third defeat of the Giants caused a big slump in the price of the reserved seats, and a number were sold last night at $5 apiece. A few two-dollar admission tickets were in the hands of the speculators, and these were offered at an advance of $2 over their face value.

An Athletic Punch.

"Give us a world's series cocktail," said a thirsty one yesterday evening in the Fifth Avenue Building Café.

"Don't mix them, but here's an Athletic Punch," growled back the bartender.

HE MEANT SOMETHING ELSE.

Columbia Lecturer Was Not Referring to the World's Series.

The lecture room of Prof. Franklin H. Giddings in Kent Hall at Columbia University was crowded yesterday afternoon as he talked of the ethnic origins of the English people to-day. He had traced the contributions of the ancient, black-haired Picts, of the Goidelic Celts, of the Brythonic Celts and of the Baltic peoples. As 3 o'clock approached, he was ready to propound the question as to what mental qualities each stock had contributed to the English folk of to-day and to what extent we owed to the blend of these contributions the practical effectiveness for great achievement.

"This very afternoon gives us an example of the effectiveness, I mean," said Prof. Giddings. "It was to have happened at 2 o'clock."

He took out his watch and looked out of the window.

"No," he said, "I know of no reason why it should have been postponed."

The faces of his audience lighted up. Men and women, youths and girls sat forward in their seats. They, too, looked out of the window and there rose visions of Shibe Park, of the men of the Giant team fighting to tie the score of the series, of the groups downtown standing by the thousands before the scoreboards. Practical effectiveness? They thought of Mathewson and of Baker.

"No," the lecturer was continuing, "I know of nothing to have postponed it, the blowing up of the Gamboa dike that will let in the water of the Panama Canal."

And in the lecture room was the audible rustle of readjustment.

BENJAMIN ALTMAN IS LAID AT REST

LINE OF AUTOS TO GRAVE

A Thousand or More of His Employes at Services—His Art Collection for People.

Benjamin Altman was laid at rest yesterday in Salem Field Cypress Hills Cemetery. The funeral was held from the Temple Emanu-El, at Forty-third Street, and the body was taken from there to the burial place in a motor hearse. Thousands in Fifth Avenue paused at the curb line as the procession of automobiles filled with friends of the dead merchant passed, following his body to the grave.

From the Altman home, at 626 Fifth Avenue, the mourners were led by Michael Friedsam, Vice President of the Altman Company. In the party were Mrs. Charles J. Heymann, niece of Mr. Altman; Charles J. Heymann, and their son, Charles J. Heymann, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Stiner, and Frederick and Morris Altman, nephews of Mr. Altman. Behind them came the household attachés. They were led by Arthur Boston, secretary to Mr. Altman. Many servants who have been in the employ of Mr. Altman for years followed.

Professional bearers carried the coffin. These were the honorary pall bearers: William Churchill Oastler, Dr. Bernard Sachs, George R. Read, John L. Cadwalader, Edwin J. Steiner, William H. Porter, Milton M. Klein, James H. Thompson, Alfred P. Boehm, Frank L. Nugent, Gustav A. Hammer, and Theodore Y. Hobby.

A blanket of orchids and ferns covered the coffin and these decorations alone accompanied it to the cemetery, the other flowers being sent after the funeral to hospitals.

The Temple was banked with flowers, most of them in the form of wreaths and bouquets. A big wreath of orchids from Henry Duveen of London was under the pulpit. A large floral tribute from the Altman store employes and an elaborate design in roses from the Educational Alliance were displayed.

Those who gathered to mourn for Benjamin Altman were many and of widely separated spheres of life. There were numbers of wealthy men in the news at the Temple Emanu-El and some of them Benjamin Altman had taught their A B C's of business, but an onlooker who knew the history of the dead man and of his house, observed that they were no more grieved at his departure than the thousand or more of his 4,000 employes who were there to pay their last respects.

They heard an impressive funeral service. They listened to a funeral oration that was inspiring as a tribute of a friend. This was by Dr. Bernard Sachs, who for a quarter of a century had been close to Mr. Altman, who had made confidants of few.

Among those who occupied seats in the Temple were: Jacob H. Schiff, Vincent Astor, Henry W. Taft, John L. Cadwalader, Benjamin J. Altman, Otto H. Kahn, Isidor Saks, E. W. Bloomingdale, William H. Porter, Thomas S. Cochrane, James B. Regan, Thomas J. Shanley, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Read, Mrs. Bernard Sachs, Otto M. Eidlitz, James Watson, James Talcott, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wood, William Strong, T. B. Clark, R. M. Haan, William C. Popper, Jesse I. Straus, Isaac Gimbel, Jacob Gimbel, J. B. Greenhut, Louis Stern, Henry Siegel, George W. Bolds, R. M. Hearn, and Dr. Henry S. Stark.

There were delegations from the Fifth Avenue Association, headed by President Cook; Directors of the Mount Sinai Hospital, and of the Jewish Educational Alliance.

The programme of music was under the direction of Walter C. Gale, organist. Beethoven's "Funeral March" was rendered as the body was borne into the Temple. The quartet composed of Miss Inez Barbour, soprano; Miss Mary Jordan, contralto; William Wheeler, tenor, and Clemente Boulongna, bass, sang Sparger's anthem, "O, Lord, What Is Man?" Miss Barbour sang Schubert's solo, "Ueber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh," and during the recessional Mr. Gale played Chopin's Funeral March.

The funeral service was conducted by Rabbi Hyman G. Enclow. He read from the Psalms.

It was made apparent in the oration by Dr. Sachs that he had knowledge of Mr. Altman's intentions in disposing of his great art collection, and that it would be a heritage of the people, as he said:

"Having risen from the ranks of the people, and being intensely American in spirit and in heart, proud of the development of his home city, firmly convinced of the progress the nation would make in the arts if the proper opportunity would be given to its people, it was his aim to gather here the best that could be acquired. * * *

"The best and only the best—that was his principle, not because he was anxious to be known to be the possessor of great masterpieces, but because he recognized the educational value of such a collection as his."

Dr. Sachs's Eulogy.

Dr. Bernard Sachs, Mr. Altman's physician, friend and confidant, who knew him intimately for a score of years or more and was with him when he died, delivered this eulogy:

The close friends of Benjamin Altman feel that one of their number should rise in this sacred House of Worship, to render for them in words, however feeble, a tribute of love, of respect and of deepest gratitude to the memory of a man who was a true lover of his fellowmen, a sterling citizen, a great benefactor, a man of genius and of high intellect, whose life and noble ideals were an inspiration to those who enjoyed the rare privilege of knowing him intimately, and who was an exemplar of the highest virtues to those working side by side with him during many long years. That a man of such qualities should have been personally but little known to the community in which he lived may be a matter of regret; but it was his unusual modesty, the abhorrence of notoriety, that kept him from the public gaze. Now that he has gone from among us the veil which he threw about his person may be laid aside for an instant and the greatness of the man revealed for the benefit of those who have a right and a wish to know what sort of man he was.

I would refer but briefly to his success as a merchant, to his high sense of honor and his absolute integrity. These were known of all men and were qualities which the deceased himself would not have me accentuate. In his opinion the State has come to a sorry pass if honesty and integrity were to be extolled as the greatest or the rarest virtues. But I do wish to emphasize those qualities in him which accounted for the unusual influence which he exercised over thousands of people during the half century of his activity, over young and old in many walks of life, and to remind his friends and the public that in the death of Benjamin Altman this City and this Nation have lost a latent power for good which just at this juncture they could illafford to lose. It would be presumption on my part to attempt to speak of the methods which were the basis of his great achievements in the commercial world; but I am very certain that his success as a merchant was due in the end to the methods and principles which characterized the man in all his undertakings and in all his relations to his fellowmen. Under the present social and economic conditions, permanent, lasting success, not the ephemeral kind, is the result of serious labor intelligently applied. Thoroughness, conscientious performance of duty, punctilious exactness and the closest scrutiny of details were his watchwords.

His Work for the Public Good.

Consider what the influence of any man would have been who had been guided by such principles; and since Benjamin Altman was in the position to exact from hundreds of others the observance of these same principles. It is no idle praise to say that few men have lived in this community who have done more for the advancement of the public good and for the elevation of the standard of public morals than has this one man. Just as the silent forces of nature are often the most potent, so in our social organization the best and most fruitful work is sometimes done by those whose hand is not continually in evidence and who shun the flashlight and annoyance of publicity. So convinced was Benjamin Altman of the force of his example and of the correctness of his views, that he was willing to risk the criticism of those who have become so accustomed to our present-day and somewhat unfortunate methods, that they cannot conceive of any one being willing to do good and to be helpful to others without having the fact heralded by an insatiate press that seeks to gratify public clamor. With an indomitable energy that would brook no defeat, with a keen insight into the problems of the day and of the future, with a perfect genius for the selection of competent associates, and with a desire ever present in him to help men and women to improve their condition in life, it can readily be understood that Benjamin Altman achieved whatever he set out to do and in reaching the goal that he set himself, helped to advance the cause of others.

In business relations he was the exacting general whose commands must necessarily be obeyed. Breach of discipline could not be tolerated, and if a reprimand was called for it was promptly imparted; but not infrequently it was accompanied by a single word of kindness or a mere look which helped to assuage the sting of the rebuke. Beneath a stern exterior there was a heart as sensitive as that of a woman and as kindly as that of a child. His employes were his children upon whom he bestowed parental care. Many a time has he said to me, speaking of them, "My employes have helped me to be successful; I feel that I owe much to each and every one of them; I want to do what I can for them." If any one of them needed help he was ready to extend it. In case of illness he wanted to be assured that the boy or girl, the man or the woman had not only the proper care, but the very best that could be afforded them, and many a young person in his employ has found the burden of illness suddenly made more bearable without even knowing the kindly hand that prompted the change. Such was his innate modesty and such was his truly charitable instinct, that mentioning a good deed of his, or a mere suspicion that others knew of it gave him distinct pain. His own conscience was his only taskmaster; he listened to its dictates, and cared not a whit what others would say so long as he had done the right thing at the right time. He appreciated the approval of others, but not for mere deeds of goodness or of charity. Approval of achievement, approval of a difficult task well done, and possibly done better than any one else could have done it, such approval gratified his spirit and was for him worth the winning.

It has been said of Benjamin Altman that his business was his life. This is only partially true. It was the love for work as such that kept him active long after his name had become a household word and after the mere acquisition of wealth could have had any charm for him, and at a time when many a man would have been glad to surrender the burdens and responsibilities of such a position as he held. But no power on earth could have induced him to relinquish his grasp upon affairs so long as his master mind and his firm hand could direct them.

Born with a Love of Art.

Fortunate it was for him and for posterity that he recognized at an early day the wisdom of developing the love that was born in him for the pure and the beautiful. What more natural than that he should have turned from the activities of his everyday life to the cultivation of the fine arts, and that during the last thirty years, he found the reward of his labors and his true happiness in that marvelous collection which he was able to gather about him? By the very makeup of his nature, having once entered upon the field of art, he was bound to rise to the front rank among collectors and in many respects to be a unique figure among them. The best and only the best—that was his principle, not because he was anxious to be known to be the possessor of great masterpieces, but because he recognized the educational value of such a collection as his. Having risen from the ranks of the people, and being intensely American in spirit and in heart, proud of the development of his home city, firmly convinced of the progress the nation would make in the arts if the proper opportunity would be given to its people, it was his aim to gather here the best that could be acquired.

In striving to improve his collection he had the rare courage to weed out the lesser numbers until he succeeded in establishing a gallery in which each work was of great merit and had some special significance either for the collector or for the student of art. For Mr. Altman the purchase of a picture was not a mere whim; it was a proposition to be weighed carefully. However great the name of the master, a Rembrandt, a Memling or a Titian, he had the courage to insist that the work speak for itself. His taste was so fastidious, his judgment so good, that even professed critics often acknowledged the correctness of his views. In some special fields of art, notably in that of Chinese porcelains, he was an expert of the highest order. His intimate friends will never forget the many rare evenings in that gallery when, after the cares of a busy day were laid aside, Benjamin Altman sat there, surrounded by the treasures nearest to his heart; never boastful, but intensely happy that he could give pleasure and instruction to those genuinely interested in art.

The love of art brightened his life. When illness made the days weary the arrival of a rare porcelain, or the first sight of an eagerly sought painting would bring cheer to his heart and make him forget his suffering.

Whatever Benjamin Altman did he did well. Call him the prince of merchants, call him a prince among collectors, but let me, who knew him well, call him a prince among men. To those who saw his useful life quickly ebbing away it was some satisfaction to know that he displayed to the very last the same glorious qualities of character and the same mental vigor that were so peculiarly his own. Not until twenty-four hours before he died—I hear the words ringing in my ears—did he say: "It's no use, no use." I could read his thoughts. "I have fought all my life," thought he, "with my whole heart and soul to play my part in this beautiful world. Death alone can conquer me. I have tried to do my duty. Thy will be done."

It is confidently believed, apart from what Dr. Sachs said, by those who knew Mr. Altman that his wonderful collection of paintings, porcelains, Oriental rugs, tapestries, jades, crystals, and other art objects of priceless value would become the property of the city. Mr. Altman's will, which is supposed to be in the custody of John L. Cadwalader of Strong & Cadwalader, his legal advisers, has not been opened.

Mr. Cadwalader returned to the United States from Liverpool yesterday morning on the Lusitania, and went immediately to the funeral.

It was announced that the will disposing of an estate valued at $45,000,000 would be read within two or three days. The belief is that it will be filed to-day.

Mr. Altman's art collection, which is variously estimated to be worth $15,000,000, may become a public collection in the Altman private gallery in Fiftieth Street, or it may have a place in the Metropolitan Art Museum. If Mr. Altman has left the collection intact in its present home, it may become part of New York's art treasure as the British Nation now owns the collection of Sir Richard Wallace in Hertford House, London.

JOHN HILL ARRESTED AGAIN.

Former Charge of Withholding Stock Brought Up by William Gow.

John Hill, proprietor of the Hotel Claridge, formerly Rector's, and the Clarendon Hotel in Brooklyn, was arrested yesterday afternoon on an indictment found against him by the Kings County Grand Jury, charging him with grand larceny in the first degree. The indictment followed an investigation of charges made by William Gow, of the advertising firm of Ward & Gow, and at one time the largest stockholder of the Borough Bank of Brooklyn, which was closed in the panic of 1907.

Hill is accused of stealing thirty shares of stock of the A. & M. Robins Company, a Manhattan poultry concern, from Gow on June 5, 1900. The shares are valued at $100 each.

Hill was brought before Judge Fawcett in the County Court to plead to the indictment. With him was his attorney, Robert H. Elder, ex-Assistant District Attorney of Kings County. Hill pleaded "not guilty" and was allowed ten days in which to change his plea or enter a demurrer. Judge Fawcett held him for trial in $2,000 bail. This was furnished by the Illinois Surety Company, and Hill was released.

This is the second time that Hill has been arrested on a charge of withholding stock of the poultry concern belonging to another. William S. Hurley appeared against him as the complainant in a hearing before Magistrate Naumer in the Adams Street Court.

EVELYN THAW'S BOY HERE.

Dancer Meets Lad Who Came from England with His Nurse.

Russell Thaw, son of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, arrived on the Lusitania yesterday from Liverpool in charge of his nurse, Mrs. Hawkins, with whom he was left in England. Long before the big liner was warped into her berth Mrs. Thaw was on the end of the Cunard pier looking through a pair of field glasses to see if she could discover her four-year-old boy on the promenade deck.

The boy, who is an attractive child and resembles his mother, was dressed in a sailor suit with reefer jacket and had on a naval cap with the letters "H. M. S. Dreadnought" inscribed on the ribbon.

JURY INDICTS SCHMIDT.

Prisoner Says He Is Glad When Indictment Is Found.

The Grand Jury in the Court of General Sessions which has been hearing testimony in the case of Hans Schmidt, accused of the murder of Anna Aumuller, handed down an indictment against Schmidt yesterday, charging murder in the first degree. Schmidt will be brought before Judge Malone on Tuesday to plead to the indictment.

In answer to a note sent to his cell in the Tombs, Schmidt replied that he was glad that he had been indicted and asked how long it would be before he would be sent to the death house in Sing Sing Prison. Alphonse G. Koelble, the prisoner's counsel, had a long conference with his client yesterday.

WRITERS BAFFLED BY 'GIRL OF TO-DAY'

Booth Tarkington Says She Might Be Anywhere from 17 to 30 Years Old.

TWO TYPES, STREET THINKS

One He Finds in Maine in Summer and the Other Is a New York Product.

Among authors who have written about American girls as they are, considerable interest is being taken in the search THE NEW YORK TIMES is making for the typical American girl of to-day. Booth Tarkington, whose portrayal of the American flirt and of the American boy have added fresh laurels to those he won by his earlier romances, and Julian Street, who has written much that is interesting about phases of the American girl that are seen in New York, said yesterday that a selection such as THE TIMES was undertaking to arrive at was beyond them.

"Typical American girl," said Mr. Tarkington, "is an epithet that makes me feel in a fog—as if I were trying to breathe with my nose in a plush cushion. Passing these symptoms, I think of sketches by Gibson and Flagg, tennis rackets, turkey-trotting, flat-soled shoes, college pins and the 'biological view of life.'

"A Frenchman could give you some color on this subject. I am too confused. I cannot be sure that I am able to think about a real type; it is probable that I am thinking only about what I have read of it and about the pictures I have seen of it.

"How old would I make this girl? Well, girls are 30, nowadays, as well as 17. Is there a new type? I incline to think so, but only from hearsay. I have heard, for instance, Julian Street speak of specimens unknown to me. Jesse Lynch Williams has gone so far as to assert that there is a new kind of girl—due to a new confrontation with old problems, if I understand him correctly. He told me they conversed most interestingly. As for myself, the fact is I can't answer questions about the American girl as well as I could ask them, though I would, of course, champion her against all other girls whatsoever. If I were questioner, I would ask:

"Is she less sentimental than her ancestresses were? Is she better educated than they? Does she think more? Is she less of a coquette? Does she know more about taking care of herself? Would she be better equipped to earn her own living? Has she humor?

"If the answers are all 'es' some people would claim that 'the world do move,' and, perhaps, 'it do.'

"So you see," added Mr. Tarkington, "I don't know anything about the subject, and, as I said before, it confuses me. All I know about it is what I can see, and all I can see is that she dresses enchantingly."

Mr. Street said he knew of at least two types of American girl of to-day though he wouldn't want to say that either was THE type.

"If I lived in one of the hotels near Times Square," continued Mr. Street, "and were accustomed to spend my wakeful hours in the restaurants thereabout, I should be inclined to think the typical American girl is what I call 'hectic.' I have no doubt that a great many foreigners who come over here and who see a great deal of the night life of New York picture the typical American girl as a sort of beauty o loose, red lips, feverish eyes, shining from the shadows of low-piled hair, like those of some wild creature gazing from a cave at night. This is distinctly a New York type, though it could not be called THE New York type.

"On the other hand, in Maine, in the Summer time, I see a lot of brown, strong girls, who can play golf or tennis, or send a canoe along with a powerful stroke. These are certainly of a more wholesome type than the other. Yet the other class is no less a type. Neither is the great American type.

"I cannot say what is the real American type of the girl of to-day. The type I should like to believe she is, if there is such a thing as the typical American girl, is a strong, healthy, thoroughly wholesome young person, sweetly sympathetic, who looks you squarely in the eyes. She is almost the antithesis of the extravagant, tight or slashed skirted little turkey-trotter who constitutes such a large portion of the afternoon population of Fifth Avenue and Broadway.

"I don't know that the creature I picture is typical, but I do know we have evolved in this country a girl with a remarkable amount of intelligence, a girl who, though she may be 'fashionable,' isn't altogether given up to fashion, but who reads good books, and thinks for herself and tries to understand what life is all about. I do not say this is THE American type, but it is an American type. One of the most striking things about her is her frankness, her charming friendliness. But again, when you try to describe such a girl, you find yourself describing an ideal of your own. A man who tries to describe a typical woman almost invariably pictures what he hopes she is—what he himself would like her to be."

THE NEW YORK TIMES is seeking the girl of to-day in order to present her to its readers by the most artistic method of photographic reproduction known. Everybody is invited to send in, before Nov. 1, photographs which have been taken within a year. With each photograph submitted must be sent the name and address of the subject, together with the date when the picture was taken.

From the pictures sent in, twenty-nine will be selected, which will be reproduced by the new rotogravure method in a special section of the Christmas number of THE TIMES. The judges will be seven artists, each of whom is famous as a creator of a type which represents a phase of the American girl. They will select from the twenty-nine photographs that which represents the typical American girl of to-day, and her picture will cover the entire front page of a rotogravure section of the Christmas number.

WON'T END TAXICAB STAY.

Appellate Division Says Public Must Wait for Decision on Appeal.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Terence Farley asked the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday to vacate a stay under which the taxicab companies, whose special privileges were abolished by the new public hack ordinance, continued to disregard its provisions. Mr. Farley charged that the companies were operating lawlessly, observing neither the provisions of the new ordinance nor those of the old one.

Presiding Justice Ingraham pointed out that the question of the validity of the new ordinance brought up by an appeal of the companies from a decision of Justice Seabury would come up on Oct. 24. He said he thought the public would not suffer if the present conditions were maintained for two weeks more.

OFFICE HOLDER DIED POOR.

L. J. Connorton, in Politics Many Years, Left Only $2,000.

Luke J. Connorton, who at the height of his power was one of the most conspicuous figures in politics in Queens County, and was known as the "Happy Little Judge," left an estate of barely $2,000, according to an appraisal of his estate just made by Transfer Tax Appraiser Philip Frank. Connorton held office continuously for a quarter of a century.

Before consolidation he was Town Clerk of Flushing and a Justice of the Peace. After consolidation he was appointed a City Magistrate, and was later reappointed.

Interborough Rapid Transit Company

First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds

DUE JANUARY 1, 1966

Registered or Coupon, Interchangeable, in Denominations of $1000

Which we offer at 98½ and Accrued Interest—A $1000 Bond for $985—To Yield About 5.08 Per Cent.

We recommend these bonds for conservative investment for the following reasons:

They are exempt from all taxes in New York State, County and City.

Their issue has been approved by the Public Service Commission of the State of New York.

After November 1, 1913, these Bonds are secured by a FIRST LIEN, (subject to the City's rights under the leases) upon real estate, power houses, substations, equipment and other property owned directly by the Interborough Company; also upon the leasehold and other rights of the Interborough Company in the existing and proposed Subway and Elevated lines;

Present earnings of the property now in operation are more than sufficient to pay interest and sinking fund on entire $156,000,000 bonds expected to be issued by January 1, 1917, notwithstanding the fact that no return has as yet been received on the new lines, which will add 170 per cent. to the miles of subway track and 20 per cent. to the elevated track;

The City of New York is to contribute $66,000,000 (approximately 60 per cent.) of the cost of proposed subways and extensions to elevated lines which will be operated by this Company and is not to receive any income on this investment until the Interborough Company receives interest upon its investment;

Provision is made for a sinking fund to retire these bonds at or before maturity at 110 and accrued interest.

RITUAL MURDER CASE GOING TO PIECES

AUTHORITIES SUPPRESS IT

Catholic Archbishop Ridicules Blood Accusation—Fanatical Priest a State Witness.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 11.—The suppression of the newspaper Kievlianin, a conservative and reactionary journal of Kiev, for its remarkable article on the Beiliss case has caused greater excitement to-day than the ritual murder trial itself, according to The London Times correspondent at Kiev. The editor, M. Shulgeen, in his article declares that the indictment against Beiliss is mere babbling, which any moderate defense can easily overthrow.

"We are ashamed," he says, "of the Kiev court and of Russian justice, which has ventured to come before the whole world with such a wretched outfit."

The correspondent continues:

"The article proceeds to state that Russian society has become alarmed lest Jewish influence should divert the course of justice, and that this view has been strongly expressed in the Duma, where the Kiev police have been accused of disguising the character of the murder and of having been bribed by Jews. M. Zamislovsky even asserted that Jews committed such murders only when the police had been bribed. The commission of the murder was in itself, he held, a proof of bribery. The Jews, he thinks, are too wise to trust to the police alone, for this would end in a pogrom.

"'Zamislovsky's speech really, therefore, accused the law of conniving with the Jews and has produced a profound impression in Kieff. Fear of being suspected of having any connection with Jews is for many people quite unbearable. We have known many brave men who laughed at bombs and Brownings, but could not endure such suspicion.'

The Attack by Pranaites.

"The indictment of Bieliss, which was read in court yesterday, offers no proofs of his guilt, but quotes the Catholic priest Pranaitis at great length.

"The prosecution admits that other authorities who were consulted declared definitely against the existence of the so-called Jewish custom of ritual murder, which, in fact, is directly contrary to the Mosaic law and to Talmudic doctrine. Pranaitis, on the contrary, declares that all rabbis of different sects agree in teaching hatred of the Gentile, who is regarded as an animal and not a human being. According to this theory, the commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill' does not apply to a gentile. The murder of a gentile is supposed to hasten the coming of the Messiah.

"It also has, according to Pranaitis, a sacrificial value. Since the destruction of the temple there has been no sacrificial altar for animals, and killing gentiles is accepted as a substitute. Such slaughter, he says, is performed with certain cabalistic rites. The mouth is gagged, for the victim must die without a scream; twelve stabs with a knife are inflicted, and then one additional, making thirteen. Pranaitis points out that the body of Yushchinsky bore these signs. The mouth had been stopped, and near the temple were thirteen knife pricks. The blood, according to Pranaitis, would be required for the Pasohal preparations."

Blood Ritual Myth Disproved.

The "blood ritual" trial at Kiev has aroused extraordinary interest and no little surprise in Jewish circles in this country.

A suggested explanation of the motives underlying the present prosecution and some instances of similar attacks upon Jews in olden times was given yesterday by the Rev. Dr. M. Gaster, chief rabbi of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogues in London.

"There are two points to be considered," said Dr. Gaster. "The first is the general accusation; the second the attitude of Russia and modern civilization. So far as the first, namely, the 'blood ritual,' is concerned, there is no longer any necessity for us to give unqualified denial of such accusations, because through the ages, despite all sorts of investigation and persecution, no justification could be found.

"It will be remembered that the first public appearance of Sir Moses Montefiore was when he, with Cremieux, undertook a journey to the East in 1840, to vindicate the purity of the Jewish faith, when a similar accusation was raised in Damascus, owing to the disappearance of a Catholic clergyman. The cry against the Jews in this case was raised by the Greeks. The sympathy of England went with Sir Moses in his noble quest, and he was able to obtain an irade from the Sultan and also from the Khédive of Egypt, showing the innocence of the falsely accused Jews.

"Then we have the Diszaeszler case in Hungary about thirty years ago, when it was again proved that there was not the slightest ground for the accusations. But these charges have always been a weapon in the hands of the anti-Semitic element, either in Government, clergy, or bureaucracy, for political objects.

"The present case in Russia stands exactly on all fours with former accusations, but is still more reprehensible, when one remembers that Russia claims to have a modern civilization, and yet uses all the weapons of her vast system of bureaucratic persecution, intolerance, and tyranny wholly and solely to create a state of feeling in Russia, in defiance of all public morality, against the Jews. The whole business is a political manoeuvre to gain popular feeling against the Semitic race."

A Russian correspondent of The Jewish Chronicle, referring to the storm of protests against the ritual murder accusation, announces that Monsignor Klutchinsky, the Metropolitan Archbishop of the Catholics in Russia, has made a statement condemning the boycott in Poland and the blood ritual agitation. He has strongly censured priests who have preached against Jews and has made it widely known that not only is there nothing in the Jewish religion to suggest that Jews are obliged to commit ritual murder, but that the followers of the ancient faith might serve as an example to all for the model observance of their holy days and Saturdays, as well as for their piety.

The significance of Monsignor Klutchinsky's protest lies in the fact that the notorious priest Pranaitis, who is one of the principal supporters of the blood ritual theory in the case of Beiliss, is a Catholic.

"I regret to state, however," adds the correspondent, "that the efforts made to add the name of Monsignor Klutchinsky to the list of pro-Beiliss experts, as well as the endeavors of a few famous Moscow advocates to obtain permission to participate in the defense of Beiliss have been frustrated by the Ministry. Nevertheless, the storm of indignation raised against the attempt to prohibit Prof. Troitzky, one of the principal pro-Beiliss experts, from attending the trial compelled the Holy Synod to withdraw its orginal proposition. The Professor, therefore, will appear at the trial.

KIEV, Oct. 10.—In its sensational article on the Beiliss case, which caused its suppression, the Kievlianin says:

"It is a monstrous theory that Beiliss is of no account, and may even be acquitted, providing that the existence of the ritual is established. You are always talking of rituals; yourselves are offering a human sacrifice. Beiliss may be insignificant. Nevertheless, you have no right to imprison him unless you are convinced of his guilt. You have treated him like a rabbit on the tabic of a vivisectionist. The time perhaps will come when Chaplinsky [the Public Prosecutor of the Kiev court] will be replaced by some one anxious to produce the inciters of outrages against the Jews. What would you say if the choice fell on you for such a sacrifice?"

Apart from the significance of the Kievlianin's vitriolic criticism, there were other indications at the outset of to-day's proceedings that the prosecution was crumbling. The public prosecutor objected to the publication of the stenographic reports of the proceedings of the court as being in direct contravention of three articles of the criminal code, according to which witnesses must not be acquainted with the proceedings nor with the evidence adduced from previous witnesses. The court, however, overruled his objection, and the examination of witnesses was continued.

The testimony to-day, for the most part, was unimportant. Fourteen of Andrew Yushinsky's school-fellows were placed on the witness stand to-day. Two of them said that the police had threatened them with imprisonment unless they altered their testimony concerning the date on which they had last seen Yushinsky.

FRENCH JEWS PROTEST.

Say the Ritual Murder Myth Has Long Since Been Exploded.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—The following statement was issued to-day by the French rabbinical body in reference to the Kiev ritual murder trial:

"At the moment of the opening of the trial of what is described as a murder case in which is reiterated the accusation brought by pagans against the first Christians, and by which thousands of Jews suffered in mediaeval times, it is our duty to protest in the most energetic manner against the legend, which is judged to be without foundation by the leaders of different churches, savants, and eminent men in all countries.

"We do not think that the dignity of Judaism requires to be defended against an accusation to which the strictest prescriptions of our religion and the sentiments of our history give the lie; but we must stigmatize and denounce before the civilized world this attempt to revive a calumny thousands of times confounded, which is a gross insult to the truth and contrary to a religion which was the first to proclaim the inviolability of the human person and to give to this world the holy precept of love in the next."

PROTEST BY CZECH LEADERS.

Men of Social and Political Standing Sign Remarkable Document.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PRAGUE, Oct. 10.—A remarkable protest, signed by Czechs of high social standing, has just been published.

"It wrings one's heart," say the signatories to the protest, "to think of the fatal consequences which the trial of Beilis may have for millions of Russian Jews who, as it is, are living in utter misery. We fear that the Belils case will lead to new pogroms and fresh shedding of innocent blood."

Many prominent persons, including members of the Austrian Parliament, and of the Bohemian Diet, Professors at the Czech University and the Polytechnic High School Magistrates, artists, representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and, last but not least, Roman Catholic priests, are among those who signed the protest.

PLOT TO KILL YUAN AT INAUGURATION

Chief of Peking Police Admits He Was Bribed by Southern Rebels.

PRESIDENT TAKES THE OATH

Promises Confirmation of Foreign Treaties and Contracts—Manchus Congratulate Him.

PEKING, Oct. 10.—Chen, the Chief of the Peking mounted police, was arrested to-day while the ceremony of inaugurating Yuan Shih-kai as President of the Chinese Republic was in progress. He confessed that Southern rebels had bribed him to make an attempt to assassinate Yuan Shih-kai as the President was taking the oath of office.

Suspicion was aroused by Chen's persistent efforts to secure a position near the President during the ceremony. Several bombs were found in Chen's house.

President Yuan Shih-kai in his inaugural address avowed his intention of maintaining a firm and steady policy. He expressed the opinion that the first principle of Government was a clear definition and promulgation of its legal systems and the establishment and maintenance of public order. After this, he said, in compliance with the reuirements of time and circumstance efforts should be made to unite the people in their march along the path of progress.

The President admitted his preference for conservatiev rather than extreme radical methods; first, because he did not desire to risk the welfare of the people, and second, because he thought the ancient teachings and traditions of China should not be wholly swept away. He referred to the restrictions which had not allowed a free hand for the advance of the interests of the nation and asserted his intention of introducing reforms one by one in the present conditions of China.

The representattives of the foreign Powers were then received by the President, and on their behalf Luis Pastor, the Spanish Minister and Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, offered felicitations and expressed confidence that under Yuan Shih-kai's chief magistracy the cordiality of the relations between China and the foreign Powers would increase.

Yuan Shih-kai replied by expressing the friendly intentions of the Chinese Government toward foreign interests and declaring his sincere intention of observing all treaties, conventions, and other engagements entered into by the former Manchu and provisional Republican Governments with foreign Governments, and also all contracts duly concluded between former Chinese Governments and foreign countries and individuals. He said that all rights, privileges, and immunities previously enjoyed by foreigners in China would be confirmed.

NEW RUBENS DISCOVERED.

It Was Rejected by a Bavarian Museum—Has Master's Signature.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—A new Rubens has just been discovered in the Bavarian castle of Rosenberg, near Kronach, according to the Munich correspondent of The Temps.

This painting, representing a wine-harvesting scene, was turned out of the local museum because it was regarded as worthless. It is now found to bear the signature of Rubens and the date 1612, and authorities agree that it is a genuine work of the Flemish master.

Honeymoon at Cliveden.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 11.—The secrecy hitherto observed regarding the place where Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife would spend their honeymoon has led to much speculation.

The Daily Express to-day says it is able to state that the royal couple will stay at Cliveden, the beautiful residence of Waldorf Astor, M. P., on the Buckinghamshire side of the Thames.

PLEADS FOR RUMANIAN JEWS

Representative Chandler Quotes New Testament in Their Behalf.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Representative Walter M. Chandler, New York's only Progressive Party member in the House, made a speech to-day in behalf of a resolution concerning the treatment of the Jews in Rumania and the alleged violation of the Berlin Treaty guaranteeing equal treatment to all persons in the Balkan States. Persecution of the Jews, said Mr. Chandler, was contrary to the Scriptures.

"The last prayer of the Master of the Cross," he said, "must be made to repeal every earlier Scriptural prophecy or decree. 'Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do,' is the sublimest utterance in the literature of the world. It is the epitome of every Christian virtue and of all religious truth. This proclamation from the Cross repealed the Mosaic law of hereditary sin, placed upon a personal basis responsibility for offenses against God and man; and served notice upon future generations that those 'who know not what they do' are entitled to be forgiven. To believe that God ignored the prayer of Christ on the Cross, and that the centuries of persecution of the Jews which followed were but the fulfillment of prophecy and fate, is to assail the Messiahship of Jesus and to question the goodness and mercy of Jehovah.

"Jesus knew the full meaning of His prayer and was serious unto death. To believe that the Father rejected the petition of the Son is to destroy the equality of the Persons of the Trinity by investing one with the authority and the power to review, revise, and reject the judgment and petitions of the others.

"Let no persecutor of the Jew lay the unction to his soul that he is justified by the tragedy of Golgotha; for he who persecutes in the name of religion is a spiritual barbarian and intellectual savage. Let this same persecutor not make the mistake of supposing that the Jews are wholly responsible for the persecution that has been heaped upon them."

When going West use this Railroad Hotel de Luxe

Every railroad comfort that genius and money have produced and time has developed and proved is lavishly employed in perfecting the Lehigh Valley Railroad's Black Diamond Express, the pioneer all-parlor-car, all-steel train, New York to Buffalo and the West.

Luxury of appointments is visible on every hand. An always-open dining car, with a carefully selected list of good things to eat, is available at all hours. The employees of this road are specially trained in the art of being always attentive, but never obtrusive.

The rock-ballasted roadway and heavy steel rails make easy riding. Only anthracite fuel is used, eliminating cinders and soot and grime. And outside, almost seemingly selected with equal care, is the most picturesque landscape country east of the Rockies—the Switzerland of America.

Uprights, Grands and Player-pianos, $185 to $825 Cabinet Players from $50 Upward

This is your last chance, for several months at least, to secure such good instruments for such low prices. We do not hold "Sales" every two or three weeks. Loeser Sales are genuine and come but two or three times a year to dispose of the actual accumulation of instruments, most of which are slightly used.

It is the genuineness of this Sale which explains why, on the opening day, and all day long the Piano floor was crowded in a way that brought astonishment to most experienced Piano merchants from other places who came in to observe the results of our announcements.

30 Pianos Were Sold in the First 24 Minutes

Those who come today may secure high grade Pianos and Player-pianos, in first-class condition, at very much less than there is any hope of finding equal values soon again.

We Make Terms of Payment to Suit Our Customers

If you want to take advantage of the low prices and are not prepared to pay cash, we can arrange terms of payment that will meet any reasonable requirement. But your selection must be made TODAY if you would take advantage of the Sale.

FITZGERALD ASSAILS MITCHEL IN HOUSE

Says Fusion Candidate for Mayor Seeks to Drive Democrats from Power Here.

BACKED BY PARTY'S FOES

Resents Charge That the Organization Aims to Establish "a Government of Contracts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—A sensational attack on John Purroy Mitchel, Collector of the Port of New York and Fusion candidate for Mayor of New York City, was made in the House of Representatives to-night by Representative John J. Fitzgerald, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and one of the Democratic leaders in that body. He scored Mr. Mitchel for opposing the Democratic Party while holding an office to which a Democratic President had appointed him, by and with the advice and consent of a Democratic Senate. Mr. Fitzgerald's tone was bitter and he spoke with considerable feeling.

The occasion for the attack was an ironical refeence in a debate on the Urgent Deficiency bill by Representative Gordon of Ohio, to the spectacle of Tammany Hall, as represented by Mr. Fitzgerald, standing with Republicans and Western Democrats in opposing an effort to let down the bars for the appointment of partisans as deputies to Internal Revenue Collectors, United States Marshals, and Treasury Special Agents.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who is a Tammany man, said he was tired of hearing some Democrats vilify the organization under Tammany Hall.

"I sympathize with my colleagues in the West and North in their desire to have the offices filled by Democrats," he said. "But this does not always assure protection to Democrats. I want to call attention to the fact that the opposition o the regular Democratic organization in New York City put up a Fusion ticket and placed at the head of that ticket as candidate for Mayor a Democrat who was appointed to the office of Collector by the present Democratic President. This man was confirmed by a Democratic Senate, and yet this Democrat, while holding Federal office, is permitted to engage in warfare upon the regular Democratic organization.

"Every Federal office in the State of New York is filled with a bitter partisan Republican, and they are all actively engaged in an effort to elect the Fusion candidate at the expense of the Democratic ticket. What will happen to the Democratic members of Congress from New York this Fall if the great City of New York should elect as Mayor the Fusion candidate for the office?

"This Democratic official, who is the candidate of the Republican Party, nominated in a Republican primary, issued a statement that under no circumstances would he accept nor would he be the candidate of the Democratic Party, organized under the law, holding a primary conducted by officials under the law, but that he was the candidate of all the opponents of the Democratic Party, and that he desired to drive that party out of power. He charges that the Democratic Party in New York City desires to establish a government of corruption—a government of contracts as he characterizes it.

"Here is my colleague, the gentleman from New York, Mr. Goulden, serving honorably his fifth term in the House. Mr. Goulden is a candidate for president of the Board of Aldermen. Here is my colleague, Mr. Metz, serving his first term in the House. He was Controller of New York for four years and administered the duties of that office to the credit of himself and the party he represented. He is now a candidate for controller on the Democratic ticket. These two men are charged by this fusion candidate for Mayor—the incumbent of a big federal office in the City of New York—with being candidates of a party that is opposed to decency.

These two members have spent this long session of Congress carrying out the pledges of the Democratic Party to put on the statute books the Democratic Tariff bill. And at this very time the Democratic Collector of the Port of New York, a port which yields 67 per cent. of the revenues collected under the custom law, and who should be devoting all of his time to the work of his Federal office, is spending his nights and his days in abusing the Democratic organization.

"This is the man that is picked out b ythe Democratic Administration for the important office of Collector, and this is the man who is trying to tear down the Democratic organization. I have served in this House as a representative of New York Democracy for nearly sixteen years. I have no apologies to make for any act of my career here. I have said this for myself and for my colleagues from the City of New York, that we are just as patriotic, just as honest and just as sincere, and that it is our desire for decent, honest, efficient government as any other group of men in the House."

There was great applause when Mr. Fitzgerald finished.

SHEARS CONVICTION UPHELD

Appellate Division Says Restitution Is No Defense for Larceny.

The judgment of conviction of grand larceny against Broc R. Shears, ex-President of the Borough Bank of Brooklyn, was affirmed yesterday by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in that borough. Shears was President of the bank after its reorganization, in 1908. He was accused of appropriating to his own use a check for $3,334.60, which came into his hands as a Trustee of the Hollis Park Land Company, a depositor of the Borough Bank.

Shears's defense was that he had intended to pay back the money, and it actually was returned in his behalf when the defalcation was discovered. Shears was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, but he obtained a certificate of reasonable doubt, and was released on bail. Justice Carr, writing the opinion of the Appellate Division, upholds the lower court in its ruling that an intent to make restitution is no defense to a charge of larceny.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY.

To the question "What is a typical American?" one might anticipate as many answers as there are varying viewpoints in this nation of mingled races. The questioner's first impression would be that he was propounding a puzzle impossible of solution. It would seem logical that different standards of attractiveness should result in innumerable ideas as to what ought to constitute the best type. The American scion of Southern Europe, even a generation removed from his native land, might incline intuitively toward an ideal woman possessing languorous physical charm and romantic disposition. The descendant of Norsemen would perhaps find no elements of his ideal in any save the sturdy and intensely energetic type. So each citizen, unless he had become wholly merged into a new people having common impulses, would be expected to voice an opinion reflecting his inherited ideas.

Yet there must be an American type. The terms is too well established to be meaningless. Particularly is there a typical American girl. We are forever hearing about her. Our most skillful artists have pictured her, and though the details of their conceptions may vary slightly, she is always distinctive. There is about her something that we recognize instinctively, even if it is hard for us to express in words her distinguishing qualities. Like other ideals, she may defy adequate description; yet we know what she is, and sometimes we know who she is.

The typical American girl, in short, is the American's idea of what a girl should be. But as there are many Americans, the personalities which embody that idea are multifold, and there arises an opportunity for discussion. It is on the theory that such a discussion possesses a general appeal that THE NEW YORK TIMES has asked its readers to submit photographs showing the Girl of To-day as they know her. The merits of the photographs will be judged by seven artists whose pictures have come to be known as typical of the American girl. When the selections have been made, it is hoped that a hitherto vague ideal will have been made concrete; if we succeed in our quest the American girl of To-day will become more nearly a definite figure in the special pictorial section dedicated to that charming young person in THE TIMES's Christmas Edition.

BISHOP DENOUNCES LACK OF ALL SYSTEM

Lloyd Assails Episcopal Business Methods as Shown in Missionary Matters.

MARRIAGE REFORM URGED

Memorial to Convention Asks That Canon Be Amended to Require Health Certificate.

The business methods employed by the Protestant Episcopal Church in its missionary work were denounced yesterday by the Right Rev. Dr. Arthur S. Lloyd, President of the Board of Missions, at the General Convention of the Church. The House of Bishops and the House of Deputies held joint sessions in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, devoting the entire day to the reports of the Board of Missions and its auxiliaries, and the reports of the Bishops of Oklahoma, Wyoming, Idaho, and Atlanta on the "Conditions Confronting the Church in the United States in Its Extension Work."

Bishop Lloyd took as his subject "The Church's Mission at Home and Abroad; What Should Be Done to Further It During the Next Three Years." Bishop Lloyd said that he was impressed with the lack of business organization in the mission work of the Church by a visit which he made recently to the offices of one of the big corporations of this city. He found it to be the policy of that corporation to solicit new ideas and suggestions from its most remote agents. Whenever a suggestion was approved by the Directors, the agent, no matter whether we was on the opposite side of the earth, Bishop Lloyd said, was made to understand that he had the full support and financial backing of his company.

On the contrary the Protestant Episcopal Church, according to Bishop Lloyd, assumed exactly the opposite attitude toward its missionaries.

"There is no question that the Church is confronting tasks for which its present organization is inadequate," said Bishop Lloyd. "For example, hitherto we have taken no part in the work which must be done to help the newcomers to our shores to understand what true freedom depends on, except as individual dioceses have done what they could; the well-being of the State as well as the development of the Church's strength demands that the matter be delayed no longer.

"We should have no right to complain if the casual observer regards the Church as showing no sense of responsibility for the right use of the amazing power with which our Lord has endowed it. So far as 'organization' is concerned, the Church to-day, since it has become national, is practically the same as it was when our fathers were struggling to save it from perishing. There is no more unity of thought or action so far as the work of its missionaries is concerned than when Kemper was consecrated and sent to plant the Church in the countries to the westward.

"The Church is alone in seeming to cling to the theory that individualism is stronger than co-operation, but it goes further than that and almost displays genius in making it appear that the support its representatives received is personal favor, and is to be credited to generosity that finds pleasure in relieving distress.

"If I had the power to persuade, I would move that the Church take thought for a right organization and a working plan that would make her forget the thought of poverty which she knows does not exist in her enthusiasm for the work which challenges her endeavor. Such a plan would spell victory, and would be worthy of the splendid opportunity which challenges her courage and her statesmanship."

Millions for Missions.

The report of the Board of Missions showed that during the last three years offerings, gifts, and legacies, amounted to $3,797,006 as compared with $3,363,255 for the preceding triennium. Of this latter amount offerings and gifts amounted to $3,484,032, while the legacies were $312,974. The legacies of the present triennium were $105,000 less than the legacies received during the preceding three years, while the gifts from living donors amounted to $500,000.

In addition to the offerings and legacies the Board of Missions received and forwarded during the triennium special gifts amounting to $616,895. Including special gifts sent direct to the Bishops and the mission funds of individual dioceses, the Board of Missions estimated that "all gifts for the extension of the Kingdom" would reach a total of more than $6,000,000 for three years.

The Board of Missions reported that 130 new missionaries had been sent into foreign lands since the last general convention. During the fiscal year, 1912-13, appropriations were made in connection with the Church's work in the United States for the entire or partial support of twenty-three Bishops, 1,377 missionaries, clerical and lay, working in sixty-five dioceses and districts and the Canal Zone. The total appropriation for domestic work was $1,923,829.

In the foreign field, appropriations were made for nine Bishops, 232 foreign clergymen and foreign lay workers, and 1,001 native workers.

The total amount of appropriations for foreign missionary work was $2,214,926.

The General Convention was asked to authorize the Board of Missions to send a special deputation to Central America to study the situation there, in view of the proposal that has been made to transfer the ecclesiastical jurisdiction in whole or in part over Central America from the Church of England to the Church of America. The special deputation would make its report to the convention in 1916.

Work in Oklahoma.

Speaking on the subject, "In the Prairie States of the West," Bishop Thurston of Oklahoma said he was informed before he went West, that he would find himself preaching to a procession. In reality, he explained, he found "processions speaking to processions," for the ministers were as migratory as the rest of the population. He spoke against competition with other denominations in the missionary field, and was emphasizing his belief that all religious workers should be friends, when Bishop Tuttle, presiding over the joint session, cut his speech short at the end of the allotted fifteen minutes.

Bishop Thomas of Wyoming impressed the general convention with the need of more funds in his diocese in this way:

"About ten minutes before I came into the Cathedral," said Bishop Thomas, holding up a small red pasteboard box, "I opened this little box that I found on my desk this morning. In it I found this small cameo earring and a short note addressed to me by a woman, who preferred not to disclose her name. She says that after hearing my sermon last Sunday in Trinity Church, Brooklyn, she sends me her mite, with the direction that I turn it into money for Christ."

Bishop Thomas said he was willing to dispose of the trinket at auction. He held it up again before the convention, hesitated a moment, and said:

"I offer it to any person in the Cathedral for the small sum of $2,000."

The hush grew deeper, and when no bid was offered, Bishop Thomas descended from the pulpit.

Bishop Funsten of Idaho made a plea for more funds for his diocese for extension work. He said criticism directed against large contributions for missionary work by such men as Rockefeller was uncalled for.

The House of Bishops, for the first time in its existence, covering 129 years, will consider this morning a resolution that its sessions be open. This announcement was made through the Rev. Dr. Samuel Hart, Secretary of the House of Bishops, along with the announcement that the amendments to the Constitution brough over from the convention in 1910, and the report of the Commission on Faith and Order, would be made the special order of Monday at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Favors Eugenic Marriages.

At the morning session of the House of Deputies the following resolution was offered by the Rev. Dr. Tatlock of Michigan:

"Resolved, The House of Bishops concurring, that a joint commission of five Bishops, five Presbyters, and five laymen be appointed to consider the desirability of amending Canon 39, so as to require before the solemnization of marriage by a minister of this Church first, the publication of the banns of marriage of the Church or the publication of a civil license in some newspaper, and, secondly, the presentation on behalf of each of the parties desiring to be married of a certificate of a legally practicing physician, certifying that he or she is normal mentally and is not afflicted with a disease rendering marriage inadvisable."

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, Boston, who was elected over Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church of this city, as President of the House of Deputies, in an interview yesterday said that he would show no preference between "high" and "low" churchmen in the appointment of committes or recognition of the floor. Dr. Mann is regarded as the leader of the "low" church movement, which is expected to defeat the "high" church proposal to change the name of the Church, if it should be brought up at the present convention.

Likening his office to that of the President of the United States, Dr. Mann said that if he had not made equal appointments of "high" and "low" churchmen on the committees already named, it was because he had not learned the predilections of many delegates attending their first General Convention.

"It is the glory of the Church and makes to its catholicity that there is room for 'high,' 'low' and 'broad' stripe of churchmanship," said Dr. Mann. "If we are to recognize one to the exclusion of the other, we become no longer a catholic church, but degenerate into a mere sect. Whatever influence I may possess as President of the House of Deputies will be exerted to avoid such a lamentable occurrence."

The women of St. Agnes's Chapel and the Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, gave a tea yesterday to the delegates attending the sessions of the Woman's Auxiliary. The tea was served in the National Academy from 4:30 to 8 o'clock. President and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University gave a reception last evening for the Bishops and their friends at their home, 60 Morningside Drive.

CHURCH'S LIFE IN BOOKS.

Convention Delegates View at Columbia the Morgan Collection.

The most valuable and remarkable collection illustrative of the history of the Christian Church ever seen in New York was exhibited privately at Columbia University yesterday afternoon and last evening to the Deputies and Bishops in attendance upon the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Many of the delegates and their friends viewed the collection. The exhibition will be opened to the public at 2 o'clock this afternoon and will remain open until Nov. 8.

There are really two exhibits, one by the university in its library, and the other by J. P. Morgan in Avery Hall. The Morgan part consists of about 100 costly and beautiful illuminated manuscripts, and about 340 printed religious books. They were all purchased by the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and some of the manuscripts have never before been exhibited in public.

Mr. Morgan for many years had purposed to show these famous Bibles and missals, psalters, and Books of Hours when the General Episcopal Convention met in this city. He had this object in mind almost up to the time of his death, and, in fact, cabled instructions about this exhibition from Rome during his last illness.

The collection illustrates the history for almost 2,000 years of what has been called the Christian Church. There are in one of the exhibition cases two small Babylonian bricks, dating from about 2000 B. C., giving an account of the Deluge. Alongside are two cylinders telling the story of the Tower of Babel, executed by order of Nebuchadnezzar. From these ancient records down to de luxe editions of the Book of Common Prayer, shown in another case, a period of some 4,000 years is covered.

Among the earliest Christian works of great value are bindings of the Carlovingian and pre-Carlovingian eras. Most famous, perhaps, of these is the "Evangelia Quartier," the binding of which is probably the finest piece of Carlovingian work in existence. The upper cover is of brass and silver in high relief work, and is studded thickly with jewels. The lower cover is of Celtic origin and pre-Carlovingian. It dates from about 750 A. D. There are not so many jewels in it, but the workmanship is extremely fine.

The case next to this contains what is known as the "Purple" or "Golden Gospel," a manuscript of the late seventh or early eighth century, presented by Pope Leo X. to Henry VIII. as "Defender of the Faith" on account of Henry's pamphlet against Martin Luther. It is one of the earliest and greatest of a long series of illuminated mediæval manuscripts.

A beautiful and valuable copy of the "offices of the Virgin Mary" has a binding chiseled in gold by the famous Benvenuti Cellini. Its decorations are by Giulio Clovio, one of the greatest of illuminators. The work was executed for Cardinal Alexander Farnese in 1549. For hundreds of years it was in possession of the royal family of Naples. It was obtained by Mr. Morgan in 1903. It is known to collectors as the Morgan-Cellini-Clovio "offices." Its workmanship is of surpassing beauty.

Manuscripts of great interest are letters and documents in the handwriting of Erasmus, Luther, Melancthon, and other noted reformers. There is also a medallion portrait of Luther and his wife by Lucas Cranach.

Especially noteworthy among the printed books are the great Mazarin or Gutenberg Bibles of 1453, the "Biblia Pauperum," printed between 1450 and 1460; "Apocalypsis S. Joannis," an interesting block-book; the Latin Vulgate Bible of 1453-5 on vellum; the Psalms printed at Mentz in 1459; the "Golden Legend," printed by William Caxton in 1483 (1488); the Bible printed in German at Strassburg in 1466; in Geneva the "Breeches" Bible; the "Bishops' Bible"; the "She" and "He" Bible; Coverdale's Bible; King James's Bible; the Great Bible and Eliot's Indian Bible.

Works interesting by reason of their former ownership are Melancthon's "Questiones," Witenberg, 1557, and Bible, 1539; Queen Elizabeth's English Bible, 1553, and "Liber Precum," 1564; Ben Jonson's Bible, Antwerp, 1599; James I.'s Bible, 1608; Booke of Common Prayer, 1609; Bible, 1619, and Booke of Common Prayer, 1622; Izaak Walton's Bible, 1608; Charles I.'s "Liturgie Angloise," 1618; Booke of Common Prayer, 1636, and Bibles, 1638 and 1648; John Bunyan's copy of Foxe's "Book of Martyrs," 1641, and "Pilgrim's Progress," first edition, 1678; Charles II.'s "Eikon Basilike," 1648; Bible, 1660, and Book of Common Prayer, 1662; James II.'s "Form of Order of Thanksgiving and Prayer," 1687; William III.'s Book of Common Prayer, 1687; Queen Anne's Book of Common Prayer, 1700, and New Testament, 1704, and Sir Walter Scott's Bible, 1772.

In the university's exhibit are many interesting books illustrative of the American Church and a number of autographs of prominent Episcopal Bishops and clergy. One of the most notable objects is the mitre which belonged to Bishop Samuel Seabury of Connecticut, the first American Episcopal Bishop.

The Morgan collection will be open from 2 to 6 P. M. daily, Sundays included, from Oct. 11 to Nov. 8, and the university exhibit from 2 to 6 P. M. every weekday during the same period.

How the World's Series Is Being Reported on the Victor Typewriter

Of the thousands who see, and the millions who read about the World's Series, few realize what it means to report the news to the world. Minutes are nothing—it's split seconds that count!

Every strike, hit, run, error—the slightest action—must be in the newspaper and telegraph offices before the dust of the play settles.

The men at the telegraph keys in the press box are demons of speed and energy. At the other end of the line there are men who must receive every word as it is sent without delay or breakdown—excuses don't go.

That's why George F. Kerr, Press Manager, World's Series, for New York, placed Victor Typewriters in the Press Rooms at the Polo Grounds and the Press Headquarters at the Imperial Hotel.

That's why the Postal Telegraph Company uses Victor Typewriters for receiving such urgent news as the World's Series.

That's why Victor Typewriters are being used by such Famous Writers as

To them, confidence is everything. They have no time to nurse a writing machine. It must stand "the pound"—it must respond like a perfectly tuned-up racing car, and be ready to go at a mile-a-minute gait, not only to-day, but to-morrow, and next, next, next day.

That's why rapid-fire writers use the VICTOR. When the grueling is over, the VICTOR will turn out the most delicate correspondence, the clearest manifolding, that can be exacted of a typewriting machine. The VICTOR does not get out of alignment.

That's why the great industrial firms of the country are using the VICTOR in their offices for commercial purposes.

We can prove any of these claims to any one by a five-minute demonstration.

The price of the VICTOR is $100.00.

CANAL IS OPENED BY WILSON'S FINGER

Gamboa Dike Blown Away as President in Washington Presses Button.

SMALL CRAFT RUN THROUGH

Great Crowds Cheer as Waters of Gatun Lake Pour Into Culebra Cut—Col. Goethals Happy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Oct. 10.—With an explosion which shook the surrounding hills and threw huge rocks high into the air eight tons of dynamite were set off this afternoon by President Wilson touching a button in Washington, more than 4,000 miles away. Gamboa dike, the last obstruction in the Panama Canal, was swept away, and the dream of centuries became a reality.

Following the explosion at two minutes past 2 o'clock the waters of Gatun Lake, which have been flowing slowly into Culebra Cut for the last five days through five pipes thrust through the dike, rushed into the great cut, and the Panama Canal was completed except for the finishing touches and the dredging and widening of the channel.

Half an hour later intrepid canal workers, who had been hovering about the lake in canoes, turned the noses of canoes and launches into the rapids caused by the water rushing into the cut, and while a great throng on the bank cheered wildly and the whistles of locomotives and dredges shrieked a prolonged, piercing salute the first vessels to make the passage passed through in safety.

As Col. Goethals, the builder of the canal, viewed the practical conclusion of his great work his face was wreathed in smiles, and he turned, beaming, to receive the congratulations of his guests invited to witness the historic spectacle. These include Philippe Bunau-Varilla, chief engineer of the first canal company, and Congressman and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

Thousands of sightseers had journeyed from the City of Panama and from Colon in special trains. The crowds were kept 1,500 feet from the canal, but everybody obtained a splendid view of the event.

The passage of any sort of light-draught vessel through the canal now is possible, and to-morrow the big dredges will be floated into the cut from Gatun Lake and will commence eating into the slides in Culebra Cut and clearing up the remains of the dike destroyed to-day. In a few weeks vessels of heavy draught will be able to make the journey from ocean to ocean.

FEW SAW BUTTON PRESSED.

"Gamboa Is Busted," Said the President as He Turned Away.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—When President Wilson finished his lunch to-day he sauntered from the White House across the terrace to his office in the Executive Building, went to his desk and touched a button as if to summon his stenographer or a messenger. This simple little act detonated the dynamite stowed in the Gamboa dike, in the Panama Canal, and caused the greatest spectacle in the history of the construction of the world's greatest engineering work.

The special circuit had been set up early in the day and the telegraph companies stationed men at every important point en route to guard the continuous connection and prevent mechanical interference. A few minutes before 2 o'clock Chief Operator E. W. Smithers at the White House talked to Galveston, Texas.

"Is the cable ready?" he inquired.

"Yes," came the answer and soon Galveston announced that "PA," the telegraph call of Panama City, was heard. By agreement the operator at the White House made four distinct dots at twenty seconds before 2 o'clock. This gave the signal for the engineers at the Gamboa dike to be in readiness for the flash. They waited twenty seconds and on the dot President Wilson closed the key which sent the current into the dynamite apparatus.

"There, is is all over," smiled the President. "Gamboa is busted."

Then the President sent Col. Goethals, Engineer of the canal, a brief message of congratulation.

It was the wish of Col. Goethals that the Government await the actual opening of the canal before holding any ceremony. Beside the wreckage of the Gamboa dike there are two earth slides to be cleared away before large vessels can pass from ocean to ocean.

AMERICAN COLONY REJOICES.

London Gathering Toasts the Completion of the Canal.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—American business men in London gathered at the Savoy Hotel this afternoon, and Robert Newton Crane reminded the members of the company that the last impediment to the flow of water through the Panama Canal was being removed and asked them to drink this toast: "Here's to the Panama Canal, to those who conceived it, those who achieved it, and the event we celebrate in San Francisco in 1915."

The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, and Harold Cox, who subsequently gave a brief address on "The Curse of the Party System," congratulated the American people, as an Englishman, on the great work it had accomplished. Irving Cobb also spoke humorously.

PRAISE FROM BRITISH PRESS.

Canal "A Monument to American Engineering Skill."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The Daily News in an editorial on the Panama Canal says:

"The Panama Canal will stand for all time as a monument to the engineering skill of the American Nation in general and of Col. Goethals in particular. The conquest of pestilence by the Americans in the canal area will always mark an epoch in medical and sanitary progress."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"England to-day extends to the United States congratulations as hearty as those of any other nation. The whole civilized world, indeed, courage with which the Republic's engineers have overcame the countless and all but insuperable difficulties of a truly wonderful enterprise."

NAVAL PLAN SCHANGED.

Two Colonial Squadrons to Safeguard Commerce Through Canal.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The near opening of the Panama Canal gives special significance to the latest plan of an immense naval base in the Bermudas, which is said to have been practically agreed upon by the Colonial and Imperial Governments.

The original plan of a battleship and cruiser squadron to be composed of ships furnished by Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, to have Gibraltar as its base, failed to satisfy the colonies, but the new plan meets their enthusiastic approval. It is understood that it provides for two squadrons to be supplied by the colonies, one for Pacific service, with its base in alternate years at Sydney and Vancouver. The second squadron will join the present English fleet at Bermuda.

The new plan provides for the building of dockyards and a naval base for a powerful fleet, second only to the Home Fleet in strength.

The building of the Panama Canal is believed to have been instrumental in bringing the colonies and the mother country together on the imperial service squadron idea. The colonies now realize that the ships they furnish will not only help the mother country in time of need, but will also protect the commerce of the colonies passing through the canal.

HOW THE SPARK WAS FLASHED

News Received in New York One Minute After Explosion.

Weeks ago the hour of 2 P. M. had been set for the touch-off of the tons of dynamite which would unite Miraflores Lake and Culebra Cut. Telegraph and cable companies prepared to aid the engineers by having their lines cleared for the event.

According to the clock in the cable office of the Mexican Telegraph Company, 64 Broad Street, President Wilson pressed the electric button which set off the explosion at exactly 2:01 P. M. Sixty seconds later the report of the explosion had been flashed back over 4,000 miles to the Broad Street office, and the news was on the street almost instantly.

From the White House the route of the electric current which fired the dynamite was over a telegraph wire to Galveston. There connection was made with cable to Coatzacoicos, in the State of Vera Cruz, Mexico; thence it was relayed overland to Salina Cruz, in the State of Oaxaca; thence by cable to Panama, where connections were made with lines leading to the explosives in the dike.

There was no relay in the flashing of the news to New York. A telephone operator telephoned to the Panama office of the Mexican Telegraph Company and from there the report was flashed directly by cable to the Broad Street office. Manager Reynolds said yesterday that he took it from the operator at exactly 2:02 P. M.

LIEUT. COL. GAILLARD DYING.

Panama Engineer's Wife Is Summoned to His Bedside.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—While the ceremonies attending the practical completion of the Panama Canal were taking place to-day, Lieut. Col. David R. Gaillard, who directed some of the most difficult engineering feats in the Culebra Cut division, lay unconscious and dying in Johns Hopkins Hospital here.

An official bulletin issued this morning said that Col. Gaillard had passed a good night and seemed better. At an early hour, however, an orderly summoned Mrs. Gaillard to her husband's bedside. While no official statement could be secured at the hospital to-night, it is understood that his death is momentarily expected.

TEACHER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Found Unconscious from Gas, a Man's Photograph in Her Hand.

Miss Theodora Hooker, an assistant teacher in the Euclid Business School, 1,297 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, was found unconscious from gas evidently inhaled with deliberation, in her bedroom in the apartment house at 34 Jefferson Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday. A photograph of a man was clutched in her hand. None of the young teacher's friends or family could identify the original of the photograph last night. The young woman was taken to the Swedish Hospital, and late last night she had not been revived.

On a table in her bedroom were two letters, one addressed to "Mrs. T. A. Hooker, Holyoke, Mass.," her mother, and the other addressed to "E. A. Young, 1,297 Fulton Street," a teacher in the Euclid School. With the letters, both of which were sealed, was a penned not which read, "Please notify Charles Hermann and Mrs. Hooker." Charles Hermann is the Principal of the Euclid School.

Both Mrs. Hooker and her husband, Charles Hooker, a Manhattan merchant living in Plainfield, N. J., said that they knew of no reason why their daughter should attempt suicide. They could not explain the photograph found in her hand.

It is thought that Miss Hooker will live.

TO you who are quick to see a good thing and quicker to take it--these four novels by Gene Stratton-Porter which 3,000,000 people have already bought at full price are FREE. And this is why:

I Share a Prize with You

Mr. F. N. Doubleday of Doubleday, Page & Company has offered me $10,000 for a certain number of subscriptions for COUNTRY LIFE IN AMERICA, provided I get them within a few weeks. I've decided that the quickest way to get that $10,000 is to divide it with the public.

As the publisher says that I cannot cut the price of the magazine, I am giving you your share in the form of these four novels—the work of the most popular author living to-day.

The Little Country Office

I could not afford to make you any such offer as this if I were not down here in Locust Valley, on Long Island—a small dot only put on very big maps—where rent and light and heat and printing cost nearly nothing. But I'm near enough to New York to drop in and pick up for my customers some mighty good book things that nobody else ever hears about.

Send the coupon today without money. Get the four volumes free—and Country Life in America for a whole year.

Gene Stratton-Porter's
4 Novels Free

NEVER has there been an author so beloved. The publishers, enthusiastic themselves, have been overwhelmed by the demand for her books. When the last one was announced 150,000 people demanded it before it was bound. 50,000 waited for the second edition before it was printed. 50,000 waited a third edition.

PERHAPS this is because, to Gene Stratton-Porter, Nature is a living thing—intimate as our human neighbors are to us—perhaps because she really understands and can tell that harmony that deep down exists between a man and a woman and the great outdoors.

THESE are novels—exquisite in plot, in style, in conception—but they are more—they are literature—literature that will live. For she has reached the hearts of all the people as suddenly and as powerfully as did Dickens—and, like him, she will stay.

A GREAT Woman, Who Sees All Little Things—that is Gene Stratton-Porter, a daughter of pioneers who through wifehood and motherhood has preserved the fresh outlook and the loving faith of a little child.

BREEZY and open, glad and sweet are these books, so that in reading each page we understand why she is so big a figure in the book world—and at the same time why the little boy of her town says proudly to visitors: "Gee! I used to go fishing with her. She's all right! She knows so much she can pull a fishworm to pieces and put him together again."

IF you object to laughing and crying over a book, better not read these. And don't blame me if, after you read them, you go off and do something specially good for the rest of the world.

With Country Life in America for a Year

Each month for a year you will receive this magazine—with the beauty and charm of outdoor life—with invaluable information from John Burroughs, Ernest Seton Thompson, Jack London and others, with special departments on Dogs, Gardening, Decorating, etc., all perfectly printed on heavy lustrous paper and magnificently illustrated, in black and colors.

Send No Money

Cut off and send the coupon. It will bring the four volumes—all charges prepaid on approval. At the same time your name will be entered for Country Life in America for a year. If the books are not what you expect, send them back at my expense. Otherwise pay 50 cents when you get them, to cover expressage and packing, and $1 a month for four months thereafter for the magazine. The books are FREE.

I don't get the $10,000 unless I get the subscriptions within a certain time—and if I don't get the $10,000 I can't give you the books, in which case I will return your coupon. So you must send the coupon at once. Send it today and be sure to be in time.

EAGER FOR THE USE OF NEW SUBWAYS

Chairman McCall Emphatic in Indorsing South Brooklyn's Demand for Early Operation.

RUSHING WORK IN QUEENS

A Scandal, Says the Chairman, to Keep Money Tied Up in Unused Subways and Bridges.

When the Public Service Commission was urged yesterday by a deputation from South Brooklyn to hasten the operation of the Fourth Avenue Subway as far as Twenty-fifth Street, Chairman McCall struck the table with his fist and said:

"I call it nothing but a scandal to keep the money of the city tied up in subways and bridges, which are not being used, a moment longer than necessary."

Commissioner Eustis suggested that there might be difficulty in getting the equipment from the B. R. T. to operate the Fourth Avenue line.

"If we don't take a firm stand on this matter," retorted the Chairman, "they never will get that equipment."

The South Brooklyn folk went away happy with the assurance that they were likely to get their service about March 1. Another deputation from Queens did not have to put in a formal appearance, as Commissioner Williams obtained the adoption by the commission of a resolution calling on the Chief Engineer to prepare as quickly as possible plans for the extension of the Corona line from Sycamore Avenue across the creek to Main Street, Flushing.

Manhattan was not forgotten, as the Secretary was authorized to advertise for bids for the construction of the Seventh Avenue line between Beach Street and Commerce Street.

From returns given out yesterday by the Commission it appears that at the end of last month there was under contract $88,000,000 of work on the new dual system and that 7,000 men were employed every day. As a matter of fact $28,000,000 of this is already practically completed. The Loop Line is in temporary operation, and the Fourth Avenue line is only awaiting the completion by the Bridge Department of the connections over the Manhattan Bridge to be set going.

Although in Manhattan there has been no settlement of the two most important problems, the connections of the old Subway with the Lexington Avenue line at Grand Central Station and with the new Seventh Avenue line at Times Square, already some of the Lexington Avenue work is very far advanced.

Before the end of the year the commission hopes to have the plans for a great many of the gaps which still exist in the construction work ready and advertisements will at once be issued for bids. At present on the Seventh Avenue line only one section has been advertised, but it is expected that by the end of the year bids will have been invited at any rate for the whole of the work from the connection with the present Subway at about Forty-fourth Street to the Battery. In the same way, plans for the branch, which will run off from that line at Park Place down William Street to Brooklyn, should be ready for the contractors.

The B. R. T. Broadway subway is already under construction from Morris Street and Trinity Place to Twenty-sixth Street and Broadway, and in the next three months the other sections, which will carry it northerly to Fifty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue, and southerly under the East River to Montague and Fulton Streets Brooklyn, should also be put up for the competition of construction contractors.

No decision has yet been reached by the commission as to the final lay-out of the Times Square lines. In view of the strong feeling expressed by those who have their residences or offices in this neighborhood, it is believed it will alter its tentative plan for the location on the B. R. T. Broadway line of only a local station at Times Square, and will arrange for a great traffic exchange with a large mezzanine concourse as at Thirty-third Street at the terminus of the McAdoo tubes.

The decision as to the Grand Central connection depends on real estate questions. At present the diagonal station plan has been adopted subject to its being shown not to be unduly expensive. The New York Central has agreed to sell an easement under its property to the city for $500,000, which is an acceptable figure. In order to get under the Grand Union Hotel it will be necessary for the city to take the offer of the owners to purchase the entire property for $3,500,000 and sell the site again subject to the easement. The Controller's office has now under consideration the wisdom of such a deal as this.

IMPORTANT NEW BOOKS FOR

By FRANCIS ROLT-WHEELER

THE BOY WITH THE U. S. INDIANS

Fifth Volume of "U. S. Service Series." Profusely illustrated from photographs taken in work for U. S. Government. $1.50.

Each manuscript of this series is based on Government information specially furnished to the author, and rigidly examined at Washington. A good idea of a great field of National activity is given, and made thrilling by the heroism of those who do the work of "Uncle Sam." This is especially true of those engaged in work with and for the Indians—always a name to conjure with among boys.

By EVERETT T. TOMLINSON

A STORY OF PERRY'S VICTORY ON LAKE ERIE

Illustrated. $1.25.

The centennial of Perry's wonderful victory makes this book most timely. It is a story based upon the historical knowledge of an expert. It is interesting, stirring, informing, and patriotic. Many of our boys and girls do not know, and ought to be taught, the price paid for our liberties.

By A. NEELY HALL

UNCLE DAVID'S BOYS

Illustrated. Net, $1.00. Postpaid, $1.10.

This will interest both boys and girls from twelve upwards. It tells how some young people spent a Summer vacation full of good times, but with some unexpected and rather mysterious occurrences.

By NINA RHOADES

THE GIRL FROM ARIZONA

Illustrated. Net, $1.00. Postpaid, $1.10.

This is the best book yet written by Nina Rhoades, excellent and successful as are all the others. Marjorie Graham, the "girl," has grown to be fourteen without knowing more of the world than can be seen from a lonely Arizona ranch, although she has a vigorous body and a good mind. So when an uncle takes her to New York to be with her cousin of the same age, it is like going into a new world.

By GERTRUDE FISHER SCOTT

JEAN CABOT IN THE BRITISH ISLES

Second Volume of "Jean Cabot Series." Illustrated. Net, $1.00. Postpaid, $1.10.

This is a college story, although dealing with a Summer vacation, and full of college spirit. It begins with a Yale-Harvard boat race, described in the graphic style that made "Jean Cabot at Ashton" such a favorite, but soon Jean and her room-mate sail for Great Britain with Miss Hooper, a favorite member of the faculty.

By MAUD LINDSAY

A STORY GARDEN FOR LITTLE CHILDREN

Author of "Mother Stories" and "More Mother Stories." With introduction by Emilie Poulsson. Profusely illustrated by F. Liley Young. Net, $1.00. Postpaid, $1.10.

Equally suitable for home or school is this happily named, happily written "garden of stories" by an expert in the very difficult art of worthily interesting the little ones. It well deserves the warm commendation which Miss Poulsson graciously accords it. There are twenty stories, in large, clear type, and every detail has been planned to delight the eye and mind of our little people and those who love them.

By AMY BROOKS

DOROTHY DAINTY'S VACATION

Twelfth Volume of "Dorothy Dainty Series." Illustrated. $1.00.

No other new books for small girls are even claimed to sell like the "Dorothy Dainties," and they seem to grow better.

BERLIN BANKER IS HELD AS EMBEZZLER

Lindner, Traced Since He Left Germany in February, Arrested at a Hotel Here.

POSED AS RICH SALESMAN

Said to Have Won Confidence of Senator Fletcher and to Have Testified Before Senate Committee.

Paul Richard Lindner, a Director of the Land and Industrial Bank of Berlin, Germany, who in February last disappeared from Berlin, taking with him, it is charged, about 300,000 marks ($75,000) of the bank's funds, in addition to 45,000 marks ($11,250) he had obtained from friends and acquaintances, was arrested in the lobby of the Hotel Ansonia, at Broadway and Seventy-third Street, yesterday morning. Since Feb. 26 Pinkerton agents had been trailing Lindner about this country and Canada. Several times they almost caught up with him, only to have him give them the slip.

On Thursday night, however, they found him. He was living at 151 West Eightieth Street, and was known to his landlady there as a well-to-do German traveling salesman named R. P. L. Lenhard. The Pinkertons stationed guards near the house, with instructions to follow Lenhard when he came out yesterday morning. About 10 o'clock he appeared and walked to the Ansonia, where he was met by several persons who seemed to know him well.

According to the Pinkertons, Lindner left Berlin on Feb. 13 and fled to England. In London he booked passage for New York on the Cunarder Carmania and arrived here on Feb. 26. He went to the Great Northern Hotel, on Fifty-seventh Street, and registered as Richard Spitzer. He remained at the Great Northern a few days, and to several acquaintances he made there said he was going to Toronto, Canada, where he was going to close negotiations for the purchase of a large tract of land.

From New York the Pinkertons trailed the fugitive to various Canadian cities, then to Chicago, and a few weeks ago got the information that he was back in New York and was known by the name of Lenhard. They also learned that under an assumed name he had met Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida and that he had testified as an expert on agricultural matters before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, of which Senator Fletcher is a member. Everywhere he went, the information showed, Lindner had been received by the best people as a German gentleman of wealth and education.

At the Pinkerton offices, 92 Liberty Street, it was said yesterday that the charge against Lindner involved an alleged forgery of a date. It was said that Lindner paid a Mme. Herz about $1,500 for a three years' option on valuable property, the option to expire at the end of 1911. Lindner, it is alleged, changed the date of the expiration to 1914, and used the paper.

"THE EIGHTH YEAR IS THE MOST DANGEROUS YEAR IN THE ADVENTURE OF MARRIAGE."—Sir Francis Jeune (afterward Lord St. Helier), President of the Divorce Court of England.

THE EIGHTH YEAR

By PHILIP GIBBS

Author of "The Street of Adventure," "Helen of Lancaster Gate," "Intellectual Mansions," etc., etc.

A story that should be read before you get a license for life's greatest adventure—MARRIAGE.
A story that Husbands and Wives will read and re-read.
A book that Lawyers, Doctors, Divorce Court Judges and Ministers will read and commend.

MEN WILL SEE IN A NEW LIGHT THE PART THEY UNCONSCIOUSLY PLAY IN DRIVING WIVES TO INDISCRETIONS, OR TO THE RANKS OF THE SUFFRAGETTES.

"The story is superlatively excellent. It is brilliantly told. The dialogue is quick and real, and there is drama on every page."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Mr. Gibbs' vigorous book will be much discussed and deserves a wide sale."—Public Opinion.

"Written with all Mr. Gibbs' eloquence, enthusiasm and sympathy and with quite a remarkable infusion of the liveliest humor. His message is as plain as it is healthy and true."—Chronicle.

THE WIDOW'S NECKLACE

By ERNEST DAVIES

Author of "Dives and Son", "The Moment", etc., etc.

The best detective story of recent years. The finish, startlingly true to the life of today, offers a plausible solution of the mysterious jewel thefts at Newport and elsewhere.

Love, Jest, Romance and Robbery at a fashionable country-house.

American detectives match wits with a Scotch expert.

"In 'The Widow's Necklace' Mr. Davies has left you baffled till the last page. The finish was a complete surprise to me and most of Mr. Davies' readers will find themselves in the same position."—Punch.

"It is rather singular to find the author of 'Dives and Son' condescending to sensationalism. But he does it much better than the professors of the art. There is something startling in the last section. The reader comes in for a thrilling surprise. The whole story is excellent."—Daily News.

"Luke Johns, the Yankee detective, is a decidedly new character in fiction. Mr. Davies combines character, humor and literary charm with incident and sensation. The mystery is excellent. Mr. Davies has succeeded in lifting detective fiction to a higher level without sacrificing any of the thrills and mysteries. The 'Widow's Necklace' is certainly a book to be read."—Daily Express.

RUINED BY HUSBAND, MRS. WRIGHT SAYS

GOT IN DEBT BY HIS ADVICE

He Counseled Her to Build Expensive House—With Reduced Allowance Fears Foreclosure.

Mrs. Barbara Mills Lent-Wright, wife of Arthur E. Wright, Vice President of the International Paper Company at 30 Broad Street, has begun an action in the Brooklyn Supreme Court for separation from her husband on the charge of cruelty. She asks alimony at the rate of $10,000 a year. Part of this is needed immediately, she says, as she fears that mortgages upon two pieces of her property may be foreclosed.

Shortly after she incurred certain financial obligations, says Mrs. Wright in her complaint, her husband left their home at 54 Midwood Street, Brooklyn, and "paid most devoted attention to another woman." Thereafter her allowance of $10,000 per year, dropped to $5,000, and in September she received nothing. He told her "long ago," she adds, that his salary was $15,000 per annum, and she believes it is $25,000.

Among the specific complaints Mrs. Wright makes as of recent date, she says that about June 29, 1913, while riding in an automobile with others from Long Beach, L. I., to Brooklyn, she objected to her husband's attentions to a woman in the party, and he called her a "brute." At their home the same night, she charges, in mentioning some of his women friends, he reminded her that one was a "cultured lady." Then he made this reference to herself:

"You are a fat sow, and everybody that I introduce you to says the same thing. You put me in mind of a servant girl when dressed up."

Critical remarks concerning her mother and daughters from her husband are also made part of the complaint. She charges that her husband struck her on the breast, tore jewelry from her clothing and threw it on the floor. He followed this up on the same date, June 29, by hitting her three or four times in the face, knocking her down and kicking her.

At the time of her marriage, Mrs. Wright received from her husband the deed for the house at 54 Midwood Street, in which they lived. In a supporting affidavit to her general complaint she alleges that her financial difficulties are due to her husband.

"During the Winter of 1914," she says, "he continually urged her to undertake extensive repairs upon the home at 54 Midwood Street, and advised her to use the few thousand dollars she had in the savings bank to purchase a lot at Long Branch and build an expensive Summer home. He promised if she did this to continue as in the past to give her annually $10,000."

Consequently Mrs. Wright ordered repairs to the house at a cost of $5,000. She drew out her savings to buy the Long Beach lot and began to build a house there at a cost of $15,000. After being abandoned by her husband her funds gave out and she was unable to pay the contractors.

"I was compelled to mortgage the property at Long Beach for $7,500 and to place a mortgage of $6,000 on my home, and yet could not raise sufficient funds with which to pay all claims," says Mrs. Wright in her complaint. "Liens have been filed, and I fear my property may be lost by foreclosure proceedings."

Mrs. Wright, while she retains possession of her home, is living with her married daughters in Manhattan. Her husband has an apartment at the Plaza. He had nothing to say there last night regarding his wife's suit.

TWO "BIG TIM" WILLS FILED.

One Is Dated October, 1907, and the Other March, 1894.

Two wills of "Big Tim" Sullivan has been filed for probate in the Surrogates' Court. One executed by the late Congressman on Oct. 6, 1907, was filed several weeks ago, with Ellison & Ellison as attorneys of record. In this the entire estate was bequeathed in equal shares to Sullivan's sisters, Margaret Hickey, who was Miss Mulligan, and Mary Ann Sommers, and to his brothers, Patrick H. Sullivan and Lawrence Mulligan.

The other will, executed on March 2, 1894, was filed on Thursday, by William McM. Speer, the executor. In this, Sullivan's estate is bequeathed in equal shares to Helen Sullivan, his wife, now deceased; Margaret Mulligan, his sister, and Sarah G. Sullivan, whose relationship to the Congressman, if any existed, is not set forth.

ITALIAN CAFES LOSE LIGHT WINE STOCKS

THEIR DEFENDERS APPEAR

County Official and the Rev. Dr. Bevan Say It Is Unjust to Exact High Tax from Them.

State Excise Commissioner William W. Farley and Deputy Commissioner Thomas T. McAvoy at the head of a corps of their inspectors entered forty-five Italian restaurants and cafés in the neighborhood of Mulberry, Hester, and Bleecker Streets and West Broadway yesterday and confiscated eight truck loads of alcoholic beverages being offered for sale without the authority of a State license. Besides a large quantity of bottled goods, more than 250 barrels of Italian wine were seized. The raids were made with "search and seizure" warrants issued by Supreme Court Justice Newburger, and they were immediately provoked by complaints received by the Excise Commissioner from Italian liquor dealers holding State licenses. No arrests were made, but it was said at the Commissioner's office yesterday that the most flagrant offenders would be prosecuted.

In one of the restaurants when the raid was made, was the Rev. Dr. William L. Bevan, Professor of History in the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and associate editor of The Churchman, a Protestant Episcopal Church weekly published in this city.

Dr. Bevan, who is in New York on leave of absence from Sewanee, was eating lunch. At The Churchman office, he spoke strongly in favor of the restaurants, and represented their side of the question.

"The proprietors of the great majority of these Italian restaurants," he said, "are not criminals or willing violators of the law, but they are the victims of an unjust excise system. Their little places are the rendezvous for many respectable Italians and uptown patrons who like the Italian cooking. One can go to almost any of them and obtain a delightful meal for from 30 to 60 cents, which is as much as many who eat in them can afford to pay.

"Now, a light wine is an essential part of an Italian meal. It is not drunk to excess, and the better class of Italians do not in any way consider it a dissipation to drink it. But the wine is sold for very little, generally for from 50 to 60 cents a quart, and the profits of the restaurants selling it do not run high. Yet the proprietors of these restaurants are asked to pay $1,200 a year for a State license—as much as is demanded of the proprietors of expensive restaurants and cafés in the Tenderloin. This situation is absurd and unjust. If the proprietor of a little Italian restaurant can afford to pay $1,200 a year for a license, then, by comparison, the proprietor of a great hotel can afford $12,000 a year. It is absurd to ask as much from the homelike little Italian restaurant where light wine is served in small quantity as part of a meal as is required of the gilded café where the most expensive drinks are sold."

A New York County official, who lived for many years among the Italians, firmly defended the respectability and good citizenship of the better class of restaurant proprietors. He said that when some of them were arrested and fined or sent to prison, however, they were made to dislike and fear the law and came into contact with criminals who contaminated their natures. He told of one restaurant which he said was once "the meeting place for the most interesting and intellectual men he knew," but which is now out of existence. The proprietor, he said, attempted to run without selling wine, and failed before a year was out.

The proprietors were all greatly disturbed. "What shall we do?" they asked. "We don't make $1,200 a year, so how can we pay the license? Yet we must sell wine with our meals or fail. We would gladly pay a fair license fee, but that will not be accepted. We do not know what we can do."

Celebrate Their Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Birrell celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last night with a dinner to twenty of their friends in the state apartment of the Waldorf. Mr. Birrell is Treasurer of the Pan-American States Association and an ex-Deputy County Clerk. Mr. and Mrs. Birrell were married on Oct. 10, 1888. Mrs. Birrell before her marriage was Mary E. Sarles of this city. The couple received many handsome presents from their friends. Among the guests were Job E. Hedges, Otto A. Dietz, Mr. and Mrs. J. Van Vechten Olcott, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Pinner, Henry G. Northrup, Mrs. E. P. Jenkins, Mrs. Sheppard Knapp, and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hosier.

NEW HAVEN WRECK KILLS ONE, HURTS 11

THREE OF INJURED MAY DIE

Electric Car Smashes Like an Egg Shell When It Meets Train on a Single Track.

WESTFIELD, Conn., Oct. 10.—As the result of a head-on collision here at 8 o'clock to-night on the Berlin branch of the New Haven Road between a Middletown-bound steam train and a Meriden-bound electric car, one person was killed and eleven injured, three perhaps fatally.

THE DEAD.

RALPH A. BLYDENBURGH of Middletown, city editor of The Middletown Penny Press, instantly killed.

THE INJURED.

JOHN G. ETLEY of Mount Vernon, N. Y., ribs broken; probably fatally injured.

OTTO STORNOLD, Meriden, a waiter, fractured jaw, fractured leg, and internal injuries.

Miss FRANCES FLORIAN, Rock Fall, fractured skull.

EPHRAIM HINES, Middletown; conductor of the trolley car, fractured wrist and tibia.

BENJAMIN LORD, Middletown; motorman of trolley car, fractured leg.

MICHAEL CRONIN, Portland; body bruised.

Mrs. ROBERT MATHISON, Middletown, fractured leg, scalp wounds.

CHARLES EHRENS, Middletown, cuts and bruises.

ADAM BRAWER, West Cromwell, cuts and shock.

Miss ANNA DUTTING, Middletown, lacerations of body.

The crash occurred near the local station. There is a single-line track from this place to Middletown, which branches off at a junction here, one line going to Berlin and the other to Meriden. It is said that through a misunderstanding of orders the trolley left Newfield, a few miles to the east on the single track, where it should have remained on a siding. The Middletown-bound steam train got orders to proceed, it is said, and a few moments later the collision occurred on a straight track.

The train, as is the custom, was backing toward Middletown, with the engine pushing. The front of the trolley was smashed like an eggshell. Nearly every passenger in the trolley was injured more or less. Passengers on the steam train rushed out and did what they could to assist the injured.

Mr. Blydenburgh, who was killed instantly, was one of the best-known newspapermen in Central Connecticut.

POPULAR GOVERNMENT

Its Essence, Its Permanence, and Its Perils

By WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT,
Kent Professor of Law at Yale University.

Sane, deliberative and suggestive, this book contains Professor Taft's discussion of popular government under the Federal Constitution. The subject is one of peculiar interest and delicacy in this decade of attacks upon the justice of our inherited law, and the author handles it frankly without partisanship in questions either political, sociological or economic. The two notable addresses delivered by Mr. Taft before the American Bar Association in Montreal in September are included in the volume.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

An Obsolete Shibboleth

By HIRAM BINGHAM, F. R. G. S.,
Author of "Across South America."

The publication of this searching study of the MONROE DOCTRINE has caused a national sensation. The author's contention that the MONROE DOCTRINE in its present form is untenable and founded on false premises is upheld by an impressive array of facts. No more significant book has been published in the past decade from the standpoint of a patriotic American.

"His exposition of the fruits of the MONROE DOCTRINE is clear and concise. * * * The time will certainly come when the United States should gravely consider whether this policy is worth while. * * * The MONROE DOCTRINE is obsolete. Is the expense of maintaining it justifiable?"—Boston Transcript.

POLITICIAN, PARTY AND PEOPLE

By HENRY CROSBY EMERY, Ph. D., LL.D.,
Professor of Political Economy in Yale University.

Professor Emery speaks as a man who believes in the term "practical politics" used in its right sense. His book is illuminating in its definite analysis of the existing machinery of government. Maintaining a rigid standard of ethical responsibility, he shows how existing conditions can be adapted to the highest uses. His book differs from the usual treatment of political duties in that it deals with things as they are.

LATEST AUTUMN NOVELS

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED
By DOLF WYLLARDE
Author of "The Career of Beauty Darling," "The Unofficial Honeymoon." Cloth. $1.30 net.

Dolf Wyllarde's new novel has for its motive the paramount importance of the new generation—the standing aside of those who have had their day to give place to the young.

THE GOLDEN HOLLOW
By RENA CARY SHEFFIELD
With a Colored Frontispiece by Earl Stetson Crawford. Cloth. $1.00 net.

A book as fresh as the woods after a rainstorm. If ever a character in fiction seemed able to step from the covers of a book—a flesh and blood reality—it is this Barbara of the dreaming soul.

A 'YOUNG LADY'
By HORACE W. C. NEWTE
Author of "Sparrows," "Pansy Meares," etc. Cloth. $1.35 net.

By far this author's ablest novel. It is an absorbing study of suburban snobbery, caustic and humorous and understanding.

A VAGABOND IN NEW YORK
By OLIVER MADOX HUEFFER
With 8 Illustrations. Cloth. $1.00 net.

THE OPINIONS OF JEROME COIGNARD
By ANATOLE FRANCE
Octavo Cloth. $1.75 net.

The Abbe Coignard, professor of oratory, is one of Anatole France's best creations. In this new volume we are able to get the brilliancy and wit of the Abbe's conversations and the naive reflections of his pupil.

CONCESSIONS
By SYDNEY SCHIFF
Cloth. $1.25 net.

THE WORLD'S DAUGHTER
By CYRIL HARCOURT
Cloth. $1.25 net.

A picturesque tale of love at first sight. A theme, in a sense daring, but not in the least offending.

A Woman's Diary by MARCELLE TINAYRE
Cloth. $1.25 net.

A woman of thirty-five, with a grown son and daughter, but with the freshness of soul of a child, presents in this book all manner of acute reflections on our modern existence.

STELLA MARIS (Third Edition)
By WILLIAM J. LOCKE
Author of "The Beloved Vagabond," etc. 8 Illustrations. Cloth. $1.35 net.

APRIL PANHASARD
By MURIEL HINE, author of "Earth," etc.
Cloth. $1.35 net.

An excellent novel with a delightful atmosphere and a plot that the reader will follow with interest. Though the scene is set in rural England, a charming young American plays the part of the hero.

MRS. PANKHURST TO COME DISGUISED

Militant Leader Cables She Will Not Arrive on the Provence and Will Assume a Name.

DEFIES MAN-MADE LAWS

But Commissioner Can Hold Her at Any Time She Is Identified—Dr. Shaw Cuts Meeting.

In a cablegram received here yesterday Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant leader, challenges "man-made government," such as that having its headquarters at Washington, to catch her, if she really wants to come into this country, in spite of all Governmental prohibition.

Incidentally, while she tests the man-made rules at Ellis Island, Mrs. Pankhurst proposes to test the power of a woman to keep a secret, for she declares in the cablegram announcing her intentions that she will confide the things she does not want the representatives of "man-made government" to know to Miss Joan Wickham, her representative in this country.

In her effort to outwit the Government officials Mrs. Pankhurst will come here, she says, under an assumed name and on some steamship other than the one on which it was announced that she would sail.

Miss Wickham received this cablegram yesterday:

Miss Joan Wickham, New York:
I understand that the United States immigration authorities will detain me, questioning my right of entrance into the United States. I have therefore changed my plans and will not sail on the Provence, but will take another ship under an assumed name to test the efficiency of man-made government. I will wireless you the day before I sail in confidence.
EMMELINE PANKHURST.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont expressed herself as keenly delighted when she heard of Mrs. Pankhurst's plan to try to pass Ellis Island without being detected. Mrs. Belmont said that she would be ready with a bond of $100,000 for Mrs. Pankhurst should the immigration officials succeed in capturing her and sending her to Ellis Island for examination as to her fitness to land.

The attitude of the Ellis Island officials, when they learned of Mrs. Pankhurst's plan, was one of complete indifference.

"It will certainly not cause us to make any special efforts to detect Mrs. Pankhurst," said Acting Commissioner of Immigration Uhl last night. "In case the department should desire to apprehend her it makes not the slightest difference whether she is taken aboard the steamship on which she arrives or anywhere else she may be within the period of her stay. The law provides that we may take an undesirable immigrant at any place within the United States during the period such alien remains liable to deportation."

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, the President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, refused yesterday to speak at the Madison Square Garden with Mrs. Pankhurst on Oct. 19, when she found that Mrs. Pankhurst was to be paid a guarantee, to have a share in the gate receipts, besides a collection which will be taken up. There will be nothing for the work of the suffragists in America.

Dr. Shaw issued a statement saying she would not speak with Mrs. Pankhurst unless $1,000 was paid to the Treasurer of the National Suffrage Association for American suffrage work. Dr. Shaw adds:

"I consented to speak, with the understanding that I be permitted to state, what seems to me, judging from wide observation, the attitude of American suffragists to militant methods. I felt that, in making such a speech at this time, I should be serving the best interests of our suffrage movement. While talking with Mrs. Belmont, my one feeling was my obligation to serve our American interests.

"Since then, upon taking into consideration the fact that this meeting is being arranged and financed by a group of business men, I have decided that I should not be fulfilling my entire obligation to our cause in America without recognizing its financial as well as moral interests. In common with leading national suffragists, I think that since Mrs. Pankhurst is guaranteed $1,500 and a percentage of the gate receipts, and is also to be permitted to take a collection and to secure pledges (which Mrs. Pankhurst's agent has urged American suffragists to secure in advance), a share in the proceeds of the meeting should be secured for our work in this country.

"I, therefore, wrote Mrs. Belmont that I would not speak unless the Treasurer of the National Association received a check for $1,000 to be used for our work. Mrs. Belmont has written me that she is not in control of the financial arrangements for the meeting, but in her letter she does take the responsibility of stating that the arrangements have been made and are final. I shall, therefore, take other means than the meeting in Madison Square Garden to reassure the American public that militant methods have never been used and are not advocated in this country."

MILITANTS ATTACK DOCTORS.

Smash Windows in Protest Against Forcible Feeding.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The service in Westminster Abbey this afternon was interrupted by seven women who at the conclusion of the third Collect began to chant: "God save Mary Richardson and Jane Short! They are being forcibly fed in prison!" They repeated this three times, when two vergers reached them and escorted them to the door.

Early this morning the windows in the houses of several West End physicians were broken by suffragettes as a protest against forcible feeding in the Holloway Prison. One of the principal victims was Sir Thomas Barlow, the King's physician, who had three windows smashed.

MILITANTS HURTING CAUSE.

Mrs. Nathan Thinks Suffrage Is Further Off in England.

Arriving on the Cunarder Lusitania yesterday was Mrs. Frederick Nathan the suffrage leader who has been abroad for the Summer attending various conventions and congresses in Europe. At Budapest she attended the International Congress of Women's Clubs at which twenty-seven nationalities were represented, she said. Afterward Mrs. Nathan went to The Hague to attend the Peace Conference where she presented a flag sent by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

When asked about suffrage in England Mrs. Nathan replied that she was not a militant and thought that the English women were further away from their goal now than they were two years ago, and all because of the militant methods that had been used there.

PROPHET PRAISES CARNEGIE

In Persian Coloring Abdul Baha Abbas Sends Him a Message.

Praise for Andrew Carnegie in the poetic prose of a Persian prophet is contained in a letter received yesterday by Tapakeyan Kahn, Persian Consul General in New York. The letter was written in Egypt by Abdul Baha Abbas, the aged prophet of the Bahai creed, who visited this country last year to advocate universal peace and to say farewell to his followers upon this earth.

Abdul Baha Abbas was entertained while here by the 100-odd members of the New York Bahai Society. He spoke of the world peace movement at a religious service in the Church of the Ascension, and declared his faith in the final unification of all religions at the Lake Mohawk conference for 1912. His message of praise sent here for Mr. Carnegie is on account of the work of the Carnegie Peace Foundation.

"O thou respected and beloved personage," he writes in addressing the Persian Consul General, "convey on my behalf the utmost kindness to the respected lady, thy revered wife. I continually pray in her behalf and beg divine protection and preservation. Kiss also the two cheeks of thy beloved child on my behalf.

BENSON HIT HARD FOR STAGE ATTACK

Charles Frohman Says Stratford Players Are Too Provincial to Act in New York.

NOT WANTED, SAYS SHUBERT

Frazee Says First Unclean Plays Came from London—E. H. Sothern Says Benson Is Misinformed.

If the ears of each member of the Board of Governors of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre in England did not tingle yesterday it was because tingling had gone out of fashion in Stratford-on-Avon, for within a few minutes after theatrical managers in New York read in yesterday's Times that the players of that organization would not be sent to New York because the stage of this city was "too wicked," they began to express themselves in no uncertain terms about the English organization and about F. R. Benson, who has charge of the American tour of the company.

Actors, too, many of them well known Englishmen, resented Mr. Benson's attack on the stage of New York and most of them took the view that the company knew better than to attempt to come into New York following the Shakespearean productions of E. H. Sothern and Sir Johnstone Forbes Robertson. The former was more kind in his criticism of the Benson organization than most of the actors or managers, while the latter, who is a close friend of the English manager, would not talk on the subject at all but said that New Yorkers seemed to want Shakespeare if the box office receipts at the Shubert Theatre, where he is playing, were any criterion.

Views of Charles Frohman.

Charles Frohman, who seldom can be prevailed upon to say anything about any organization other than his own, declared last night that the reason Mr. Benson would not be seen in New York was because the Benson Company is not sufficiently high in the acting profession. Lee Shubert voiced the same sentiment, declaring that he doubted if the English company could get a theatre here in which to play until they had demonstrated their ability as actors and actresses.

"Mr. Benson's announcement that he will not play in New York because the stage here has fallen into what he considers a low plane is deliciously comic," said Mr. Frohman. "The simple fact is that Mr. Benson and his company will not apear in New York because New York is no more of a provincial city than London is. The Benson players know that they are too provincial ever to play in London, and realize that the same fact will militate against their appearance in New York. Mr. Benson's organization in England represents what Mr. Sargent's school of acting stands for in this country—only the Benson school is a traveling school of acting and the Sargent school is stationary. The Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon is also a comic idea. A beautiful little town, where it is said Shakespeare is buried, has built a beautiful memorial theatre, which is opened each year for a six weeks' revival of Shakespearean plays which people attend in great numbers, only because they are acted by stars from London theatres, like Sir Herbert Tree, Arthur Bourchier, Irene Vanbrugh, and the Terrys.

"If Mr. Benson could bring such actors as these to America, New York would receive him with open arms; but as his own organization is simply a traveling provincial company, there is no more reason for Mr. Benson trying to enter New York than for him to try to enter London. One realizes at once the primitiveness of the Benson organization when one knows that, on its travels about the little towns in England, the Benson company makes known its presence by parading through the streets, as American minstrels do. But one ought not to criticise the Benson announcement; for after all, it is only Mr. Benson's best possible accounting for the fact that New York will not have him. And toward Mr. Benson personally, as toward Mr. Sargent in this country, every manager cannot but feel grateful for the training both men afford amateurs, and for their frequent development of really good actors. However, we must be clear on one point—Mr. Benson will not avoid New York because our stage has fallen too low for him; on the contrary, New York will not have Mr. Benson and his organization because they are not sufficiently high up in the acting profession. But there are provinces in America as there are in England; and in the American provinces, as in the English, Mr. Benson will no doubt be gladly welcomed."

Benson Taking No Chances.

H. H. Frazee said that any nastiness on the New York stage had its origin in England. "We never knew what it was to put on anything unclean here," said he at the Long Acre Theatre last night, "until the English gave us 'The Second Mrs. Tanqueray,' 'The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith,' and plays of that sort. The reason Mr. Benson is not coming to New York is because he is taking no chances. New Yorkers are not going to accept him and his company because England thinks they are good. It would be just like sending a show out to Chicago and saying 'Take it, it's great because New York likes it.' You've got to show Chicago, and you've got to show New York. Mr. Benson knows that there has never been an English actor or an English company, at least so far as I can recall, who made a financial success on the first visit to New York, and this takes in Forbes-Robertson, Mrs. Pat Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, and many other leading English stars."

All that Lee Shubert would say was that "the attempted insult to the stage which supports E. H. Sothern, Maude Adams, William Faversham, John Drew and a host of other actors and actresses who are gentlemen and ladies, should not be dignified by an answer, but before Mr. Benson talks about not coming into New York he should attempt to find out whether or not he could get a theatre here in which to play."

As one of the best known English actors, Guy Standing, is especially qualified to pass on topics which compare the English with the American stage. Mr. Standing, having spent the past five years in England, does not speak from hearsay in his criticism of the Benson players, nor is he afraid to imply motives for their ban of New York.

"Mr. Benson's reasons for leaving New York out," said Mr. Standing last night at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, "are, to say the least, most extraordinary. His stated objections might just as well apply to Paris, and, of late years, certainly to London where managers of so-called 'legitimate' attractions are face to face with bankruptcy, while the public flocks to musical comedy, music halls and revues, some of the latter of so startling a character that they should not be spoken of in the same breath with attractions in New York called by the same name.

"But returning to Benson and his players who are too pure and 'highbrow'—I believe that is the word—for New York, you must understand that he is in London, very—very—ah, VERY seldom."

"Mr. Benson seems to forget," said Winthrop Ames, "that New York takes more joy in exploiting the sins of one sinner than commenting on the virtuous deeds of the ninety and nine. He forgets that while discussions over the morality of two plays were occupying the front pages of the newspapers Forbes-Robertson was playing to capacity audiences, and Marlowe and Sothern were appearing in Shakespearean repertory to audiences at least as large as those drawn by these two plays at the height of their notoriety. And what of all the other plays of good character which were running simultaneously?

"There are more than forty theatres in New York, I believe, all of them doing more or less business, and of these theatres one or two only have plays of questionable character. To my mind the distinction between the play that is clean and the play that is not is perfectly clear. It all depends on the author's intention. If it is the serious purpose of the author to teach a lesson, then a play cannot possibly be anything but clean. But if the author's intention is in reality a mere pretense of teaching a lesson, and if with this end in view he accumulates a series of salacious episodes to create a sensation and excite public comment, the play is not clean. And the author's intention will inevitably show in the play."

Misapprehends, Says Sothern.

"I can quite understand," said E. H. Sothern, "that the Governors of the theatre at Stratford-on-Avon, probably not acquainted with New York, and hearing that there are a number of plays now on the boards dealing with white slavery: that there is much talk concerning them—it is quite reasonable that these Governors should think that the entire city is given over to that kind of entertainment. Particulars of these plays having been cabled to England, the Governors of the theatre at Stratford, many of whom I know and who are admirable people, having a heavy financial enterprise on their hands, were doubtless afraid that their venture would not meet with financial success. It would be folly to conclude, because a dismembered female body is found in the East River, that it is a matter of hourly occurrence; that ladies were more likely to lose their heads here than elsewhere.

"At this particular moment, because nothing new, it is not worthy of being cabled abroad, that for twelve years Miss Marlowe and myself have played nothing but Shakespeare to large receipts, and that Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson is now appearing in Hamlet to capacity houses. Being unaware of these facts, the good people of Stratford having this enterprise in hand feared that New York would prove barren soil.

"I have seen Mr. Benson's company in England, and I think he has every chance to make a big success, and I hope he comes and proves what he and his company are capable of doing. Every Shakespearean company of worth which has played in New York has always been given careful attention, and Mr. Benson and his organization being a novelty, would attract more notice than we receive. I am quite sure that he would have a splendid welcome from the press and the public of New York. I hope he will reconsider the matter and favor this city with his magnificent performances.

"The Benson company has been the forcing ground for Shakespearean actors for nearly a quarter of a century, and for an actor to say that he has been with that manager is a recommendation anywhere. Mr. Benson misconprehends the public of this city. New York is big enough to have ten kinds of tastes for ten kinds of drama."

London Drama Decadent.

Bayard Veiller, author of "The Fight" and "Within the Law," views Benson's attack upon the condition of New York drama as either inane or extremely clever.

"I hardly think that any one interested in the theatre will take Mr. Benson's remarks seriously," said Mr. Veiller, last evening at the Hudson Theatre. "I doubt whether Mr. Benson takes them seriously himself.

"It is ludicrous to speak of the 'bad' state of plays in New York. Even English managers are forced to admit that the drama in London is now notoriously decadent. Nearly all the plays produced there are futile in their conception and insipid in their treatment. The English public are tiring of the output of their managers and dramatists. The playhouses are only half full. The foremost managers are complaining of the lethargy of the audiences, and come to America each season to get the product of American dramatists, in order to interest their patrons. At times half the plays in London are American plays."

THE FIVE PER CENT. FIASCO.

It was a foolish notion that American shipping could be substantially advanced by a rebate of 5 per cent. on duties on goods brought in in American bottoms. Five per cent. does not mean five points. On an average duty of 36 per cent. on dutiable goods the rebate would amount only to 1 3-10 per cent. on the total. The competition of American with foreign shipping is not close enough to make this advantage decisive, if in fact it had been granted. The only explanation of the effort to give this advantage to American shipping is that it was meant as the thin entering wedge by which the general plan of indirect subsidies could be aided.

Foolish as the notion was, those who undertook to carry it out made a bad mess of it. Very properly they tried to make the provision consistent with existing treaties. Specifically they tried to say that the 5 per cent. rebate should not be paid on goods brought in from countries entitled by treaty to equal treatment for their ships with our own. The law officers of the Treasury find that what really was done was to grant the rebate both for our own vessels and for those of countries entitled to such equal treatment. There is some doubt as to the scope of this interpretation, but it appears to extend to all countries except Russia, France, and Brazil. British vessels carrying goods not originating in British territories in Europe would not have the advantage of the rebate. In any case, it is estimated that the clause would result in a loss of revenue of from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year. Only an insignificant share of this large amount would be of advantage to American shipping.

Senator SIMMONS has expressed the opinion that repeal is the best way out of the mortifying plight in which the tariff law places the Government. Mr. UNDERWOOD does not share that view. We have great respect for Mr. UNDERWOOD's judgment, but in this matter we fear his "satisfaction with the law as it is," is not well founded. At best the effort to carry out the law must lead to a great deal of useless and annoying friction with countries affected. If the view taken by the Treasury should be rejected by the courts, and the intention of Congress to give a rebate to American vessels only should be sustained, the disputes with other Governments would be many and unpleasant. Retaliation is already suggested. It would be absurd to involve the country in a war of rates with other countries in order to put a pitiful advantage at the disposal of American shipping. With all respect to Mr. UNDERWOOD's judgment and ability, we venture to suggest that he is better at cutting out tariff favors than he is at trying to grant them. The original purpose of this provision of the tariff was unsound in economics and in politics. It was a petty concession to a bad policy. It has been ludicrously bungled, and the best thing to do with it is to repeal it.

PRESIDENT YUAN.

The "election" as Constitutional President of the Republic of China of YUAN SHIH-KAI is probably the best thing that could happen for that troubled nation. Under the forms of representative democracy it centres the executive power in the hands of a strong man, who has gained and will keep it by intrigue, by violence if necessary, very much after the fashion of the past, minus the Emperor. It remains to be seen whether YUAN can create a working substitute for the curious bond of unity supplied by the dynasty. He has shown great strength and skill in dealing with a complex and perilous situation, and is more likely than any one else to face successfully the long and more arduous task before him.

The first need of China is order, and YUAN has shown his ability to suppress armed rebellion. To secure and maintain order China must have money, and lenders are more likely to trust YUAN than any one else. Nor is he unlikely to develop better than any one else the internal resources of the country, which would tend strongly to reinforce credit in foreign markets. There will be a good deal of sincere but somewhat sentimental protest against the utter hollowness of the democracy professed by YUAN and his associates. But the progress of China depends on the maintenance of order, and anything like real democracy there for a long time would tend to chaos.

"A SLAP IN THE FACE."

We are supposed to infer that when the Directors of that august institution, the Memorial Theatre of Stratford-on-Avon, decided not to "accept" time for Mr. BENSON's "fit-up" Shakespearean troupe in New York, in spite of the tearful remonstrances of the New York managers, they had in mind the cruel treatment this callous town has given in the past to visiting foreign artists of the stage. RACHEL, BOGUMIL DAWISON, SEEBACH, JANAUSCHEK, RISTORI, BERNHARDT, HAASE, SONNENTHAL, POSSART, MOUNET-SULLY, COQUELIN, ROSSI—how sad that list of names of the poor victims of New York's neglect? As for their English brothers and sisters, EDMUND KEAN, FANNY KEMBLE, CHARLES KEAN, MATHEWS, IRVING, the KENDALS, they nearly starved in our streets. A like fate was that of English actors of less renown, though histrions vastly superior to Mr. BENSON, such as TERRISS, MONTAGUE, and COGHLAN. Therefore do the backers of BENSON tender "a slap in the face" to "the many-towered Camelot of America."

Camelot, whose gross materialists are making the "farewell tour" of FORBES-ROBERTSON such a "frost," will not care. It is surfeited with theatres of all kinds. An ill-informed person would naturally infer that Mr. BENSON, like Augustus in PINERO's comedy, is "a London artist," but nothing of the sort. The London critics who praise him most see him infrequently. His one long London engagement is remembered as a historic calamity. In the blessed provinces he has been doing really good work for a long while. His traveling troupe is a school for actors. Naturally, the great competition in theatricals in New York shuts him out, in the height of the season, but there is no reason why he should get mad about it. There are souls to be uplifted in Chicago, too.

THE NATIONAL BANK ACT AND THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.

History is reversing itself in the matter of replacing the law which gave the country a national currency with a law which will establish a national credit system. When the existing law was passed it was enthusiastically approved by the banks of the interior. Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Indiana each formed more national banks than New York in the first year, and Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, and other States followed with a membership larger in proportion to population and wealth, if not in actual numbers. During the current week the fact has been indisputably established that the banks of the interior are opposed to the pending bill in its present form. The country which supported the bill of 1863 is opposed to the original form of the proposal of this year, but is clearly ready to approve it with amendments.

On the other hand, the strongest support of the good features of the pending bill comes from New York. There has been no warmer commendation, and no more constructive suggestions for amendments, than those coming from such bankers as Mr. HEPBURN and Mr. VANDERLIP. This provides an even stronger contrast than the altered position of the country banks. In 1863 the New York Clearing House Committee formally condemned the proposal of the present banking law. It recorded its opinion that it would foster the formation of "wildcat banks," whose notes "would "supplant a like amount of legal tender notes which the Government "could issue free of all interest, and "which amount the Government "would have to borrow and pay interest on at 6 per cent. This loss on "$300,000,000 would amount annually "to $18,000,000." The Clearing House adopted the report of its committee, and Congress issued a formal reply. It is not conceivable that our Clearing House should take such a position this year. It ought to be incredible that Congress should now be holding on some points the position which the Clearing House has abandoned. Yet that is the record. City banks and country banks have come together upon the essentials of banking and currency reform, and both are opposing the position of Congress. And the very unity of banking opinion is cited as proof of conspiracy, and the activities of a capitalist lobby.

The truth is that there is a conspiracy of experience and common sense against what Mr. BRYAN has claimed as the "triumphs of the people" embodied in the bill. The first of the triumphs named by Mr. BRYAN is the "Government issue of notes to be issued by the banks." The second is "Government control of the issue of this money." These are principles on which Mr. BRYAN says there can be no disagreement or compromise. He well says that this is not all the bill, and that there may be differences regarding details, which may be amended at leisure. This is the Administration position as set forth in Mr. BRYAN's letter to Chairman GLASS.

The challenge should be accepted. If the bankers and the country cannot beat such a proposal now they never can. If they yield now they will have to yield indefinitely. There is every sign that the concessions will have to be made to the bankers, and not by them. There is no intention of minimizing the importance of fair banking profits when it is said that the country's interests surpass those of the bankers specifically, and that the country's danger surpasses that of the bankers. The prevention of panics is more important than the regulation of commissions on operations of exchange or the rate of interest on deposits. If the bankers will unite for the soundness of the country's currency and credit system, they can secure that, and the tail will go with the carcass. But if the bankers allow the enactment of the Democratic platform, and the Bryanisms which the country has thrice rejected, they will lose tail and carcass together.

T. R. AND TURGOT.

I wish I were to be in the United States this Fall so that I could take part in your campaign. You represent the sane and high-minded radicalism which is real conservatism. I have recently been reading BROOKS ADAMS's book, "The Theory of Social Revolutions." In speaking of the great French statesman, TURGOT, he quotes TURGOT's remarks that "well-timed reform alone averts revolution." TURGOT was no revolutionist, and the Revolution, with all its horrors, was brought on by the fact that the so-called conservatives refused to follow TURGOT in his wise, fair, and absolutely indispensable proposals for industrial reform.—From a letter written by Col. ROOSEVELT to EVERETT COLBY of New Jersey.

That a radical, red in tooth and claw, is the same thing as a real conservative may puzzle the inexpert. A little practice makes it easy. When you once understand that burglars are really theologians, that the pickpocket is the best altruist, and that the toper, when merry, is the finest example of sobriety, then the reasoning becomes plain. Not that the choice of these examples carries any implication about radicals—the examples were picked merely with a view to the force of contrast. This way of heading off a revolution has been recommended to farmers deploring the loss of lambs by wolves. You cure the wolf of his fondness for lambs by stuffing him with lamb until the mere thought of one makes him sick. So, if you let revolution under the guise of radicalism have its head and a clear path, all will be well.

As to TURGOT, he came years too late. The seeds of the French Revolution were sown when LOUIS XIII. was King, as any reader of the Barine books knows. The death of the Dauphin's sickly son, the Duke of Burgundy, was the real cause of the French Revolution. If he had lived he would have been King, and FENELON, who was at once the Jonathan Edwards, the Peter Parley, and the Lloyd George of his time, would have been the Richelieu of his reign. FENELON had a programme of reforms that would have raised an awful howl among the nobility, but had it been put into operation there would have been no revolution at the end of that century. We suppose the recall of LOUIS XVI. by the French people is what has turned the Colonel's attention to these subjects. He is fond of justifying his policies by historical precedents.

POTENTIAL CRIMINALS.

The names of SCHRANK, GALLAGHER, CZOLGOSZ, GUITEAU, and J. WILKES BOOTH come to mind in considering the function of the Clearing House for Mental Defectives maintained by the New York Post-Graduate Hospital. The cases of these assailants of famous men are typical of many thousands among the population of this city and State, who by reason of mental defects, coupled with strong vicious or criminal propensities, are dangerous to the community.

Dr. MAX D. SCHLAPP of the Post-Graduate Hospital declares that almost every defective child may at some time commit a crime. The condition of such unfortunates is often inherited, often acquired; it leads to helplessness, and its victim is inevitably thrown upon society for support, usually in jails, reformatories, and almshouses. None of these institutions is remedial or properly custodial. The exhibition now on view in this city of the work done by the Post-Graduate Hospital in its daily clinics illustrates the proper method of treating defective children, before they become a menace to the public. Boys and girls suspected of mental deficiency are referred by official and charitable agencies to the clinics, accompanied by their parents. The cases that are really normal are sifted out, leaving a large majority to be referred to the care of institutions for the feeble-minded, like that on Randall's Island, the Vineland Training School in New Jersey, the Craig Colony for Epileptics at Sonyea, and the Syracuse State Institution for Feeble-Minded Children.

In these institutions the defectives are segregated, where they are no longer a public menace, and are protected against the consequences of uncontrolled acts. If curable, the care given here will cure them; if incurable, they are protected for life. By such rational treatment, the ultimate expense to the public should be reduced, since the inmates cease to be potential destroyers of property and lives. It is conservatively estimated by experts that at least one-fourth the inmates of jails and prisons belong to this unfortunate class, the members of which are reproduced in successive generations.

The work of the Clearing House for Mental Defectives is at present supported largely by private funds. It is a public function, it should have public support. The Department of Charities has asked the Board of Estimate to ratify an appropriation of $40,000 for this work. Reversing in praiseworthy fashion the custom of asking more than is absolutely needed, this estimate will not bear discounting and paring down. The necessary salaries and expenses of the staff of experts are included in the reckoning, and no more.

AUTUMN BOOKS.

The classified lists of more than 500 new books compiled for the Autumn Book Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW to be published with THE SUNDAY TIMES to-morrow indicates that the American publishing trade is in a healthy condition and that the supply of good books is not likely to run short. In the fields of history and biography, poetry and philosophy the promise of the season is excellent, while, if the fiction list still predominates in length, it is obvious that the selection of novels is made much more carefully than it used to be in the era of "best sellers," and it must be admitted that the typical novel of this hour often has a serious purpose which must be recognized even when it is not admired. These lists are arranged to facilitate quick examination, and descriptive notes accompany most of the titles.

Besides its special lists, this noteworthy number of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW will contain articles treating of various phases of current literature by Dr. S. WEIR MITCHELL, RUTH MCENERY STUART, T. A. DALY, CONINGSBY DAWSON, Dr. JOSEPH JACOBS, GEORGE KENNAN, J. A. PICARD, RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, and E. HAMILTON BELL, as well as the usual summary of news in the world of letters.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

He Thinks We Don't Care for Baseball.

Lord NORTHCLIFFE admits that baseball is a pretty good game, as games go, and that he highly enjoyed seeing one of the world's series contests, but he was not at all impressed by the number of the spectators present. On the contrary, he considered the attendance small and rather indicative that public interest in what must be our national sport, if we have one, is neither keen nor widespread.

The basis for this conclusion is his Lordship's memory of the 120,000 or 150,000 people that assemble to see the most important and best advertised games of football in England, and that is indeed a comparison to make our crowds of between 30,000 and 40,000 not much of a multitude. Yet we all know that a very considerable fraction of the American public does take an ardent interest in baseball, and Lord NORTHCLIFFE's statement that the game is too complicated to be much liked in England is destined to pass with most of us as a criticism, not of the game, but of those who in his opinion would not be able to understand it.

Probably the real reason why football attracts bigger crowds in England than baseball does here lies in the fact that appreciation of the latter game in its finer points depends more than in the case of the former on the observer's nearness to the players. Our present stadiums—always filled to overflowing, by the way, when the battle is between the mighty—are so large that spectators in the remoter seats hardly get their money's worth, and if there were 150,000 of them or even 75,000, the deprivation of a satisfactory view of what was done would be general.

That addiction to sports is not here as pervasive of all classes as in England is doubtless true, but the difference is not one to fill us with despair, just as it is not a matter of unanimous self-congratulation there.

As for the difficulties of understanding baseball, perhaps they are staggering to the British agricultural laborer, but none of our boys, whether living on Fifth Avenue or off the Bowery, seems to find them insuperable. Our Congressmen, too, treat the game as if it were no more puzzling than tariff or currency problems. Of course the whole of baseball is not to be learned in a day, but its mysteries are not as dark as his inexperienced Lordship imagines.

Metaphorically the Seas Are Married.

When the President yesterday afternoon touched an electric button, and so, in theory at least, fired the charge that blew up the Gamboa dike, his act marked the beginning of what can properly be called the very last operation in building the Panama Canal. There is, indeed, not a little more of work to do before it will be an open route for the world's commerce, but about all of it will consist of clearing debris out of what engineers call the "prism" of the great ditch, and it is of a kind that will give more employment to muscle than to mind. Water has been flowing through big pipes into the Culebra Cut for some days past, but with the smashing of the wall separating the cut from the Gatun Lake the way from ocean to ocean is as open, though not as deep, as it will ever be.

Poets and some others insist on seeing in the completion of the canal a "marriage" of the two seas, and so it is, for the uses of metaphor, but the quantity of one sea that will ever be mingled with the other in all the years to come could be measured only by a homeopathist familiar with "high potencies."

All the locking, it must be remembered, will be done with fresh water, but when a ship arrives from either the Atlantic or the Pacific at the foot of the big stairs by which it must ascend to the lake level, it will be in water more or less salt when the gates close behind it. A minute part of this water, enormously diluted from above, will rise with it, and a part still more minute and still more enormously diluted will follow it out into the lake.

After this has been done often enough—in a century or two, perhaps—as much as a drop of the Pacific may get through the many square miles of fresh water to the Atlantic end of the lake, and go down with a ship traveling that way. Then, again, it may not, since an opposite and balancing movement will be in action all the time.

Actually and practically, the distance between the two oceans is diminished only by the short distance from each to the locks nearest it, but for oratorical and poetical exultation the innumerable ages of division are at an end.

Victims of Their Own Folly.

When TOLMAN, the king of loan sharks in this part of the country, was fined $1,000 a few weeks ago, it doubtless gave him some pain, but the diminution of such profits as his was trivial, and of course he went right ahead doing what he calls business. Now he has been sentenced to six months in prison, and that is different—or will be, after he has exhausted such possibilities as the law provides so kindly and in such large quantities for men as resourceful as he.

This conviction, naturally, will be highly satisfactory to all who reprehend the merciless and unscrupulous exploitation of poverty and improvidence, but the case on which it was founded illustrates the fact that while a Tolman cannot be too much despised, his victims are often if not usually people whose woes are the result of their folly rather than of their need.

From this particular debtor the loan shark tried to extort $5 as interest on a $10 loan for three months. But the man borrowed the money, not because he really had to have it, but because he wanted to give his father a golden wedding present. Such a gift, for those who can afford it, is highly commendable, and many a much worse use of money can be imagined, but the father would have been better honored if the son had shown more sense.

Only in instances comparatively rare is application made to these villainous usurers for reasons desperate enough to justify resort to them for their so dangerous aid, and in one way or another they will probably continue their thievish trade till the possession of wisdom is considerably commoner than it is now.

AN ARMY OF SPIES.

Will That Be the Result of the New Income Tax?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Federal income tax law requires every Collector from time to time to send his deputies through every part of his district and inquire after and concerning all persons therein who are liable to pay any internal revenue tax. Thus we are to have (and to feed, clothe, and pay) an army of Federal spies whose noses will be stuck into the affairs of every man who is suspected of having an income of $3,000 or more per year, whether from wages, salary, or from investments. Spies are justly execrated in all countries, whether Russia or the United States, and we have President Wilson in particular to hail as the father of spies and the whole brood of predatory politicians to curse for the coming espionage. But it will be fun for the millions, (all save the half million whose incomes or earnings reach $3,000 per year,) for the hordes of clerks, prosperous artisans, small shopkeepers, farmers, and peasants who escape the imposition. Still these millions are of those whose savings are impaired by the politicians' sop to the proletariat.

The millions who have scraped and saved to provide life insurance or put by money in savings banks will sooner or later discover that in their passion to sting the more fortunate and the rich they have stung themselves by the very class legislation which the Democratic politicians have foisted on the country as a bait for votes. Spies in every house—Government spies backed by United States Marshals, courts, and the army and navy if necessary! There are at least 60 Internal Revenue Collectors in the United States, and if each sends an average of 25 deputies to spy out victims "through every part of his district" a total force of 1,500 Federal spies will be required. As "pigs is pigs" so spies is spies, and that is a writing on the wall. The number of Collectors of internal revenue will be undoubtedly increased from the present limit of 63 to the former number, which was equal to the number of Congressmen, so that the horde of Federal spies is likely to be from 10 to 30 times greater than the horde of Congressmen. THE CRUEL "NOSE BAG."

Horse Lover Urges Use of Improved Feeding Pails.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Nearly all the draught horses of this city are forced to feed at noon through that monstrous abomination called a "nose bag."

It is difficult to understand how any horse owner can permit the use of such a contrivance.

In Boston, where the drivers as well as the owners of horses take a lively personal interest in their teams, the feeding is done almost entirely from specially constructed tin pails with wide, flaring sides, allowing ample room for fresh air and free breathing, with plenty of space for the feed. The use of the "nose bag" on a horse is the refinement of cruelty, which should be stopped, and stopped at once.

About all the comfort a work horse has in life is in its food and drink, but the facilities offered here now to these ever patient toilers are such as to make a man who really loves a horse long for the day when they shall all have passed out of this great city into a land where they may at least feed comfortably and drink their fill of clean water. A Geological Curiosity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to bring to your notice an object which I consider worthy of careful attention. It is one block west of Broadway, on 207th Street, turning south on the west side about fifty feet from the corner, (I believe it is on Cooper Street,) where the city has blasted the rock for the road, and where may be seen embodied the perfect shape of a large snake which was evidently caught up at the time the lava (now rock) was thrown up. I consider it of great interest, and our museum no doubt would cut the slab out as a valuable curiosity. WILLIAM H. TURNER.

Punishing the Pickpockets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My pocket has been picked twice. The last time some three weeks ago as I was entering a Subway car at Dey Street. I lost a new pocketbook and a small sum of money, but what causes me the most regret was the loss of every issue and denomination of the shinplasters issued by the Government during the civil war uncirculated. I had saved them as a lad. There is one way to put a stop to these thieving rascals, and that is to cut off the index finger of the thief. Probably the constitutional provision against cruel and unusual punishments would prevent that, but it would be effective. VETERAN.

Ex-Mayor McClellan's Speech.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of this morning in the article headed "McClellan Assails Mitchel—Personal Note in Ex-Mayor's Attack on Fusion Candidate," you quote me as having spoken discourteously of Mr. Mitchel. As a matter of fact, I began my speech by saying that for Mr. Mitchel personally I had only respect, regard, and liking. The criticisms I made were of Mr. Mitchel as a member of the Board of Estimate. The personal note was entirely in your reporter's imagination.

THE RAILROADS' CASE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just read in THE TIMES the editorial article under the caption "The Railway Outlook." The case of the railroads was so fairly and clearly stated in the article referred to that I feel I ought to write you, as I am doing, and tell you of my appreciation of the attitude of THE TIMES concerning this important question.

The nub of the whole matter is contained in the last sixteen lines of the article, beginning with the words "There is no danger of the railways striking voluntarily. * * *". It is absolutely true that when, as you say, profit and loss shows a sufficient debit, the railways will slow down, not because they want to, but because they must, and that unfortunately is the situation at the present time, and if that condition continues long enough it will stop or seriously impede the growing business of the country, and I am sure nothing could be more disastrous than such a situation.

Fortunately, I believe the people generally are coming to have a better understanding of the railroads' side of the question. It is getting to be better understood, for instance, that railroad rates in this country are, upon the whole, the lowest in the world and that railway capitalization, which has been so frequently criticised in the past, is, upon the whole, very much less than in any of the European countries, even in countries where conditions are somewhat similar to ours. It is also understood better than formerly that railway labor in this country is paid from two to three times as much as labor similarly employed upon European railways.

The above matters are all of public record, and it can at least be said for the railroads that however badly some of them may have been managed at some time in the past, they are, upon the whole, giving cheaper service and paying more wages than is the case of any other country of the world, and the railroad managers, I know, would be glad to give still better service and furnish better and more ample facilities if they were able to do so, but railroads, in one respect at least, are like all other industrial concerns—they can not pay out money which they do not have, and they can not maintain their credit unless they pay their debts. They can not go on indefinitely receiving less for what they do and paying constantly more and more for what they buy. Such has been the case, however, for a number of years past, and it has resulted in bringing about the practical stoppage of railway construction and development which exists at the present time.

I wish to assure you again of my appreciation of the attitude of THE TIMES in this connection.

BRITISH SUFFRAGE CRITICS.

Mrs. De Forest Says They Drive Women to Militancy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some people seem to think that Mrs. Pankhurst's coming will injure suffrage in this country. Personally I feel that the woman suffrage movement here is so strong and vital that the advent of any one person will neither help nor hinder it.

The visit of two "John Bulls" to New York within the last few days has very effectively opened our minds to the sort of talk that drives English women to militancy. If our public men talked in like vein it would introduce an element of sex antagonism into the campaign here which I am glad to say is absent.

Lord Northcliffe naturally felt rather peeved that all his interviews were headed with such headlines as "Mrs. Pankhurst will bring no bombs" or "Englishman opposes Mrs. Pankhurst," but all the same he should have shown better sense than to say that women would never get the parliamentary franchise in England, because there are more women than men. Such arguments don't go down in America. American men are too fair-minded. That is the sort of talk that drives English women to desperate acts and to say: "How can one argue with men like that?"

Now another Britisher has honored New York with his presence. Sir Gilbert Parker is quoted as saying: "I am a couple of years ahead in writing my book," but from the rest of the interview I judge that it will be about one century behind the times when it comes out. He goes on to say that when women get the vote he will take to the veil, and yet when he saw it working in Arizona he seemed to think it worked very well, and he didn't wear any veil to dim his judgment, a slight inconsistency. He speaks of a few score of thousands of women voters in California. There happen to be 34 score of thousands, or in suffrage instead of anti-suffrage language, 670,987.

NORA BLATCH DE FOREST,
Executive Secretary Women's Political Union.

New York, Oct. 9, 1913.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Sir Gilbert Parker's interview in THE NEW YORK TIMES, he has shown himself to be a great humorist—while humor is a quality sadly lacking in his books. Would not the English themselves see a joke in the fact that a member of the British Parliament asserts that his "heart will be in tune with the time, whatever it is?"

Any fair-minded man or woman after closely reading the quotations from Sir Gilbert's interview would say that Sir Gilbert merely expresses his own personal prejudices about woman suffrage, and does not give reasons for not granting women the vote. "I am not in favor." "I shall take the veil." "I think the crimes," &c. Women are not wanted by Sir Gilbert "in the field of contest where I am." "I do not think women are physically fitted." Therefore, all women in Great Britain must be disfranchised because "I" (Sir Gilbert Parker) have prejudices.

"I was struck in Arizona, however, by the political expediency of giving women the vote there." (N. B. Sir Gilbert has seen how it works.) And Sir Gilbert's novel has been dramatized by a mere woman!

MARRIED SCHOOL TEACHERS

Cannot Properly Perform Their Duties as Mothers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the clamor raised against the dismissal of Mrs. Peixotto as a teacher, because she gave birth to a child, it seems to me the fundamental point is overlooked. Her champions protest that her efficiency as a teacher was by no means affected by motherhood, but apparently no one thinks of the far greater question: Is her efficiency as a mother affected by continuing as a teacher?

A body like the Board of Education of New York cannot afford to stand for any loss of efficiency on the part of mothers. And since it has been proved that over three times as many hand-fed babies die as babies fed at the breast, it is clear that no woman can possibly remain efficient both as a mother and a teacher in the public schools. The care of the infant is indeed only one phase of this important and complex problem. Do we wish our public bodies of weight and influence in the community to declare that a mother's duty to her offspring is not inconsistent with daily outside work that demands the best and all the best that lies in a woman?

APPEALS TO MRS. DODGE

Mrs. Blatch Asks Her to Cease Opposing Suffrage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me through your columns to make an appeal about which I feel very deeply? I announced to my co-workers last March my intention to go to Mrs. Dodge, President of the Anti-Suffrage Society, and urge upon her the wisdom of a cessation of hostilities. My coadjutors laid restraining hands upon me, declaring such an act would be interpreted as a sign of weakness in the suffrage movement. Temporarily I was subdued.

But now three things move me to carry out my old intention, and make my appeal, instead of a private one to Mrs. Dodge only, public and to all reasonable opponents of woman suffrage. The first spur to my resolve was the editorial in THE TIMES condemning the tone and challenging the facts in a statement issued recently by the anti-suffrage society. The second spur was a wise editorial article in THE TIMES on Sir Almroth Wright's last book. The last spur was an incident told to me by Mr. George. He was to speak in a New England town on the George Junior Republic, and the Chairman of the Women's Club, a most charming woman, escorted him to the platform. She made a remark showing she was opposed to suffrage and asked his opinion. Quite gently he told her he was in favor of votes for women. Her manner changed and she bluntly said if he held such views she did not care to hear him speak on any subject, and without more ceremony turned on her heel and marched out of the hall.

Under the prick, then, of three spurs, I enter a plea for a truce, and I back my plea with these reasons: No observer can doubt that in the near future women will participate in the government of every civilized nation. Woman suffrage is coming. No student of politics can doubt that self-government for men and women, whether under limited monarchies or unlimited democracies, will be tried the whole world round.

This being so, those who oppose the further extension of suffrage to women must admit they can at most only postpone a political experiment which the spirit of the times is forcing society to make.

Last Spring my appeal to Mrs. Dodge would have developed at this point into a mere phophecy. I meant to urge that while postponement would not make women any more fit for self-government, it would introduce bitterness profound and far-reaching into our campaigns. To-day I do not need to say I "foresee" or I "foretold" bitterness; the fact is here, the prophecy is fulfilled. To THE TIMES we owe gratitude for noting the bitterness and sounding the warning.

I was wholly unprepared for an attack by the anti-suffragists so extreme as to call forth condemnation from the press usually opposed to us. The first onslaught upon us came last May just after the great parade, and it has been followed by another attack, and yet another, each adding one touch more of bitterness. There are those in the suffrage ranks who argue, "The anti-suffragists, by overshooting the mark, help us, so let them go on." But I am not thinking merely of winning the vote for women, and therefore ready to rejoice over tactical errors in opponents. I urge consideration of the irretrievable injuries done, the scars left after the battle is over.

Mrs. Dodge and her fellow-workers have themselves destroyed the only argument for postponement. They have changed a time which might have been used by opponents, as it is by advocates of woman suffrage as a training ground for citizenship, into an arena of bitterness. Surely the shorter this time of strife is made the better for women, the better for the State. I do not wish to be understood as holding that no least offense has been committed within the suffrage fold, though I can truly say I have known of none, but I can declare without fear of contradiction that no official statement has ever been issued by any society of suffragists so venomous in tone that it has merited and received condemnation by the press of the country.

In any case, since women in increasing numbers are entering each year upon the responsibilities of government, should not Mrs. Dodge frankly ask herself whether the movement she leads serves in any way to prepare women for wiser use of the political power men are conferring upon them?

THE IMPATIENT SEAS.

(Panama.)

Oh! for the long, long years, the ages slow,
The endless aeons that on tortoise foot
Crept onward thro' a million years, and then
Another, while we, panting to embrace,
To mingle in eternal marriage, beat
Against the barrier, thereby building it!
We saw the winged monsters of the deep,
Great scaly things, shut out the sun in flight,
And then, as aeons lapsed, saw them no more.
The sluggish glaciers crept from distant mounts
Into our bosoms, but their frozen tears
Served not to chill the passion of our depths.
Alone some vagrant bird, from time to time,
Upon his breast would bear a tear which we
For one another shed, and let it fall
Like kiss upon the burning cheek of love.
But still there stirred the thought:
"The future holds,
Somewhere, the day that will unite your waves!"
And hope was justified; that day has come,
And now stands loudly knocking at the door,
Demanding entrance to its sister days.
Oh! hasten to completion of the task!
Let not delay its tantalizing fruit
Before us longer dangle! They who stand
Upon the brink of love's achievement wait
The final step with heart and soul aflame.
A century of patience in the past,
Ere hope was born, seemed scarce so long as now
A single day. So hasten, that longing's night
May be forgot in ecstasy, when we,
The leash of ages loosed, together rush
And drown in one deep, never-ending kiss
The longing of a million fevered years.

TARIFF REBATE LIKELY TO STAND

Wilson Disposed to Side with Underwood to Avoid Reopening of Legislation.

FEAR SUGAR AND WOOL MEN

They May Combine to Get Free Provisions Modified if Repeal of Rebate Is Proposed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Although the State Department is still perturbed concerning the prospect of a tariff war with some of the big maritime nations over the application of the provision in the new tariff law granting a 5 per cent. discount of duties on goods imported in American ships, the administration now appears disposed to side with Representative Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic leader of the House, in his opposition to the repeal of the 5 per cent. provision.

It was said at the State Department to-day that after Attorney General McReynolds had rendered an opinion as to whether foreign ships should also have the benefit of the 5 per cent. discount, President Wilson probably would send a message to Congress on the subject. This idea, however, appears to be confined entirely to the State Department. Elsewhere in Administration circles and in Congress the disposition is to follow the rule of letting well enough alone.

The Democratic leaders are inclined to believe, after a very careful consideration of the matter, that repeal legislation would open the way for an attack on other provisions of the Tariff law, and they do not care to take any chances along that line. There was a decided sentiment in the House and the Senate against placing sugar and wool on the free list, but this did not have the opportunity of full expression because it was involved with the general tariff legislation to which the Democratic Party was committed. The prevalent belief is that should an effort be made to repeal the 5 per cent. discount clause, the sugar men and the wool men might combine in the House or in the Senate, and succeed in providing for the modification of the provisions of the new tariff law, which place sugar and wool on the free list at fixed dates in the future.

What is most feared is that the opponents of the sugar sections of the law will make a vigorous effort to prevent sugar from becoming free of duty, and, failing that, will attempt to provide for a postponement of the time at which raw sugars shall be transferred from the dutiable to the free list. In this connection some Administration officials and Democratic leaders in Congress feel that it would be unwise to bring forward a repeal bill as an Administration measure. President Wilson's disposition in the matter has not been expressed publicly, but there is some reason to believe that he is not now inclined to repeal the legislation on account of the danger of a revival of the tariff question after the country had been surfeited with it, and was seeking to rearrange business conditions to conform to the new law.

There is a hopeful feeling on the part of influential Democrats that the State Department will be able to work out a way of giving the benefit of the 5 per cent. discount to goods brought in American ships that do not compete with merchant vessels of countries that have "equal rights shipping" clauses in their treaties with the United States. After the 5 per cent. provision was amended so as to provide that it should not be applied in a way that would conflict with the treaty obligations of the United States to foreign nations, it was supposed to mean that only those American ships that were not in competition with foreign ships whose goods were protected from discrimination in favor of goods carried in American bottoms would get the benefit of lower duties, and that no foreign ship would be a beneficiary.

However, this view has been changed by the literal interpretation placed on the provision by foreign Governments, and a settlement of the controversy is not likely to be reached at an early day. The prevalent belief is that the Federal courts will ultimately have to lay down a construction of the clause.

The original clause providing for the discount on duties on articles imported in American ships was suggested by Mr. Underwood. It is understood that he believes it will stand the test of legal interpretation, and will be construed as granting the discount to American ships only, as it was intended.

ADOLPHUS BUSCH DIES IN PRUSSIA

St. Louis's Millionaire Brewer Suffered from Dropsy for Seven Years.

GAVE $350,000 TO HARVARD

His Golden Wedding in 1911 Notable for Rare Gifts—Owned Castle on the Rhine.

LANGENSCHWALBACH, Prussia, Oct. 10.—Adolphus Busch, the St. Louis brewer, died here to-day. Mr. Busch had been a sufferer from dropsy for seven years, but when his son, August A., left here a few weeks ago to join him at his castle on the Rhine, he did not know that his father was dangerously ill.

The last time Adolphus Busch figured conspicuously before the public was on March 7, 1911, when he celebrated his golden wedding anniversary at his Winter home in Pasadena, Cal., in a manner that was said to have been unprecedented for its elaborateness in the world's history. The gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Busch included tokens from William H. Taft, who was then President; Col. Roosevelt, the German Emperor, and from hosts of friends who were less widely known. The total value of the gifts was placed at $500,000, and the value of the floral tributes at $50,000. Mr. Busch's gift to his wife, who before her marriage was Lilie Eberhard Anheuser, was a crown of gold studded with diamonds and pearls. It was valued at $200,000.

The public benefactions in honor of his golden wedding announced by Mr. Busch to the guests who assembled, included a holiday for 5,000 employes in St. Louis, a gift of $5,000 to the German Children's Hospital in New York, a gift of $5,000 to the German Seaman's Home in Hoboken, and many gifts to individuals.

Mr. Busch was born in Mayence-on-the-Rhine, July 10, 1842. He was one of a family of twenty-one brothers, who then dealt in wines and brewers' supplies. The family was wealthy, and young Adolphus was sent to the best schools in the country; his education having been finished by a course at the Collegiate Institute in Belgium. He came to the United States in 1857, and settled in St. Louis.

The young man's first occupation in the city, where he later accumulated great wealth, was as a clerk in a commission house. At the outbreak of the civil war, Mr. Busch joined the Federal Army and served for fourteen months. He then learned that he had been bequeathed a portion of his father's estate, and this capital he used to obtain a foothold in the same business the family had conducted in Germany. He opened a wholesale brewers' supply store, and four years later he combined this business with the proprietorship of the Bavarian brewery, which had previously been owned by Eberhard Anheuser. This was five years after Mr. Busch had married Mr. Anheuser's third daughter, and Mr. Busch and his father-in-law became equal partners in the consolidated concern.

Mr. Busch attributed the success of his business to his discovery of a process of bottling beer so that it would withstand any climatic changes. The firm at first carried the name of Anheuser & Co., but this name was changed upon Mr. Anheuser's death in 1880 to the Anheuser-Busch Company. The trade increased steadily until in 1891 the sales passed the million-barrel mark. Mr. Busch took an interest in other business matters besides those having to do with his brewery. He served for a time as President of the South Side Bank and the Manufacturers' Railroad Company. He founded the Busch Glass Company, a bottle-making concern, and was a Director of the Louisiana Purchase Company. He traveled extensively prior to 1908 in order to keep in touch with his business interests in various parts of the world.

Mr. Busch took a keen interest in Harvard University, to which he made three gifts totaling $350,000 for the erection of a Germanic Museum to be known as Adolphus Busch Hall.

His wealth was estimated at $80,000,000, and his annual income was said to be $2,000,000.

Mr. Busch was a friend of the German Emperor, and it was through correspondence with him that he learned that the German Government had many interesting German relics which it would be glad to present to Harvard if the university could provide a proper hall in which to exhibit them. It was on receiving this information that Mr. Busch decided to provide funds to erect the German museum at Harvard. Mr. Busch retained a deep love for his native country. He purchased on the banks of the Rhine a castle and vast estate, to which he made frequent visits until his physical condition became impaired.

Mr. Busch was the last of twenty-one children. He is survived by a widow and five daughters, Mrs. Jacob W. Loeb of Chicago, Mrs. Hugo Reisinger of New York, Mrs. Paul von Gontard of Germany, Mrs. Edward A. Faust of St. Louis, and Mrs. Edward Scharrer of Stuttgart, Germany. Two sons, August A. Busch and Carl Busch, both of St. Louis, also survive. The body will be taken to St. Louis for burial.

DISCREDIT CROY REPORT.

Swiss Authorities Not Notified of the Duke's Wedding Plans.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

GENEVA, Oct. 10.—Nothing is known here of the projected marriage in Geneva of Miss Nancy Leishman and the Duke of Croy, a rumor of which has been circulated in Berlin.

The American Consul, clergymen, and Swiss authorities say that they have not yet been notified of the intended marriage. A fortnight's notice of such a marriage is required by Swiss law.

SOCIAL NOTES.

PRINCE KATSURA DIES IN TOKIO

Great Japanese Warrior and Statesman Who Concluded the Alliance with Britain.

CARVED HIS WAY TO FAME

Distinguished Himself in Two Wars While a Boy and Rose to be Premier of the Empire.

TOKIO, Oct. 10.—Prince Taro Katsura, former Premier of Japan, died here to-day after an extended illness.

Prince Taro Katsura, one of the conspicuous figures in the political life of modern Japan, was born in 1847, and will be remembered as one of Japan's great statesmen and soldiers, and as the official who more than any other public man of Japan was responsible for the alliance between Great Britain and the island empire of the Far East. Katsura rose from obscurity to the highest position in the gift of the Mikado.

His career may be said to have begun in the Tokugawa war. Later, his reputation gained in that struggle was enhanced as a result of his service during the War of Restoration in 1861. In both of those wars he served as a lad and was still under sixteen years of age when he emerged a major from the War of Restoration.

At the close of the War of Restoration Katsura went to Berlin and there at his own expense studied military science. On returning to Japan he was commissioned a captain in the regular army of the Mikado. He went to Berlin again in 1875 as the Military Attaché of the Japanese Legation in that city. In 1878 he was recalled to Tokio to become a member of the General Staff of the Army and within four years was promoted to a colonelcy. As a colonel he was attached to the staff of Marshal Oyama, who became world famous in the war with Russia. He accompanied Oyama on his inspection of the European armies in 1884-85.

A year later Katsura was made a major general and assigned to duty as Chief of the Bureau of Military Affairs in the War Department. In 1886 he was made Vice Minister of War and in 1900, when the rumblings of the coming struggle with Russia were being heard, he was designated as a lieutenant general of the Mikado's army. In the war with China, which followed soon after that promotion, he gained a great reputation as a soldier and for his services was created a viscount and decorated by the Mikado with the Third Order of the Golden Kite.

Katsura was called on to form the ministry to succeed the Ito government. He was Premier for seven years during which time he was created a Marquis and three memorable pages were written into the history of his country—the alliance with England, the war with Russia, and the annexation of Korea.

In 1908 Katsura was again called upon to form a cabinet, this time as a successor to the short-lived Saionji Ministry. On his resignation three years later, the Mikado conferred upon him the title of Prince.

It was Prince Katsura who was selected to deliver the address at the unveiling of the monument that was erected in Japan to commemorate the landing in 1853 of Commodore Perry, U. S. N., on Japan's shores, the act that more than anything else started the empire on its career of progress that has placed it among the great powers of the world.

William E. Barnett.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 10.—William E. Barnett, a former Vice President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, died last night at Pinehurst, N. C.

A week ago Mr. Barnett went to Pinehurst, but the journey overtaxed his strength. His widow, two sons, and two daughters survive.

Frank H. Vick.

Frank H. Vick, a landscape gardener, who had charge of the grounds surrounding government buildings in this city, died yesterday at the age of 61 years at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. H. S. DeMott, at 44 Irving Place, Rockville Centre, L. I. He was born and educated in Rochester and succeeded to the business of his father, James Vick, a seedsman at Rochester, before entering the Government employ.

HERMAN C. VON POST DEAD.

Senior Member of Oelrichs & Co. for Fifty-two Years.

Herman Casper von Post, since 1861 senior member of Oelrichs & Co., New York agents for the North German Lloyd Steamship Co., died yesterday at his home, 32 West Fifty-seventh Street, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He was the grandson of Casper Meier, who founded the firm of Oelrichs & Co., in 1798, 115 years ago.

Mr. von Post was a native of New York and received his early training in the old Academy of Forrest and Mulligan, in Franklin Street, many years ago one of the best known schools in the city. Later he went to school in Bremen, where he had many family connections, and, after graduation, he entered the office of H. H. Meier & Co., in the same city. Several years later he returned to New York and was employed in the offices of Oelrichs & Krueger, which firm later became Oelrichs & Co.

Miss Jane S. Whitlock was married to Mr. von Post in 1852, and died in 1894. The late Gustav Schawb, of Oelrichs & Co., was Mr. von Post's brother-in-law.

Mr. von Post had been a member of the Deutsche Verein since 1854, and he was for many years on the Standing Committee of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York.

Mother M. Aloysius.

JOHN J. McGRAW SAYS:

New York, October 10th, 1913.

Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—

I was glad to receive an advance copy of the TIMES ILLUSTRATED BASEBALL SECTION, to be issued next Sunday. It seems to me most attractive pictorially and worth keeping as a record of the main points in baseball history. The new photographs of the World's Series players, the crowded Polo Grounds and Shibe Park are reproduced excellently. They are, of course, full of current interest to followers of the game.

Yours very truly,
John J. McGraw
MANAGER OF THE NEW YORK GIANTS.

And McGraw knows. Whether he has the best team in the world, or only the next best, he is a judge of what is worth while about baseball.

Have you any idea how many followers of the game there are, all of whom would like to see the very best baseball pictures and the most complete published summary of the national sport's history?

In New York are men who have come all the way from San Francisco to see the world's series. A whole trainload is here from St. Louis. Many men and a few women have been standing in line all night to get into the Polo Grounds. Hundreds of thousands are ready to watch to-day's bulletins in all quarters of the city. To every American town that boasts a lone telegraph wire has been flashed the news of each play since Tuesday's initial game began.

It is already assured that The Times's SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED BASEBALL SECTION will be sold out in advance. The only way to get it is to give your order to the newsdealer to-day for

YALE TEAM PLAYS LAFAYETTE TO-DAY

Coaches Make More Shifts in Elis' Line-Up—Cornish to Run Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 10.—Continuing the policy of daily shifts of the week for the game with Lafayette to-morrow, the Yale coaches to-night announced three more changes. Most unexpected was the plan to use Wilson at full back who has started every game at quarter back since the season opened.

Wilson has not practiced this week and it has been learned that in the signal drill he has been at full back, although the decision to start him there Saturday was not made until last evening.

Avery is not strong enough to return to end and Clem Gile, the baseball pitcher, will start there to-morrow. The experiments with the tackle positions the past week have in reality amounted to nothing and Talbott and Pendleton will be played in their former places to-morrow. Cornish will be given Wilson's berth at quarter back.

To-day's practice omitted scrimmaging. The team spent an hour in signal drill and working at kicks from quick place formation. Burr Chamberlin was the only new coach.

The Lafayette followers have confidence in the ability of the team to hold Yale to a low score, at least, if not to beat them. The team is in excellent physical condition for the game. The minor injuries received in the Penn game have been eliminated and Lafayette can present her strongest line-up to the Elis.

The substitute material has developed fast during the past week, and Coach McCaa feels that most of them can be inserted in the Varsity line-up without greatly reducing the total strength of the team.

CORNELL AND CARLISLE.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 10.—In what will be Cornell's hardest game of the year to date Cornell and the Carlisle Indians will play on Percy Field to-morrow. Although the red men's supporters about town have offered slight odds, Cornell is not without strong support and the Ithacans fully expect to let the Indians know that they have been playing football.

The teams have not met since 1902. Since then Warner, their coach, who is an old Cornell player, served three years as head coach at Cornell and the game is expected to furnish a strong contrast between his methods and those of Al Sharpe. It is the general feeling in the Cornell camp to-day that if the defensive work of the team comes up to the form realized in practice this week the Ithacans would be able to block most of the Indian's puzzling shifts and forward passes.

The Cornell team ran through signals in the baseball cage to-night, but no afternoon practice was held. With two days' rest the Ithacans are in good shape, barring a few bruises. The Indians failed to make connections at Elmira to-day and consequently laid off there, practicing in that city. They will arrive in the morning.

Montclair Academy Starts Well.

Montclair Academy opened the football season yesterday with a victory over Bloomfield High School on the home grounds by the score of 20 to 0. The Montclair boys showed excellent form, and their goal line was not threatened at any time. The line-up:

Montclair.	Position.	Bloomfield.
Boil.....	Centre	Moore
Judson.....	Right guard	Rawson
MacHarg.....	Right tackle	Higgins
Rockwell.....	Right end	Rice
Stevens.....	Quarter back	Randall
Grimes.....	Right half	McCudden

Touchdowns—Rockwell, Stevens, Congden. Goals from touchdowns—Congden, 2. Time—Seven-minute quarters. Referee—Mr. Hazel.

Newman School Wins at Football.

The Newman School football team defeated the South Orange High School eleven yesterday on the former's field at Hackensack by a score of 27 to 6. Gans and Dickey, left half back and full back, respectively, for the winners, showed the greatest strength the first named being responsible for three touchdowns, from which he kicked two goals.

Columbia Freshmen on River.

Freshman rowing candidates at Columbia turned out in good force yesterday for their first practice on the Hudson under the tutelage of both Coach James C. Rice, and Fred Plaisted. Over fifty of the youngsters went over to Edgewater and Coach Rice was able to put six eights out on the river, a better showing than former freshman classes have been able to boast of for several years.

CADETS EASE UP IN WORK.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 10.—With Foster Sanford's Rutgers team "in the offing," the army squad got its last workout to-day on the plains. Only light scrimmage was indulged in, Head Coach Daly easing up in the work and permitting no strenuous play. McEwan, who with Huston was injured during the practice this week, was back at centre and showed his old-time form. Waddell was pitted against him in the scrubs' pivotal position to-day. It has not yet been decided who will get the job at centre in to-morrow's contest. Huston will be out of it. The shoulder injury received by the big guard is still giving him trouble and he will not play against Rutgers. His place will be filled by Meacham, who has been shifted over from tackle on the scrub eleven. Meacham has been doing good work in the practices, but the Army's line is not as strong as the coaches would like to see it for to-morrow's game. The Cadets are confident of winning from the New Brunswick eleven, but are not looking for a big score. The game promises to be a splendid test for the Army team as Rutgers's strength is not being held cheaply here.

GILE A LONG PUNTER.

Drops Three Goals from Forty-Yard Line—Bucknell at Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 10.—Light work for the Tigers was the order of the coaches this afternoon and after a long but leisurely signal drill the practice was called off. Bucknell will oppose the Tigers here tomorrow, but no hard work is anticipated in the contest.

Captain "Hobey" Baker and "Hash" Gile engaged in a drop-kicking contest for distance this afternoon, both with good success. Gile got away with the kicks in surprising fashion because the coaches, while realizing that he has some good kicking ability, did not suspect that his accuracy on long distance was as good as he showed to-day. In three successive attempts to kick from the 40-yard line he sailed the ball over the bar cleanly each time.

After all the work with new men this week the coaches have decided to put the regular eleven on the field at the start and work in plenty of second-string men afterward instead of starting with the "seconds." Hammond and Brown will start at the ends, but Shea is slated to relieve Brown soon after the start. Phillips and Balling will be at left and right tackle, respectively, as usual, with Heyniger and Longstreth at left and right guard respectively. Eddie Trenkmann will start at centre in place of Semmens but the latter will get into the game. J. S. Baker will run the team at quarter back, and Captain Baker, back in the game after a rest of two weeks, will work at left half, with Frank Glick at right half back and Streit at full back. Substitutes in the back field will be Borden for Baker, Merritt for Glick, and F. Trenkmann for Streit.

CHURCH A. L. PROSPERS.

New Officers Elected and Tournaments Arranged for Year.

Members of the Church Athletic League held their annual session last night at the St. George's A. C., and it developed that the organization had just passed through its most prosperous year. Arrangements for the holding of a cross-country handicap over the Van Cortlandt Park course for championship medals on Dec. 13 were made, which will be managed by F. J. V. Delaney and John Kelly. B. F. Bettleheln, Jr., was appointed Chairman of the Basketball Committee, and it was announced that two championship classes will be decided at 135 pounds and 145 pounds, to begin the latter part of this month.

Billiard and pool tournaments will be held with John Cullen, Holy Cross A. A., the Chairman of the committee. The handball tournament will be decided under the direction of Charles Henry, St. Bartholomew's A. C.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the selection of the following: President, G. W. Koechlein, St. George's A. C.; Vice President, John O'Neil, Knights of St. Antony; Treasurer, James Fletcher, Grace A. C.; Secretary, B. F. Bettleheim, Jr., St. Agnes A. A. The delegates at large appointed by the President were: A. W. Smith, Christ Church A. A.; F. W. Rubien, St. George's A. C., and Rev. Kenneth A. Bray, Bronx Church House.

HUMPHRIES SHUTS OUT WHITE SOX

Cubs Hammer Scott and Take Third Game of Chicago Series, 8 to 0.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Bert Humphries's brilliant pitching and a terrific onslaught on Jim Scott's offerings in the sixth and seventh innings to-day gave the Chicago Nationals the lead in the city championship series, the third game going to the Cubs, 8 to 0. The American Leaguers were helpless before Humphries's baffling curves, and made only four hits, only one of which was entirely free from the stigma of "scratch." Only two of the Americans got as far as second base, and not beyond that point. The Cub pitcher had seven strike-outs to his credit, Bodie and Schalk twice being victims.

Poor fielding helped in the undoing of Scott and the general rout of the White Sox. A wild throw by Collins was sandwiched among hits by Evers, Schulte, Saier, and Good in the sixth, and the combination netted three runs. With one out in the seventh, another series of hits with errors by Bodie and Weaver added five to the total. There was one out when Leach began the attack in the seventh with a double into the crowd. Evers walked and Schulte slammed a single to right, Leach scoring. Zimmerman beat out a bunt, scoring Evers, and, after Saier had struck out, Good shot a safe drive to right. Schulte counted on the hit, Bodie made a mess of retrieving the ball, and Zimmerman sped over the plate, Good going to second. Weaver fumbled Bridwell's grounder and Good scored.

Just before the game the announcer shouted forth the news of the dynamiting of the Gamboa, dike. While the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" every man in stands and field, including the players of each club, stood with bared head. A mighty cheer was given.

The attendance taxed the capacity of the West Side Park. Official figures were: Attendance, 17,897; total receipts, $12,918; commission's share, $1,291; players' share, $6,975; each club's share, $2,325. The score:

Cardinals Beat Browns Again.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—The Nationals, by timely hitting in the seventh inning, mixed with an error, won the second game with the local American Leaguers to-day to decide the city championship. The score was 4 to 1. The Nationals got a run in the fifth inning, when Konetchy singled and tallied on Evans's two-base hit. The Americans tied it in their half of the seventh inning on singles by Wares, Agnew, and Williams. The Nationals went ahead in the same inning, scoring three runs. Konetchy tripled. Evans was hit by a pitched ball. Wingo singled, scoring Konetchy. Evans also scored, and Wingo raced to third when Austin let Sloan's throw get away from him. Ferrit singled and Wingo tallied the last run of the game.

The game was called at the end of the seventh inning because of darkness. Score:

Law School Forfeits Game.

Columbia's freshman baseball nine both lost and won their game on South Field yesterday afternoon against a so-called Law School team. Owing to the absence of most of the members of the law team, members of other classes were drafted. As a result, the the game was forfeited to the freshman by the score of 9 to 0. The game then proceeded with the "ringers" and the pick-up law team defeated the cubs by the score of 1 to 0. The winning run was scored in the fifth inning. The score:

Syracuse to Play Rochester.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The Syracuse University football team will oppose Rochester University at Rochester to-morrow afternoon. Several changes have been made in the line-up of the Orange during the last week. Kingsley will replace Castle in the back field, while White, a graduate of DeWitt Clinton High School, will be given a chance at guard. The Rochester game is the last preparatory contest before the game with Princeton next Saturday.

ROSS B. CAPTURES FREE-FOR-ALL RACE

Anvil, Strong Favorite, Not Fast Enough to Overtake Richford Horse.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 10.—The October prize for free-for-all trotters today proved a surprise when Ross B., owned by J. H. Richford, defeated Anvil, the heavy favorite, winning the second and third heats after losing the first to the favorite. In the first heat Ross B. broke in the stretch and finished second. Near the start of the second heat Anvil broke badly and was unable to get to Ross B. in time to do better than take second place. The third heat was a race on its merits between the two geldings and Ross B. proved himself best. Colorado E., owned by George H. Estabrook, was withdrawn before the race began.

The 2:12 pace, unfinished Thursday, went to six heats, J. W. Wilkerson taking the fifth and Hydric, which had two heats to his credit yesterday, capturing the sixth and decisive heat.

Don Labor, driven by F. C. Jones, won the 2:08 trot, amateurs driving, in straight heats, and the 2:20 pace, also a straight heat contest, went to Great Scott, well handled by Snow.

The championship stallion stake was a two-horse race, only Sure Fast and Tillie Tipton starting. The latter was an easy victor in straight heats.

The racing to-day was marked by the fastest trotting mile and the slowest mile of the meeting in any class, Ross B. making the former in the second heat of the October prize and Tillie Tipton the latter in the closing event. The summaries:

INTERNATIONAL TEAM GOLF.

Englishwomen to Play Americans at Wilmington To-day.

As a curtain raiser to the Women's National Golf Championship which begins on Monday over the links of the Wilmington Country Club, an international team match with seven Americans and seven British subjects on a side will be run off to-day at Wilmington. A cup was offered through the Wilmington Country Club and the United States Golf Association gave its sanction to the contest by selecting a team of American players.

Upholding the Union Jack will be such famous players as Miss Muriel Dodd of Moreton Ladies' Golf Club, England, who won the championship of Great Britain in June at St. Anne's-on-Sea. Her team mates will be Miss Gladys Ravenscroft, former British champion; Miss Mabel Harrison, three times Irish champion; Miss Florence Scott, of Hamilton, Ontario; Miss Florence Harvey, of the same club, two of Canada's best representatives; Miss J. S. Spence, of Moreton, England, and Miss Violet Pooley, of Victoria, B. C., one of the most brilliant of the far Western Canadian players. It may be that changes will be made in the line-up at the last moment, for there are three other Canadian players to draw from.

The United States Golf Association has selected the following team: Miss Margaret Curtis, of Essex County, the national champion; Miss Harriest S. Curtis, former holder of the title; Miss Marion Hollins, of Westbrook, the new Metropolitan champion; Miss Lillian B. Hyde, South Shore, former holder of the title; Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, of Merion, several times winner of the Eastern championship and the present title-holder; Mrs. E. C. Wheeler, Jr., of Wollaston, former Eastern champion, and Miss Georgianna M. Bishop, of Brooklawn, once the holder of both the national and metropolitan titles.

SWIMMERS BEGIN SEASON.

Two Tank Records Made in First Contests at West Side Y. M. C. A.

West Side Young Men's Christian Association swimmers inaugurated their semi-monthly competitive season last night in the natatorium in West Fifty-seventh Street with a quartet of contests which attracted a good-sized crowd of spectators, who were rewarded with some clever competitions at swimming and diving, in which two association records were broken.

The events in which particularly fine performances were registered were the 40-yard and 100-yard handicaps. Although he did not win, J. Mantell, the scratch man at the shorter distance, "crawled" through in the fine time of 20 3-5 seconds, hanging up a new mark for the route. At 100 yards, H. Knecht, the scratch man, incidental to getting second place in the final, was clocked for the full journey in 1 minute 2 6-5 seconds, being beaten for first prize by a touch by F. Gudebord, who was in receipt of ten seconds. The summary:

100-Yard Swim, Handicap.—Won by F. Gudebord, (10 seconds;) H. Knecht, (scratch,) second; G. Hippard, (12 seconds,) third. Time—1:11.

Fancy Diving, Scratch.—Won by W. Howell, with 27 points; Ray Currier, second, with 26½ points; E. C. Jessup, third, with 24 points.

40-Yard Swim, Handicap.—Won by C. Hanner, (5 seconds;) W. Luhrs, (8 seconds,) second; C. Dixon, (4 seconds,) third. Time—0:24 2-5.

200-Yard Medlay Relay.—Teams of five men—Won by C. Hanner, L. Hanscom, G. Hippard, F. Schierbaum, and F. Gudebord; F. Bladworth, H. Knecht, L. Crovat, W. Luhrs, and C. Dixon, second. Time—2:24 2-5.

Mrs. Swift Englewood Victor.

Mrs. Lawrence Swift won the women's championship of the Englewood Country Club yesterday by defeating Mrs. J. S. Irving by 6 up and 4 to play in the decisive test. Mrs. Swift advanced to the final round by eliminating Miss Gertrude Pickhardt by 6 up and 4 to play while Mrs. Irving brushed aside Miss L. Lindenmeyer by a 5 and 4 margin.

TITLE FOR MRS. McLEAN.

Miss Wagner Loses Final Round in Women's Metropolitan Tennis.

Mrs. Marshall McLean, the New Jersey tennis champion, added another title to her list yesterday on the West Side Tennis Club Courts, when she defeated Miss Marie Wagner, the national indoor champion in two straight sets in the final round of the Women's Metropolitan Championship. By her victory Mrs. McLean revenges herself on her opponent for past seasons' defeats. Miss Wagner had been playing a splendid game during the early rounds of the tournament and was expected to make a good fight for the title.

From the starting of the first set to the close of the match the Jersey champion held the upper hand. She won the first game and at once gave evidence of being at the top of her game. Miss Wagner won the second game after it went to deuce. The first long rally came in the fourth game, in which deuce was called four times before Mrs. McLean won. The three following games proved easy for Mrs. McLean and she captured the set 6—1.

The first four games in the second set went to the Jersey title-holder and it appeared probable that Miss Wagner would not win another point. She, however, rallied at this point and placed the next two games to her credit. She was blanked in the seventh game, but again appeared to advantage in three succeeding ones, bringing the games to 5-all. The effort appeared too much for Miss Wagner, who managed to carry the next game to deuce, but could get no further. Mrs. McLean won the game and the following one and with it the match. The score:

Cross Training for Ritchie.

Leahc Cross, who is matched to box champion Willie Ritchie at Madison Square Garden the latter part of the month, has started training for the bout. Although he has improved since his visit to the West he realizes that he cannot afford to take any chances with the champion and will enter the ring in perfect physical condition. Cross will make his vaudevile debut at B. F. Kieth's Union Square Theatre next Monday afternoon, contributing a novel specialty in which he will explain many of the finer points of boxing.

NEW YACHT FOR KAISER.

Oertz to Build Schooner to Take Place of Emperor's Meteor.

HAMBURG, Germany, Oct. 10.—Emperor William to-day ordered from Max Oertz, the well-known yacht builder of this city, a new schooner to replace his present racing yacht Meteor, and her success will have an important bearing on the question whether Germany will challenge for the America's Cup with a cutter designed by Oertz.

Max Oertz was the designer of the last Meteor as well as of the Germania, belonging to Gustav von Krupp, Von Bohlen and Halbach, and several other fairly successful 75-foot yachts.

The new schooner for the Emperor is to be built at the Krupp works at Kiel, and probably will have less waterline than her predecessor, which was forced to concede heavy time allowances to her competitors.

The Emperor has the fullest confident in the ability of Max Oertz and ordered the new boat without waiting for the launching of the new yacht under construction by Herreshoff for Robert E. Tod, of the New York Yacht Club.

Debs to Walk to San Francisco.

Samuel A. Debs of New York will start on a transcontinental trip Monday at noon from the City Hall. He proposes to walk to San Francisco and will carry a message from Mayor Kline to the Mayor of San Francisco. Debs will lecture each night after the day's walk. He expects to cover from 40 to 50 miles each day, and will pass through Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, St. Louis, Denver and Salt Lake City. His first stop will be Yonkers. Debs has made many long trips and feels confident of his ability to complete his schedule. His trip overland last December from Chicago to San Francisco, a distance of about 2,700 miles by the Southwestern route, was made in less than 65 days.

Incredulous?

All right, just give us a chance to show you where we've "got it on" the custom tailor.

Fabrics—we buy the same grade of cloth, both imported and domestic, from the same manufacturers that supply the best custom tailors; patterns all confined to us.

Fit—with us you're sure of that before you buy—or you don't buy.

BANKER ARRESTED FOR $200,000 FRAUD

E. P. Metcalf, Ex-Head of Failed Providence Bank, Accused of Misusing Funds.

4 NEW YORKERS INDICTED

Warrants Out for O. R. Farror, James F. Allen, H. E. De Kay, and J. W. De Kay as Abettors.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 10.—Edward P. Metcalf, former President of the Atlantic National Bank, gave himself up to-day in the United States District Court on charges of misapplication of funds of the bank. The total amount alleged to have been misappliied was $200,000, of which the loss to the bank will be fully $150,000. Orrion R. Farror, James F. Allen, Henry E. Dekay, and John W. Dekay of New York were also named in the indictment which was returned last evening by the Grand Jury. They are charged with aiding and abetting Mr. Metcalf in taking the funds of the bank. They are not in custody, but New York Marshals are looking for them.

The indictment charges that Metcalf illegally signed the name of the Atlantic National Bank without the knowledge of the Directors, to a check for $140,200 on the Eliot National Bank of Boston, which passed to the credit of the Traders' National Bank of Lowell, and that the latter bank had "no right or title to the sum." To balance this sum on the books of the Atlantic Bank six notes were put into the local institution as follows: J. P. Rollins, Boston, $32,000; George H. Mercer, $28,000; Warren W. Tucker, $19,200; Don W. Cowdry, $16,000; H. P. Woodward, $25,000, and Arthur P. Hawes, $20,000.

The indictment contains twenty-four counts.

Metcalf went to the Federal Court accompanied by his daughter and surrendered voluntarily to the United States Marshal. He pleaded not guilty and bail was fixed at $50,000. His attorney has ten days to change the plea. A certified copy of the indictment, with capiases for the arrest of the four New York men, were sent to-night to the United States Marshal in New York. The indictment contains twenty-four counts, on each of which the statutory penalty is not less than five nor more than ten years' imprisonment. There is no option of a fine.

Twenty-three of the counts are for either purchasing or discounting without the knowledge or consent of the bank Directors. The notes, it is alleged, proved to be worthless.

The next count alleges that on Oct. 19, 1910, Metcalf issued a check for $140,200 on the Eliot National Bank of Boston to the order of the Traders' National Bank of Lowell, Mass., in connection with the efforts of the Columbus Securities Company to secure control of the Lowell Bank, and that Metcalf then discounted or purchased six promissory notes to cover this amount in the Atlantic National Bank. These six notes, the negotiation of which makes the first six counts in the indictment, are alleged to be valueless.

On April 20 last Metcalf resigned as President and sailed for Europe. Twelve days later the bank suspended payments by order of Joseph Balch, National Bank Examiner, that time the deposits amounted to $2,076,268, the capital stock paid in was $300,000, with a surplus fund of $120,000. The loans and discounts amounted to $2,374,043.

After a superficial examination the stockholders were assessed 100 per cent. on their stock, the par value of which was $100 a share, and on June 12 last a dividend of 25 per cent., amounting to about $500,000, was paid to the depositors.

Attorney General Stiness said in court this afternoon that the direct loss to the bank through the alleged misapplication of funds would amount to about $150,000.

Metcalf is 42 years old. Before coming to the Atlantic National Bank he had been Assistant Treasurer of the Carolina Mills Company, Superintendent of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and National Bank Examiner for Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Risley Brown, a special investigator of the Department of Justice, investigated the bank's affairs and it was on his report submitted about two weeks ago that the Department caused the indictment to be drawn.

At the home of James F. Allen, the banker, 116 Riverside Drie, it was said last night that he was at his residence. He is expected to return this afternoon. None of the other New Yorkers mentioned in the indictment could be found.

H. A. CONTENT APPOINTED.

Son of Banker Named for Assistant United States Attorney.

Attorney General McReynolds announced the appointment yesterday of Harold A. Content to be an Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York. Mr. Content was associated in the practice of law with the firm of O'Gorman, Battle & Vandiver, of 37 Wall Street, from which H. Snowden Marshall resigned to become the successor of Henry A. Wise as United States Attorney in this district.

Mr. Content, who is 25 years old, is the son of Harry Content, of the firm of M. Content & Co., bankers and brokers at 111 Broadway. He lives at 11 East Forty-fifth Street. Mr. Content has been prominent as an organization Democrat and was the unsuccessful Democratic nominee for the Assembly from the Nineteenth District in 1910 and 1911. He was graduated from Columbia College in 1908 and from the Columbia Law School in 1911.

THINK WOMAN WAS KILLED.

Hair Found Clinched in Hand Recovered from the Bay.

The police are convinced that the woman whose hand was found floating off St. George, S. I., on Thursday by Patrick Brady and John Mitchell, deckhands on the municipal ferryboat Stapleton, was murdered. An examination of the hand yesterday made by Coroner's Physician George Mord of Richmond disclosed several strands of blond hair tightly clenched between the fingers, and from bruises found on the wrist and hand it is thought that the woman fought desperately before she was killed.

The theory that the hand might be that of Anna Anmuller, the girl slain by Hans Schmidt, the priest now held in the Tombs, was dispelled when Dr. Mord decided that the hand had been in the water but a few days. The nails were carefully manicured and the fingers long and tapering. Dr. Mord said that he was unable to establish the age of the woman, but he said he thought that she was young and weighed about 140 pounds. The only mark of identification was a rectangular scar on the second joint of the thumb, made, perhaps, two years ago.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE FINED.

Followed Woman Complainant, She Said, to Get Divorce Evidence.

Harry A. Swinton of 290 Liberty Street, a private detective, was fined $2 last night by Magistrate House in the Men's Night Court on complaint of Mrs. Gertrude Furthmann of 3,485 Broadway, wife of a Park Row café proprietor, who said that for a long time Swinton has made her life miserable by following her to get evidence to be used against her in a divorce action.

Swinton followed her yesterday afternoon, she said, from the Brooklyn Bridge Subway station to the elevated railroad platform, where she called a policeman. She said that Swinton had been at her door every morning and followed her wherever she went until she had been driven to the point of nervous prostration.

"I am satisfied that this man's conduct tended to a breach of the peace," said Magistrate House in imposing a fine of $2.

FAVORS MARRIED TEACHERS

Board's Action Will Lead to Secret Wedlock, Mrs. Blatch Says.

What she called an effort on the part of the Board of Educaton to have children educated by either spinsters or men, as shown by its action in regard to Mrs. Bridget C. Peixotto, was criticised yesterday by Mrs. Stanton Blatch of the Women's Political Union. The effort, she said, would fail because women teachers who married would conceal the fact. Ths deception, she said, would have a bad effect upon the character of the teachers and would react upon the school children. She said:

Undoubtedly we shall hear in the public discussion of this case a great deal about the right of woman to marry and the sacred right of motherhood, and very little about the interests of the school children and the efficiency of the school system. In the discussion, the Board of Education itself wandered so far from its specific work of protecting the interests of school children and the efficiency of the school, that more than one spoke of the interest of the child of the teacher, urging that in order to insure the care of that child the mother teacher ought to remain at home.

Far from thinking that this would insure good schools, it seems to me the decision is only part of the plan to render our schools absolutely inflexible in organization. To contemplate that our children through all time are to be educated only by men or spinsters is indeed an appalling idea. In the first place, those of us who know human nature are well aware that many of the women teachers will marry surreptitiously and will hide the fact of their motherhood. The characters of those teachers of course will suffer from living the life of concealment and deceit. But I regret the decision on wider grounds than this. I think, if anything our public school system stands in need of to-day, it is limbering up. Children are thrown into a hopper and are too little connected with the actualities of life. Through the marriage of teachers, I can see a blow struck at this inflexible system. The women of wider human interest and human experience ought to be the ones in contact with our children, and it would be well for the children if the organization of the school could be rendered yielding enough to meet the married teachers' needs.

I have not a doubt, if we limbered up our schools with a big admixture of young mothers in the teaching staff, that the schools might really become, in time, quite attractive to the children. Had the world early enough conceived the idea of our present Board of Education of the unsuitability of married women in the teaching profession, we would not have had Mme. Curie as a professor in the French University, we would not have had Emma Willard and her wonderful experiment for the education of girls at the old Troy Seminary, and we would not have had the person who is doing more than anyone else in the world to introduce sound ideas into the education of little children, Mme. Montessori.

Dean Thomas M. Balliet of the New York University School of Pedagogy was another who criticised the action of the Board of Education in dismissing Mrs. Peixotto. He said the action of the board was a grave injustice and was absolutely indefensible in the light of her long and efficient service.

HONOR LOUIS WINDMULLER.

Members of the Reform Club Praise His Long Services.

The members of the Reform Club, of which the late Louis Windmuller had been treasurer for twenty-four years, met yesterday in the club rooms in South William Street and adopted resolutions praising their former associate for his work as a philanthropist and reformer. They pledged themselves, so far as possible, to "meet the questions of the day with the same singleness of devotion, self-abnegation and sincerity of purpose exhibited by our late associate."

The resolutions referred to Mr. Windmuller as "unstinting and unselfish in his services to the Reform Club," and "a foreigner by birth who represented the highest ideals of American citizenship."

The six speakers who recalled memories of the late philanthropist were Everett P. Wheeler, the oldest living ex-president of the club; Henry de Forest Baldwin; Calvin Tomkins, ex-Commissioner of Docks and Ferries; John G. Agar, former president of the Club; Bert Hanson and Frederick W. Hinrichs.

FINED FOR SMUGGLING.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 10.—John H. McCullough, a New York stock broker, was fined $3,000 by Judge John Rellstab in the United States Court here today for smuggling and conspiracy after McCullough had pleaded non vult to the charges. The defendant's brother, Edward A. McCullough, also a stock broker, was fined $500 for aiding in the conspiracy, and sentence was suspended in the case of Mary Monahan, a servant employed by the McCulloughs.

It was charged that Mr. and Mrs. John H. McCullough and the servant brought goods worth $6,500 into Hoboken from Europe without declaring them. The brother had obtained an "expeditor" from the customs officials, and, believing this exempted payment on duty, sent his relatives a wireless message not to pay.

Secretary Lane Back, Recovered.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Secretary Lane of the Interior, accompanied by Mrs. Lane, Dr. Adolph Miller, his confidential assistant, and H. B. Meyer, his secretary, returned to Washington today after an absence of nearly three months in the West. Secretary Lane apparently has quite recovered from the serious sickness from which he suffered for several weeks.

Special leaves of absence, without pay—Engineer of Steamer C. M. Ingram, Engine 1, 12 hours, from 8 A. M., Oct. 11; Fireman (first grade) C. J. Ness, Engine 222, 24 hours, from 8 A. M., Oct. 20.

CHANGES OF NAME.

BOROCHMAN, ISAAC, to BROWN, ISAAC City Court Judge Richard H. Smith; age, 28 years; residence, 230 East Seventh Street; reason, has been using latter name for a number of years and the former name is hard to pronounce.

GARCEWICH, MAURICE, to GARCY, MAURICE; City Court Judge Edward La Fetra; age, 50 years; residence 1,800 Seventh Avenue; reason, former name difficult to spell and caused confusion.

ROBINOWITZ, MORRIS, to ROBINS, MORRIS; City Court Judge La Fetra; residence, 219 East Tenth Street; age, 30 years; reason, difficulty in spelling and pronouncing former name was a hindrance in business.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular at Close, with Losses Exceeding Gains--Unfilled Tonnage Decrease.

There was nothing decisive about yesterday's stock market beyond the submission of fresh evidence of its narrowness. Small transactions in any but the three or four leading issues were sufficient to bring about wide fluctuations. Steel sold off to 55⅝ on its unfilled tonnage statement, and Union Pacific dropped back to its low record for the present movement made a few days ago. Amalgamated Copper was a weak spot in the day's trading, being hurt by a sharp break in the metal quotations abroad.

Judge Lovett's supplementary remarks on the plans of the Union Pacific were so nearly in line with the interpretation of his statement drawn by most of the traders that they exerted no influence on quotations. The stock has sold so much higher than its present price when there was no talk of any increased return to holders that brokers saw no reason to sell the issue on a statement indicating that any extra dividend will be offset by a reduction in the regular rate. The United States Steel Corporation reported unfilled orders on hand as of Oct. 1 of 5,003,000 tons, a decrease of 220,000 tons from the total at the beginning of September. On the corresponding date last year unfilled tonnage was 6,551,000 tons.

To-day's bank statement is again expected to be somewhat unfavorable, with a net loss in cash. Estimates as to the amount of this decrease varied yesterday from $2,900,000 to $4,075,000. The mercantile agencies' report of business for the week was out of line with sentiment as expressed in security prices for that period, holding that the volume of trade is gradually enlarging despite the interruption caused by attempts to adjust prices to the new conditions following the enactment of the Tariff bill. The sore spot of the trade situation is the steel industry, where no general revival of activity is expected until the effects of the tariff changes can be more clearly defined.

The market closed irregular with losses outnumbering gains. The market grew dull after a dip brought about by moderately heavy selling near the end of the first hour and a spurt in activity which came in the middle of the day was of short duration.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 3¼@3¾ per cent. with the last loan at 3¼ per cent. The renewal rate was 3¾ per cent.

Time money rates were 4½@5 per cent. for sixty days, 5¼@5½ per cent. for ninety days and 5@5½ per cent. for four, five and six months.

Clearing House exchanges, $300,201,763; balances, $11,187,709; Sub-Treasury debt balance, $77,010.

The local banks have lost $5,454,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations this week.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 4 7-16@4½ per cent. for short bills, and 4⅝ per cent. for three months' bills; Paris, 3¾ per cent., and Berlin, 4⅜ per cent. Money was 4 per cent. in Berlin and 3½ per cent. in London.

The Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 45 pfennigs. The Paris check rate on London was 25f. 28½c.

Foreign exchange rates at the points noted were quoted as follows:

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

Demand sterling—High, $4.6580; low, $4.6570; last $4.6570.

Financing International Motor.

The International Motor Company has called a meeting of shareholders for next Tuesday to vote on a proposal for borrowing $1,200,000 at a rate of interest not to exceed 6 per cent. for the purpose of carrying on the business more satisfactorily. The consent of three-fourths of the preferred stock owners is necessary under the company's rules. It is planned to pay off the loan within a year.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Mitchel in Wall Street.

From a broker's viewpoint, the Fusion rally held in a Broad Street restaurant after the close of the market yesterday afternoon was a bear argument on John Purroy Mitchel's chances. The meeting, which was attended by the Mayoralty candidate, Controller Prendergast, Congressman Calder of Brooklyn, and several minor lights, was scheduled to begin at 3:30 o'clock, but the attraction of a news ticker reporting the baseball scores downstairs proved too strong for every one except the members of the Reception Committee until after the close of the contest at Philadelphia. Part of the baseball crowd was then corralled and led upstairs, where a fairly representative gathering listened to several speakers. Interest in the meeting was lessened very quickly when it became known that Mr. Mitchel was there only as an onlooker, owing to a sore throat.

More Light on Union Pacific.

The persistent refusal of many people to understand the last sentence of a statement given out by Judge Lovett on Thursday decided him to repeat that part of his announcement in plainer terms. "Personally, I see no necessity for any amplification," he said, "but to remove any misunderstanding I may say simply that Union Pacific is a 10 per cent. stock, paying 10 per cent. out of investment income and transportation earnings." It was the purpose of the Directors to conserve to the Union Pacific investor that same income. All of the plans considered for an extra dividend provided for a corresponding reduction in the 10 per cent. rate paid on Union Pacific common stock.

Government 2s as a Speculation.

Movements of Government 2 per cent. bonds of 1930 in "over the counter" transactions yesterday indicated that many buyers were being attracted by the speculative value of the securities at prices around 95. It was reported among the banks that considerable switching of ownership between Government 3s and 2s was in progress, the 3s being disposed of so that 2s might be bought. The feeling appears to be growing stronger as time passes without hurried action at Washington on the currency bill that the measure, when finally dressed out for a final vote, will contain provisions which tend to take the bonds used to secure circulation back toward par. Just how this will be brought about is not known, or even conjectured publicly, but dealers in the bonds say that the buying of the week has certainly been in large degree in response to a belief that ultimate profit will result. Some of the 3s coming on the market are being sent in by Western and Southern banks. It is thought that they are bonds which were used as collateral behind Treasury loans for crop moving purposes, the original borrowings having been returned to the Treasury. The bid price of Government registered 2s on the Stock Exchange was still below 95, at 94¾, but about $200,000 sold outside from 95 up to 95¼.

New Haven's Earnings.

By the time that it is actually brought about, New Haven's shareholders should be so accustomed to the idea of a reduction in the present 6 per cent. rate that they should be able to bear the blow with equanimity. Every succeeding earnings statement furnishes another reason for a second reduction in the rate. In the past year operating expenses increased $5,600,000, of which $2,370,000 was due to the higher cost of transportation. There is usually little opportunity to reduce expenses in that department, and as for maintenance, the new management has set about increasing rather than decreasing expenditures by way of minimizing the risk of accidents. Gross revenues are running slightly behind last year's, and the company is now earning about 4 per cent. In the long run, stockholders would probably benefit by a reduction in their return for the purpose of making it easier to finance improvements.

Stubborn Market for the Bears.

Twice in yesterday's session the bears made a concerted attack on prices without meeting with as great success as on the preceding day. Aggressive selling of Amalgamated appeared to be the signal for both attempts, but, while this issue and Reading proved to be rather vulnerable, the demonstration on neither occasion brought out much stock in other directions. Rallies followed the depression and it looked as though the stock list as a whole might have made a better account of itself than it did if it had not been for the discouraging action of such usually stable shares as American Telephone and Telegraph and Western Union. The former sold down to the lowest level since 1909 and the latter established a new low point for the present downward movement. The market resisted artificial pressure, but displayed small defensive powers to slow selling that seemed to contain genuine liquidation.

Opinions on Steel Orders.

The shrinkage of 220,000 tons in unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation during September was considered from various angles in Wall Street without an expression of sentiment being made in the market for Steel common. The decline was about 35,000 tons greater than had been previously estimated. The showing was not looked upon as adverse by those who had thought early estimates were rendered without due consideration of the setback the steel business was reported to have received, but there were other followers of the steel trade who did not hold this view. They were the ones who believed that the aggregate of railroad orders in the closing half of the month would boost up the total of general orders to such an extent that little decline would be shown. Shipments in the month were figured at about 39,000 tons a day. The daily falling off, reckoning on the twenty-five business days of September, was the neighborhood of 870 tons. Incoming business was, therefore, at the rate of a little more than 30,000 tons as compared with approximately 32,000 tons in August.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Dull and Prices Move Narrowly Except on Standard Oil.

The outside security market was very dull yesterday, the inactivity extending even to the recent leaders. As a result of the small trading the movement of prices was within fractional limits, with the exception of Standard Oil of New Jersey, which advanced two points, half of which it retained at the close.

American Surety Co. Quits Canada.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 10.—The American Surety Company of New York has withdrawn from the Canadian field and has reinsured its Canadian policies with the Canadian Surety Company of Toronto.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

Wheat and corn advanced the better part of a cent a bushel yesterday for some options, while others were firm. Covering of short contracts contributed to the rise. Oats fluctuated rather widely at times, but left off net unchanged to ¼c lower. Cotton broke down sharply in the last hour, but was steady in final transactions, with small net declines. Cottonseed oil was firm, but provisions receded.

WHEAT.

While it was the consensus of opinion among grain traders that the Government report on wheat was about up to expectations, and had not changed the situation to any material extent, the wheat market developed a firmer tone during the day, and closed at a net advance of ⅝c. The upward tendency was thought to be due to a firmer technical position arising from recent operations, while a show of firmness in the Northwest and an advance in premiums for cash wheat also exerted a bullish influence on values. Stocks at Northwestern points showed further gains, Minneapolis increasing 1,230,000 bushels for the week, while in the past five days Duluth stocks increased 1,118,000 bushels.

The weather over the West was unsettled, with more or less rain, but reports regarding the outlook for the new Winter wheat crop were very favorable. The foreign markets were rather heavy, owing to continued pressure of foreign offerings, and influenced by the prospects of large world's exports. Broomhall estimated world's shipments, exclusive of North America, at 8,800,000 bushels, which, with Bradstreet's American shipments, indicated total world's exports of 14,948,000 bushels, against 14,160,000 the previous week, and 13,488,000 last year.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 97c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York export basis, and 98½c, free on board; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 96c, free on board.

CORN.

A firmer tone prevailed in the corn market and prices at the close showed net gains of ½@⅝c. The advance was credited largely to covering prompted by unsettled weather in the West. Cash markets were firm. It was reported that two cargoes of Argentine corn had been purchased for shipment to Galveston, the price being 72c, free on board, that port. Argentine shipments for the week were 4,464,000 bushels, and included 527,000 to New York.

In the local cash market export corn was quoted at 79c, free on board.

OATS.

The oats market was lower early, owing to a bearish construction of the Government report, which showed a larger increase in the indicated yield than expected, but on the decline there was considerable covering in sympathy with the advance in corn, and final prices were net unchanged to ⅛c lower. The local cash market was steady; standard white was quoted at 46@46½c; No. 2, 46½@47c; No. 3, 45½@46c; No. 4, 44@45c; ordinary clipped white, 46@48c; fancy clipped white, 48@49c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market showed considerable firmness during the early operations, influenced by a firmer tone to the hog market, but on the advance renewed selling developed and prices late in the day were easy and below the previous close. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 18,000; estimated for Saturday, 11,000; Kansas City received 2,500 and Omaha 3,400.

COTTON.

A rather poor opening in the local cotton market, with first prices 2 to 5 points lower, was followed by a covering movement which lasted pretty much all day and advanced prices at one time about 33 points from the low of the morning. On several positions new low records for the present downward movement were recorded around the opening. It was evident, however, that the feeling was less bearish than theretofore, and the market had some good support up to the last hour, when it received a violent setback on cable news that cotton employers of Manchester had passed a resolution favoring a lockout in the federated area, to begin on making-up day for the week ending Oct. 25. Under the heavy realizing, and the bear pressure which followed, the market broke about 10 points from the top, and closed barely steady at a partial decline of 2 points. Except in the last hour, bears made little attempt to work for lower prices. The map showed rather low temperatures in the Middle and Far West, and in view of Monday's holiday, there was little disposition to increase short lines. While Southern spot markets were unchanged to ⅛c lower, most of the interior markets were unchanged from Thursday's prices, with fair sales. Week-end figures were bullish, including an into sight of 556,981, against 573,640 last year, and world's takings of American for the week of 309,874 bales, against 229,940 a year ago.

Southern spot markets officially reported were unchanged, ⅛c lower; generally unchanged and increased sales were reported in some of the markets.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The downward tendency noticed in the cottonseed oil market during the past week was checked during yesterday's operations, and at the close prices were one to five points net higher. There was less pressure of hedging operators, suggesting smaller offerings of crude oil, and the early firmness in lard and cotton resulted in more or less covering. There were further tenders of about 800 barrels on October contracts.

COFFEE.

Offerings were very small, and prices closed near top at net gains of 27@34 points. The close was quiet, with both sides inclined to await developments. Havre opened at a decline of ¾@1f, but closed at ¼@½ net higher, while Hamburg, after opening unchanged to ¼ lower, closed at a net gain of ⅛@⅜ pfennigs. Rio advanced 75 reis, while Santos was quiet and unchanged for spots, and Thursday's futures' market was 100@150 reis lower. The cost-and-freight market was higher, with Santos 4s quoted at 12.90@13.05.

Spot coffee firmer; ¼c higher; 10⅜c for Rio 7s.

ENTER MOTOR CARS IN ELECTRIC SHOW

Electric Accessories Will Be Seen Also Next Week—Y. M. C. A. Auto School Expands.

In addition to the newest models of both pleasure and commercial vehicles driven by electricity, a model garage and speedway and electrical machinery for cleaning and repairing automobiles will be exhibited at the Electrical Show which opens in the new Grand Central Palace on Wednesday. Vacuum cleaners, electric tire pumps, and electric polishing machine, a tire vulcanizer, mercury arc rectifiers and direct charging boards with the necessary equipment will be among the other devices shown. In the auto washroom a contrivance which is suspended from the ceiling and is intended to demonstrate with what ease a car can be scrubbed will be on view. The growth of the electric vehicle industry has been rapid and steady and trucks, fire apparatus, delivery wagons and special vehicles of all sorts are found equipped with this power.

The automobile school of the West Side Y. M. C. A. has absorbed the New York School of Automobile Engineers. The equipment of the New York school has been moved to the Y. M. C. A. building at Eighth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street, and men who had begun courses in the New York school will complete them there. An arrangement has been made by which a three-ton truck and other valuable equipment will be installed in the school by one of the motor companies, in return for which the school will train chauffeurs for the company.

Leaders in the Catholic and Protestant churches have encouraged the construction of the Lincoln Highway. Cardinal Gibbons has written a letter to A. R. Pardington, Vice President of the Lincoln Highay Association, in which he says:

"I am greatly pleased to know that success to this undertaking is assured. As I believe that such a highway will be a most fitting and useful monument to the memory of Lincoln.

The Rev. Joseph Schrembs, Bishop of Toledo, has contributed $25 to the highway fund, receiving one of the contributors' certificates with the amount of his gift written across its face. In a letter accompanying his contribution he says:

"It affords me pleasure to express my appreciation of your efforts to establish a national highway from ocean-to-ocean which will be worthy of our country. Its use and benefits will not be restricted to motorists and consequently it ought to enlist the active interest of all public spirited citizens. Other nations have built wonderful roads for the avowed purposes of making our nation's glory merits a national highway consecrated to peace and all its blessings."

BAD YEAR FOR DISTILLERS.

Competition Keen and Conditions Unsatisfactory, Says Report.

Under conditions of operation which were described in the annual report as particularly trying the Distillers Securities Company reported yesterday gross profits $404,385 greater in the fiscal year ended on June 30 than in the preceding year and net income $167,567 less than in 1912. Increased rentals, taxes and maintenance expenses used up all except $1,770,484 of the gross receipts, amounting to $3,046,165. The balance for dividends was $359,566, a decline of $334,000, but as only half as much money was distributed among stockholders as in the preceding year, a surplus of $6,398 was reported as compared with a deficit of $160,500 in 1912.

Secretary Wentworth told stockholders that competition was keen and trade conditions unsatisfactory. Under the spur of competition, however, gratifying results were obtained in widening the field of distribution. The company's inventories, he said, were believed to have a market value of at least $2,000,000 more than the price at which they were carried over into the new year.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES

The Daily Consular and Trade Report notes the following trade opportunities. Further information regarding them may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, care of the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C. New York merchants may obtain the information at the bureau's branch office, in room 337, in the Custom House, by giving the number of the item referred to:

11,823. MUNICIPAL CONTRACTS.—Because of numerous delays over the award of recent contracts, the Port Elizabeth Municipal Council passed a resolution that all contracts for municipal requirements in future should be open to unrestricted tenders. As a large amount of water pipe will be required shortly, it is desirable for American manufacturers who may be interested to take steps toward securing some of this trade. While tenders will probably be called for in London through the agents of the municipality, it is reasonable to suppose that a local engineering firm, representing a manufacturer from abroad, would stand a very good chance to obtain such contracts, other conditions being equal. A list of such firms has been furnished by an American Consul, and it might be to the advantage of American manufacturers to endeavor to make such a business arrangement unless already represented.

11,824. RAILS, SWITCHES, AND ACCESSORIES.—Manufacturers of light and heavy rails with fastenings, switches, and accessories, are requested to send data and specifications, including drawings, to the American Consul at Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, so that the Government of Mozambique may include American types in their call for tenders.

11,825. WATER-BORNE SEWERAGE PLANT.—An American Consul reports that the local Government has been authorized to spend $480,000 on the installation of a water-borne sewerage plant for the city in which he is located. Tenders will probably be called for, but in the meantime manufacturers interested should secure a local agent. He furnishes a list of firms that are free to take such agencies.

11,826. COTTONSEED MEAL.—One of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce reports that a large wholesale house at a European port handling all kinds of feedstuffs, including cottonseed meal, could enlarge the cottonseed meal business with better connections in the United States. This firm wants names of American oil mills in need of competent representation.

11,827. GRANULATED RICE FOR BREWERS.—A broker in a large city of Europe, now handling rice on commission for several large rice mills, and also importing rice and its products, informs a commercial agent of the Department of Commerce that he wants to export granulated rice for brewers. He could furnish 15,000 to 20,000 tons annually.

11,828. AMERICAN CAPITAL AND MACHINERY FOR REFRIGERATING PLANT.—A business man in a foreign country has written an American Consular officer relative to the desirability of inducing American capitalists to enter the local field and take part in the establishment of a refrigerating plant and slaughter house which it is proposed to erect in 1914. The capital stock of this organization will be about $1,287,500, and it is desired that the construction and equipment of the plant be carried out by some important American firm in preference to Continental houses. Copy of the complete report, giving detailed information relative to the project, size of plant, &c., will be sent to interested firms by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

11,829. COTTONSEED OIL MEAL.—A report from one of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce states that a grain broker at a European port, who also handles quantities of wheat bran and rue bran for feed, wants to enlarge his feed trade by handling a cottonseed meal account, by direct purchase or preferably on commission. An oil mill in Germany crushing Egyptian cottonseed, and thus making dark and low grade Egyptian cake, wants to import American high grade cottonseed cake for grinding with the Egyptian to bring up the quality. This firm could use 5,000 tons annually.

11,830. AGRICULTURAL PUBLICATIONS.—An American Consul reports that sample copies of agricultural publications with subscription prices and agency terms are desired by a local advertising publisher. With the recent pronounced development of agricultural resources in the country in question, it is thought that prospects for subscriptions to such publications seem favorable. Correspondence may be in English.

VAIL OUT OF NEW HAVEN.

Resigns with Cochrane, Presumably to Break Interlocking in Boards.

The Executive Committee of the New Haven Railroad received at their meeting yesterday the resignations as Directors of Theodore N. Vail and Alexander Cochrane, the proposed withdrawal of these men evidently indicating a step toward breaking up interlocking directorates in the New Haven System. It was announced some time ago that when the management of the different properties had been entirely renovated Howard Elliott twould be the only Director common to all of them.

The resignations were referred to the next meeting of Directors.

Several of the committees appointed by the Directors at their last meeting on Oct. 3 to investigate the properties under New Haven control announced their Chairmen yesterday. Charles F. Brooker heads the committee looking into the Connecticut trolley companies, A. Heaton Robertson the Steamship Committee, Lawrence Minot the Massachusetts Trolley Committee, William Skinner the committee examining the Boston & Maine, and President Howard Elliott the committee appointed to confer with Attorney General McReynolds in regard to the whole New Haven situation.

GT. NORTHERN DOES BETTER

Operating Income $3,513,000 More —Surplus Swelled.

The Great Northern Railway reports for the year ended on June 30 a surplus for the stockholders of $24,580,600. This compares with $21,650,000 earned in the previous year. After deducting $14,698,000 for the 7 per cent. dividends on $210,099,000 of stock, $750,000 for refunds as a result of the adverse decision in the Minnesota rate case, and $4,250,000 for the fund for permanent improvements and betterments there remained a balance of $4,282,000.

Gross operating revenues for the year were $78,692,000, an increase of $12,494,000. The operating income after expenses and taxes was $28,676,000, an increase of $3,513,000.

President C. R. Gray says that "while the grain crop is not as large as last year, reports indicate that it is better than in any other previous year, due to new acreage coming under cultivation.

"Taxes are constantly and materially increasing, this year the increase being $790,000, or 22 per cent. On Jan. 1 the gross earnings tax in the State of Minnesota was increased from 4 per cent. to 5 per cent."

Typewriter Concern in Trouble.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 10.—Earl H. Russell was appointed receiver of the Noiseless Typewriter Company of Middletown by Judge Martin of the United States District Court to-day. The application was made by John M. Forbes of New York, and others with the concurrence of the management. The bonded indebtedness is $200,000. Labor and material total $85,489. There are 14,984 fully paid shares representing $1,498,400 of preferred stock. The common stock amounts to 42,025 shares, representing $4,202,500. Mr. Forbes holds a promissory note against the company for $5,885 and it is alleged the concern cannot meet it.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The United States Consul at Birmigham suggests that American firms who fireproof timber might find it to their advantage to approach British railways and car builders with a view to selling that product. A list of car builders may be had from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, D. C.

With the possible exception of three, the knitting mills of Sweden have been absorbed into a combination recently organized and known as Aktiebolaget Sveriges Trikafabriker (Knitting Mills Company of Sweden.) It is announced that its principal object will be to improve quality and quantity of the output, and thus reduce the considerable imports of knit goods.

The revised estimate of The Monetary Times of Toronto of the amount of United States capital invested in Canada is being prepared. Preliminary information and statistics show that the amount is now at least $899,000,000, as compared with $279,000,000 in 1909, and $417,000,000 in 1911.

Can Gem Smuggling Be Stopped?

With about 15,000 miles of border to protect, how can the United States officials stop the smuggling of precious stones under the new tariff? This is a question the local gem importers would like to have answered. Also, will it be easy to prevent smuggling when, according to a prominent Maiden Lane dealer, a man can carry a $10,000 ruby between his toes when wearing a shoe of comfortable size. Diamonds to the value of $200,000, on which the new duty would be $40,000, can be carried in an inside pocket without giving it a bulge large enough to attract attention. The secret service men, both here and abroad, in the opinion of some of the leading importers, will be unable to handle the task that has been cut out for them by the raising of duties on cut gems. On rough gems they will have little work to do. Some of the importers say that they would rather have had the Government put a 50 per cent. duty on cut stones instead of 20 per cent., claiming that it would be just as easy for the Government to collect and would force out of trade an undesirable element. Jail sentences for private and commercial smuggling were recommended in place of fines to curb the evil.

Flannelette Prices Higher.

Prices were named yesterday by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company on 36-inch flannelettes for Spring delivery. While actual prices could not be obtained at the local office of the company, it was said that there had been an average advance of 15 per cent. over last year's figures. The three principal lines, 1,301, 1,501, and 1,701, were advanced 1¼, 1½, and 1½ cents a yard, respectively. These goods are sold principally to the manufacturing trade for night robes, pajamas and similar garments. While there was nothing in the tariff to affect the domestic grades of these goods unfavorably, buyers who looked over the lines yesterday were cautious in their ordering because of the advances. They seem unable to get higher prices from the retailers for their goods, which means that they will have to use the next lower grades of fabric this year and that the consumer will get a poorer garment for his money. The price of these garments has remained practically unchanged in the last two years, but the quality of the goods in them has declined about 50 per cent.

Stamping Law Campaign to Go On.

After obtaining a national law and seven or eight State laws relative to the proper stamping of gold articles, the United States Stamping Law Committee has disbanded and turned its work and funds over to the Good and Welfare Committee of the National Jewelers Board of Trade. The action was taken at a meeting in the Board of Trade rooms on Thursday, at which a resolution was passed that the funds turned over to the Good and Welfare Committee be used only for prosecuting violations of stamping acts or in getting amendments to them. The disbanded committee was made up of A. K. Sloan, H. A. Bliss, George E. Fahys, Frederick H. Larter, F. R. Appleton, Col. John L. Shepherd, O. G. Fessenden, Ludwig Nissen, Henry Untermyer, Leopold Stern, H. L. Farrow, C. R. Jung, Leo Wormser and T. E. Wilson.

Railroads and Sample Trunks.

The new ruling of the Pennsylvania Railroad which no longer permits the carrying of empty sample trunks as baggage was viewed with indifference here yesterday among both branches of the clothing industry. So far as could be learned there are few instances of the selling of samples, and these are by salesmen who cover the most distant territories. The manager of a large cloak and suit establishment told the TIMES reporter that a number of the express companies made special rates for sample trunks and that others would no doubt provide for such transportation. In any event, he said, any extra cost will be so small as not to be any special hardship.

Coats for Minaret Gowns.

To accommodate the minaret gown, there has been designed the minaret fur coat. The fullness, says The Dry Goods Economist, is so arranged as to stand away from the figure, instead of being drawn into a snug-fitting band or made with gored seams at the edge, as are the majority of the season's garments. A circular coat skirt attached at the waistline allows the fur to fall in ripples about the figure. The length is three-quarters in some models, while others are finished off above the knees. The waistline is accentuated by fancy cords slipped through slashes at short intervals, the cord and tassel ends being tied at the left side.

***

Elastic Leather Belts.

What are called "live leather belts" for men have just been placed on the market by a local firm. The belts are made in the regulation tubular form, and the leather is so fashioned by machinery as to have the elasticity of rubber and at the same time retain the strength and appearance of an ordinary belt. Some rubber is used in the making, but the belts are said to be so constructed as to retain their elasticity for a long time. The outer leather surface is marked by very small transverse ridges or corrugations, so that as the belt stretches the outer leather surface is elongated much after the manner of an accordion, but resumes its original shape when the tension is removed. The belts retail from $1 up.

***

Green Silk Selling Rapidly.

There is much comment in the local silk trade over the record run on emerald green silks this year. For the last five years this color has been in demand more or less, but it is said that this year it has come to the front as never before and has brought all the other greens along with it. Large quantities of the cheaper fabrics in these shades have been turned into petticoats for wear with slit skirts. Green silk hosiery is also very popular for this purpose and is very scarce. Despite the rush for green silk fabrics, the season's sales of black silks show a much larger yardage.

***

Dress Goods Wanted in Texas.

Despite the tariff changes that will become affective on woolen fabrics on Jan. 1, the Southern merchants do not seem afraid to take the full quota of goods they ordered for the present season. Yesterday a hurry call from Texas was received by one of the large jobbing houses for shipment of $11,000 worth of dress goods and woolens that had been ordered for delivery on Oct. 15. While the shipment was requested only five days ahead of time, it was considered a very good sign for future business from that State. Eleven different kinds of fabrics were included in the shipment.

***

Cloak and Suit Demand Heavy.

The volume of duplicate orders for women's cloaks and suits now coming to the local market is causing manufacturers no little trouble. The loss of time occasioned by the Jewish holidays this month and the disinclination of buyers to make their initial orders of the usual size are given as reasons for the difficulty. A manufacturer said yesterday that a demand had sprung up for certain novelty fabrics and styles contrary to earlier expectations and that this was also contributing to his troubles. Velvets, plushes, and velours are especially in demand. Many buyers are now showing a notable favoritism for black suits.

STEEL TONNAGE FALLS OFF.

Advance Orders Reported Lowest for Six Months.

Advance orders on the books of the United States Steel Corporation on Sept. 30 aggregated 5,008,785 tons, a decline of 219,683 tons from the total of record on Aug. 31. The decline was somewhat greater than had been expected in the financial district, but was not extensive enough to indicate that buyers had restricted their commitments materially preceding the new tariff.

The monthly statement of unfilled tonnage issued yesterday showed that forward business under contract was, at the first of the month, nearly 2,000,000 tons below the amount reported on April 30. Orders at the close of each of the last six months were: April, 6,978,762 tons; May, 6,324,322 tons; June, 5,807,317 tons; July, 5,393,356 tons; August, 5,223,408 tons, and September, 5,008,785 tons.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The New York University School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance announces a special course in salesmanship, morning, afternoon, and evening sessions, for the 1913-1914 term.

According to a report from Philadelphia, iron ore shipments from Imataca, Venezuela, are steadily increasing. Shipments during September totaled about 11,000 tons, while October shipments are expected to reach 15,000, and by the end of the year 30,000 tons monthly.

According to an importer, the trade in Holland herrings is still limited, but is expected to pick up with the coming of cold weather. The removal of duty is expected to increase this trade.

The high mark for cotton exports from Galveston occurred last Tuesday, when eleven ships sailed, carrying 127,043 bales, destined to eight European ports. The highest previous mark was established Oct. 1, 1912, when 95,278 bales were consigned to European ports.

The sugar movement at United States Atlantic ports for the week is given as follows: Receipts, 22,355 tons, against 27,761 last week, 25,360 last year, and 15,961 in 1911; meltings, 35,000, against 47,000, 33,000, and 33,000, respectively; stock, 183,000, against 196,503, 96,848, and 70,022 respectively.

That the Columbus Day closing movement is gaining ground was evidenced yesterday by the addition of Cheney Brothers, Tata, Sons & Co., Spielman & Co., Belding Brothers & Co., Nonotuck Silk Company, and the Holland Manufacturing Company to the list of silk houses which would be closed all day Monday.

Bernhard Jacobson has sold his stock in the Mahler Company and resigned as President.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

THE TANWAY AMUSEMENT CORPORATION, which had an open-air motion picture show at 3,168 Broadway, corner of 127th Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $3,997, and nominal assets $1,100, consisting of a piano, moving-picture machine and appurtenances, $750, and a claim of $350. Judge Hand appointed Peter B. Olney, Jr., receiver; bond $500. The largest creditor is the William Horne Company—about $2,000. The company was incorporated on May 26, 1913, with capital stock $15,000.

COHEN BROS.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Morris and Frank Cohen, composing the firm of Cohen Bros., manufacturers of shirt waists at 113 Spring Street, by these creditors: Miller & Bonime, $200; Hyman Rader, $300, and Edward Zueimer, $42. It is alleged that they are insolvent, and removed a large part of their property. Liabilities are said to be $9,000, and assets $1,000. The business was started in July, 1900. Judge Hand appointed Miss Bertha Rembaugh receiver; bond, $500.

MAURICE LOBEL.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Maurice Lobel, a seller of jewelry, of 957 Kelly Street, Bronx, by Isador Zagon, a creditor, for $600. It is alleged that he is insolvent, and transferred merchandise and accounts of $3,500. He has been selling diamonds for the past 10 years, and for a while had an interest in a shoe store. About six weeks ago he started as a jobber in jewelry, and is said to have bought $4,000 worth of goods. On Sept. 30 a meeting of his creditors was held, and an offer was made of 20 cents on the dollar, which was refused, and thereafter the offer was raised to 37½ cents. Judge Hand appointed Abraham Suderov receiver; bond, $500.

STERLING SKIRT COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Solomon Horowitz, doing business as the Sterling Skirt Company, at 104 Greene Street, by these creditors: Esterson & Esterson, $194; Bayer & Bayer, $270, and Herman Goldberg, $64. Judge Hand appointed Roger H. Clarke receiver, bond, $500. Liabilities are $5,000 and assets $500. He has been in business since Oct. 1, 1910.

JOHN C. WILLENBROCK of 722 Columbus Avenue, formerly a saloonkeeper, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $1,325, and no assets.

FRED DICKERSON, carpenter, at Newburg, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $4,956, and assets $4,638, consisting of accounts, $4,563; stock, $25, and equity in real estate, $50.

SEELIGMAN & STERN.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Seeligman & Stern, manufacturers of waists and dresses at 17 West Seventeenth Street, show liabilities $18,157, and assets $11,088, consisting of stock, $2,300; machines and fixtures, $2,685; accounts assigned, $4,965; good accounts, $139; bad accounts, $881; cash, $45, and life insurance, surrender value, $73.

TRACY RICKARDS COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Tracy Rickards Company, clothing dealers at 430 Sixth Avenue, show liabilities $10,753, and assets $4,217, consisting of stock, $2,300; fixtures, $1,000; accounts, $405; claims, $500; insurance rebate, $61, and cash in bank, $1.

JOSEPH KOPALD.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Joseph Kopald, pawnbroker and dealer in jewelry at 440 Sixth Avenue, show liabilities $41,824, and assets $19,900, consisting of stock, $10,000; fixtures, $3,000; accounts, $880, and cash in bank, $110. Among the creditors are M. H. Mann & Co., $4,461; C. P. Goldsmith & Co., $3,963; S. Hess, $3,744; Loewenthal, Loeb & Co., $3,311, and Louis Bellensen, $3,194.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 314 business failures in the United States during the week as compared with 230 for the previous week and 273, 212, 223 and 220 for the corresponding weeks of 1912 to 1900. The Middle States had 97, New England 36, Southern 78, Western 49. Northwestern 79 and Far Western 35. Canada had 49, as compared with 43 for the preceding weeks. Approximately 85 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less and 12 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Among popular novelties in buttons are the tango crystals, which are shown in Oriental designs of red and yellow colorings. Persian effects in porcelain and crystal are also in demand, while Roman pearls are being used extensively for waist ornaments.

A small purse made like a wrist watch is being shown for shoppers who use street cars. The cover is made with a snap catch, so that it is easy to get a coin out of the purse even when carrying packages.

The local clothing wool market continues quiet, with buyers covering only immediate needs. The operation of the new duty rates will probably produce no immediate change in conditions, although not all are optimistic regarding the prospects of business after the free-wool clause goes into effect.

Motor coats of velour de laine, duvetyn, and figured plush are popular this Fall. These coats are made on straight lines, with square corners. The sleeves are made in the setin or raglan effects and are long. Collars are either standing or lapel and rolled.

GETTING ORE FROM CUBA.

Iendependents Testify to Deposits There and What Trust Holds.

Frederick W. Wood, President of the Maryland Steel Company, told the representatives of the Government in yesterday's hearing in the suint against the United States Steel Corporation, that the rails turned out by his company were superior to all others.

"If that is the case," asked Judge Dickinson, chief prosecutor, "why do you sell them at the conventional price of $28 a ton?"

"To get the business," was the reply.

Mr. Wood said that the Maryland Company had to buy all its ore where it could get it, and used from 250,000 to 350,000 tons a year. Much of the ore came from Cuba. The extent of the Cuban ore deposits was discussed by Charles F. Rand, President of the Spanish-American Iron Company, before Mr. Wood took the stand. He said that the grand estimated total of all districts was 3,221,000,000 tons, of which the Steel Corporation owned about 210,000,000 tons.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Tax Stands on Manufactured Opium and Sewing Machine Parts.

The Board of United States General Appraisers ruled yesterday that Merck & Co. were not entitled to a reduction of the duty of $2 a pound levied by Collector Mitchel on opium advanced in condition by manufacture. The importers asked to pay $1.50.

Presser feet, parts of sewing machines, imported by C. B. Richard & Co., were held at 45 per cent. ad valorem under the provision in the act of 1909, for manufactures of metal not specially provided for. Lower duty was sought on castings under Paragraphs 148 and 149.

The American Express Company won free entry for coated paper brought in as American goods returned. The Collector had held the paper dutiable.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Reports to trade journals during the week indicate that some unsettlement because of the tariff has occurred, although there has been no marked recession in the progress of general business. Bank clearings have been, however, considerably smaller than in the same week of 1912.

Dun's Review says:

Adjustment to new conditions following the enactment of the tariff bill results in some irregularity, yet, in a broad sense, the trade movement reports improvement. Most reports indicate that the volume of trade is gradually enlarging, the necessity of replenishing depleted merchandise stocks causing increased activity. The paucity of supplies is so marked in certain lines that difficulty is experienced in filling immediate needs, with shortage of labor hampering some manufacturers in complying with requests for urgent deliveries. This is particularly true of the cotton goods mills, which have orders in hand calling for a full output for the next three months. The demand in both jobbing and retail circles continues brisk at this season of the year for many products, although business has been restricted to some extent by the unsettled condition of the raw material markets.

Although bank clearings show a moderate improvement over a week ago, they continue much smaller than in 1912, the total this week at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, amounting to $2,932,144,230, a loss of 9.2 per cent. as compared with the $3,227,888,535 of the same week last year. The comparison with 1911, when bank clearings amounted to $2,243,294,723, shows

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The disturbance that was over the Plains States Thursday was central Friday night over the upper Lake region and moving toward the St. Lawrence Valley. It has been attended by high winds and rains in the upper Lake region and showers and thunder storms in the Mississippi and Missouri Valleys. Scattered rains and snows are reported from the north Rocky Mountain region, and there were also light rains along the Atlantic Coast.

Temperatures continue unseasonably high in the Gulf States and the region east of the Mississippi River. At Cincinnati a temperature of 88 degrees, the highest of record in October, was reported this afternoon.

Much cooler weather has overspread the upper Mississippi Valley and the Plains States. The Lake storm will move East and be attended by rains Saturday in the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio and lower Mississippi Valleys and Saturday afternoon or night in the middle Atlantic States and New England. It will be followed by generally fair weather Sunday east of the Mississippi River. Fair weather will prevail generally Saturday and Sunday west of the Mississippi River.

Temperatures will be considerably lower Saturday over the region of the Great Lakes, the great Central Valleys and the Gulf States, and Sunday in the Atlantic States.

Storm warnings are displayed on the Great Lakes.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate, variable, becoming south and increasing; middle Atlantic Coast, moderate, variable, becoming south; south Atlantic Coast, light to moderate, variable.

FORECASTS FOR TO-DAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York—Increasing cloudiness Saturday, probably followed by showers; Sunday clearing and cooler, increasing south winds.

Southern New England—Cloudy, probably showers Saturday; Sunday clearing and cooler; moderate to brisk south winds.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Increasing cloudiness, probably followed by showers Saturday afternoon or night; Sunday probably fair and cooler; moderate south winds.

Western New York—Showers, followed by clearing and colder Saturday; Sunday fair and cooler; high west and southwest winds.

Northern New England—Increasing cloudiness Saturday, probably followed by showers; Sunday showers and cooler; moderate to brisk south winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

1912.	1913.		1912.	1913.
8 A. M.	56	68	4 P. M.	77	71
6 A. M.	56	67	6 P. M.	73	66
9 A. M.	62	69	9 P. M.	69	64
12 M.	74	73	11 P. M.	67	63

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 69; for the corresponding date last year it was 67; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 58.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 67; at 8 P. M. it was 65. Maximum temperature, 74 degrees at 12:33 P. M.; minimum, 64 degrees at 5 A. M. Humidity, 88 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 91 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.16 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.13 inches.

EDUCATION NOTES.

City Superintendent Maxwell announces that an examination of men and women applicants for license as assistant teacher of freehand drawing in high schools will be held on Oct. 27 and 28.

During the week of Dec. 1, examinations will be held for places in the high schools as follows: Clerical assistant, men and women; laboratory assistant, men and women; library assistant, men and women; placement and investigation assistant, men and women.

Assistant teacher of the following subjects: Applied mechanics, steam and electricity, men only; art metal work, men only; biology, men and women; bookbinding, women only; commercial branches, men and women; elocution, men and women; English, men and women; foundry work, men only; French, men and women; German, men and women; Latin, men only; library practice, women only; machine shop practice, men only; mathematics, men and women; music, men and women; physical training, men and women; physics, women only; Spanish, men and women; stenography and typewriting, women only.

The Board of Education has approved the plan suggested by its Committee on By-laws for the proposed advisory council of teachers. According to this plan the delegates representing the voluntary organizations in the election of the teachers' council shall be elected annually by their respective associations in the same manner as officers and they shall serve one year. The delegates shall meet in joint convention on the second Thursday of November of each year for the election of members of the council. The President of the Board of Education shall designate the place of meeting and the temporary Chairman. After the meeting is organized the delegates shall at once proceed to the election of members of the council by ballot. This may be done in separate groups or all the deputies may vote for all members of the council, but in the latter case nominations of candidates shall be made only by delegates of the same rank or grade as the respective nominees.

The Board of Education has approved the appointment of a special Committee on Nominations, composed of seven members of the board, to have charge of all matters relating to the nominations of district superintendents and members of the Board of Examiners, and other nominations made by the Board of Superintendent or by the City Superintendent.

Temporary licenses for service in a training school for teachers have been granted to Marjorie Blydenburgh as model teacher and to Rebecca Palmland as critic teacher.

The Association of Men Teachers on eligible lists prior to Jan. 1, 1912, will hold a meeting on next Monday morning at the City College Club in West Fifty-ninth Street.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Marshall P. Wilder Buys New West Side Apartment—Two Deals Involving $7,000,000 in Property Values—Expensive Residence Sold—Fifth Avenue Building Lease—Good Suburban Market.

Something like old-time activity characterized the realty market yesterday in which west side apartment houses figured prominently while, in addition, one of the row of fine private dwellings erected by W. W. Hall a short time ago in Eighty-sixth Street, near Central Park, was sold for occupancy.

There were two separate deals in which uptown apartments figured, and both were in the nature of trades. Marshall P. Wilder, the humorist, was the purchaser in one of the transactions. He bought the new six-story house at 603 to 611 West 140th Street, between Broadway and Riverside Drive. The house has lately been finished by the Dayton Realty Company, Harris Maran, President, and is well rented. It covers a plot 135 by 99.11 feet, being a portion of the former Hoguet estate purchased by the Dayton Realty Company a year ago. In exchange Mr. Wilder gave two Bronx apartments, one being the Millbrook at 2,036 and 2,038 Webster Avenue, a plot 50 by 127, and the other the Aldus, at 950 Aldus Street, a plot 42 by 105.

The deal was negotiated by the J. Romaine Brown Company. The aggregate value of the properties was about $425,000.

The other deal involved a trade of the two six-story apartments known as the Altamont and the Coverly, on the northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 124th Street, known as 501 and 503 West 124th Street, each covering a plot 50 by 100.11, William H. Hall, the owner, gave them in a deal for the ten-story loft at 29 West Seventeenth Street, on plot 25 by 92 feet, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, sold to Mr. Hall by the Security Bank of New York. It has been held at $250,000.

E. Francis Hillenbrand was the broker in this transaction. The value of the combined properties represented about $500,000.

$100,000 Sale on West 86th St.

Albert P. Gardiner has purchased as a permannent city residence, 14 West Eighty-sixth Street, a five-story American basement dwelling of brick and stone, on a lot 25 by 100 feet.

The dwelling was built by W. W. and T. M. Hall some months ago, and held by them at about $100,000. Slawson & Hobbs negotiated the sale. Mr. Gardiner recently sold his residence at 7 West Seventy-fifth Street.

Leases Fifth Avenue Building.

A large business lease on Fifth Avenue, opposite and near Lord & Taylor's store, has been closed by Mooyer & Marston, who have leased the six-story building at 435 Fifth Avenue for J. Ives Plant to Benson & Hedges, tobacco dealers. The lessees have been tenants in the building for several years, occupying the store and basement. The building covers a plot 24.8 by 125, between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth Streets. The lease has been made for twenty-one years.

Recent Buyers.

Ennis & Sinnot are the buyers of the dwelling 37 West Ninety-seventh Street, sold by Arnold A. and Harry Lewis.

Bronx Borough Sales.

One of the largest transactions reported this week in the Bronx was the sale by the Allendorf Realty Company of 700 East 161st Street, a six-story new law apartment house, on a plot 50 by 100, containing four stores and thirty-eight apartments.

The buyer, William W. Adams, gave in part payment a plot of one and one half lots on the north side of 188th Street, 100 feet east of Park Avenue; also the plot 29 by 100 by 50 by 100, at the southwest corner of Morris Park and Matthews Avenues, and six lots at Stonely Park, New Rochelle. Charles Kuntze negotiated the transaction.

Kurz & Uren, Inc., have sold for Charles H. Zumbuehl 1,501 and 1,503 Southern Boulevard, a five-story new law apartment dwelling, with three stores, on lot 37.6 by 100, to an investor.

Brooklyn.

Malcolm McKinnon, Jr., sold for Mary E. Roberts to an investor a plot on Fifth Avenue, 125 feet south of Ninetieth Street, 25 by 116.3. The new purchaser will immediately improve with a brick and stone building at a cost of $15,000.

Acreage Deal at Roslyn.

An acreage deal in the choice North Shore section of Long Island has been made by Morris & Gerard, who have sold the tract of 13½ acres at Roslyn, owned by the Dean Alvord Securities Company of Rochester. It begins at the southwest corner of Mineola Avenue and old Westbury Road, having large frontages on both.

The purchaser is Jacob Schawel of New York City. He will erect a residence immediately for his country home. The property is near the estates of Edwin C. Willetts, E. Cass Canfield, and William F. Sheehan.

Long Island.

Margaret M. Peteler has purchased at Neponsit a hollow tile stucco house located on Dakota Street. On the same development Peter H. Flynn bought for improvement with an all year residence, a plot 40 by 100, located on Ontario Street.

The Windsor Land and Improvement Company sold at Valley Stream to B. J. Landqvist a plot 40 by 100 and to J. Hanley a plot 60 by 100 on Grove Avenue, to M. Devaney a plot 40 by 100 on Oxford Street and Broadway Avenue, to J. Lomax a plot 40 by 100 on Beverly Parkway, to R. E. Denton a plot 40 by 100 on Morris Parkway, to J. Nuding a plot 40 by 100 on Decker Street, to J. Hunt a plot 40 by 100 on Oxford Street and Cottage Street. The same company sold at Oceanside to E. W. Miller a plot 40 by 100 on Oceanside Parkway. The same company sold at Rockville Centre to E. A. Pearson a plot 40 by 100 on Yale Avenue, to W. Land C. Melnyk a plot 60 by 89 on Brooklyn Avenue.

Staten Island.

The estate of Cornelia P. Snowden sold through the office of Cornelius G. Kolff to Theodore Tolfson, the private dwelling 170 Demorest Avenue, Westerleigh, on a plot 40 by 75 feet.

New Jersey.

Samuel Kraft sold for the Hasbrouck Park Land Company at Hasbrouck Heights, to John Campbell and Henry Applegate, a plot of 50 by 125 each on Longworth Avenue, to Morris Dallis, a plot of 59 by 125 on Longworth Avenue, to Alexander Woods, a plot of 75 by 125 on Stanley Avenue, to George Haas a plot of 50 by 100 on Terrace Avenue, to Samuel Kronenblitt a plot of 50 by 100 on Burton Avenue, and to Frederick Buckow a plot of 78 by 100 on the Boulevard.

The Mountain Lakes Residential Park Company has sold to W. E. Wilson of New York City a concrete home of some ten rooms, located on plot 200 by 150 feet overlooking Mountain Lakes, and to Mr. John B. Barlow of New York a commodious home of English architecture on grounds with shore frontage on Mountain Lake.

George B. Corsa sold for Eney Grupelli to a client a tract of land containing fifty-two acres on Washington Valley and Lake Roads in Morris Township, about two miles from Morristown.

Mayor Ernest C. Hinck of Montclair has purchased a large tract of land extending from Grove Street, Montclair, to Ridgewood Avenue, Glen Ridge, consisting of 1,640 feet of frontage on the north and south sides of Clairidge Court and 320 feet of frontage on Ridgewood Avenue. The Essex Title Guaranty and Trust Company of Montclair have guaranteed the title in amount of $100,000. Mr. Hinck contemplates the improvement of the property by the erection of a number of private houses. The property was purchased from the Sutherland Realty Company of New York, and the sale was effected through F. M. Crawley & Bros. of Montclair.

Suburban.

Fish & Marvin have sold the property on the southwest corner of Cushman and Woodland Roads at Scarsdale, Westchester County, containing two and one-quarter acres, to The Quiller Morgan Company of Manhattan, for investment purposes.

Leases.

The Cross & Brown Co., has leased for Elizabeth M. Anderson the building at 8 East Thirty-eighth Street to Annette Huntington for a term of years.

Schindler & Liebler have leased a store in the Wilton apartment house adjoining the northwest corner of 164th Street and Broadway to the Margaret Troy Lingerie Company.

Pease & Elliman have leased the four-story residence, 163 East Sixty-fourth Street, to Grafton H. Pyne for R. D. Graham.

FLIERS TUNING UP FOR WRIGHT MEET

Many Who Will Compete on Monday Have Arrived at Staten Island Field.

RULES FOR TIMES RACE

Aeronautical Society Members Enthusiastic Over the Sixty-Mile Contest Around Manhattan.

At a meeting of the Aeronautical Society, which lasted until early yesterday morning and which was attended by more members than had ever been present at a session of that organization before, the final plans were adopted for the aviation meet to be held at Oakwood Heights, S. I., on Monday, in memory of the late Wilbur Wright's first flight in a power-driven aeroplane. The members of the society were most enthusiastic over the programme arranged for the, memorial, particularly the Air Derby around Manhattan, which is to be the chief feature of the meet and for which THE NEW YORK TIMES has offered prizes amounting to $2,250 and the Aeronautical Society has put up three silver cups.

The interest expressed by the members of the Aeronautical Society was reflected in the feverish activity with which the sixteen aviators who have entered THE TIMES race were preparing for that contest yesterday. Many of the contestants have arrived at the aerodrome on Staten Island, and they were hard at work all day testing their engines and the supports of their aeroplanes, so that they would be in the best possible condition for the sixty-mile flight around the city. Other aviators are "tuning up" their flying machines on the aviation field at Hempstead, L. I., and a few are on trains bound to New York from distant points.

"The derby around Manhattan is the best thing that has happened in aviation in this country in two years," said an aviator as he stood outside the line of hangars at Hempstead yesterday and watched the activity about him.

Members of the Aeronautical Society pointed out that the race would be not only one of the most important events in aviation in two years, but that more persons would see it than had witnessed any previous contest in the air. The parks and the piers along the waterfront and the open spaces at the north end of the island and Governors Island will accommodate thousands who live too far away to watch the aeroplanes from their homes or offices. From the shores of the upper and lower bay a multitude is expected to view the fliers.

The silver loving cups which will be given by the Aeronautical Society to the first three aviators making the fastest time in the Aerial Derby and a bronze statue entitled, "Determination," which will be awarded to the winner of the altitude flight, will be put on exhibition this morning in the window of the New York Times Building in Times Square. The cups, which are beautiful examples of the silversmith's art, bear this inscription:

First Prize
TIMES's Aerial Derby,
Decennial Aviation Celebration.
Presented by
The Aeronautical Society
In commemoration of the first flight by man
In a heavier than air machine
To
.....
For
First flight around New York City,
Oct. 13, 1913.

The other race prizes bear the same inscription with the word first replaced by "second" or "third," as the case may be. Each cup stands upon a pedestal of ebony five inches high. The cups are fifteen inches high. That designed for the winner of the race is urn shaped, the handles of which are embellished with laurel leaves and a wreath of laurel is entwined around the base. The second prize is somewhat less elaborately carved and is simple in outline. The third prize is goblet-shaped.

The bronze statue of "Determination" is twenty-eight inches high from the base of the top of the figure. It represents a male figure standing erect and with the right arm extended. The left hand grasps the handle of a sword, the point resting upon the ground at the feet of the figure.

The contestants in The Times race will start from the aviation field at Oakwood Heights at two-minute intervals, beginning at 3:00 P. M., on Monday afternoon, according to the rules, if a contestant cannot ascend in a reasonable time he must drop to the end of the list and start after others have been released. As sixteen aviators expect to start it is thought that the first man released will be almost around the course before the last man gets away. There was much talk of having the final time taken when the aeroplanes struck the ground on their return, but it was decided that there was too much danger of collision under this plan, so the time will be taken when the aeroplanes cross in the air over the finish line.

It is designed to make the Derby as far as possible an over-water race. Aviators will be allowed, however, in laying their course to pass over Staten Island from the field to the water and over Governors Island. The course will be straight away up the East River, following the bend in the stream at Corlears Park, where the first control point will be established. The next point of control will be a boat anchored to the north end of Randall's Island. Thence the aviators will follow the course of the Harlem River to the Hudson. They will be guided by the bridge at the Harlem River and Ninth Avenue, where the stream bends sharply to the left. At the turn into the Hudson River there will be another control boat. The landmark for this turn is a railroad bridge. Here are the rules for the race in detail:

Rules for the Race.

Article 1. The following rules concern an aeroplane speed contest around Manhattan Island, starting and finishing at the Aerodrome of the Aeronautical Society at Oakwood Heights, Staten Island, to be known as The New York Times's First American Aerial Derby, to take place Monday afternoon, Oct. 13, 1913, starting at 3:30 o'clock.

Article 2. The prizes donated by THE NEW YORK TIMES are to be awarded $1,000 to the first aviator, $750 to the second aviator, and $500 to the third aviator, to be awarded as per Article 16.

Article 3. All contestants will be required to make a preliminary flight at some time during Saturday, Oct. 11, Sunday, Oct. 12, or during the forenoon of the day of the race, Monday, Oct. 13, 1913, prior to 12 o'clock, noon, on the latter day, in order to qualify. The time of these trials, as far as possible, may be made at the convenience of the aviator. These tests to consist of a flight about the grounds of the Aeronautical Society's Aerodrome to a height of not less than 1,000 feet at which height the motor is to be stopped and the aviator to volplane from this height and land within the grounds of the society.

Article 4. Each aviator shall paint his number with its lines not less than three feet long, and the strokes six inches in width of a contrasting color on the under side of the aeroplane, to enable the judges to identify the various machines.

Article 5. Every participant must be equipped with a suitable life preserver that shall meet the approval of the judges.

Article 6. Each aviator must be provided with a map showing the course and control points.

Article 7. Any class of machines may be entered in this race provided they are equipped with wheels. All machines entered must start from a starting line on the grounds of The Aeronautical Society Aerodrome.

Article 8. Time counts from the time the machine begins to move.

Article 9. THE NEW YORK TIMES's First American Aerial Derby shall start at 3:30 P. M., on Oct. 13, 1913.

Article 10. The start shall be from the field at Oakwood Heights and made in a straight line to Governors Island; thence following the course of the East River to an observation point at Corlears Park; thence following the course of the East River to the intersection of the Harlem River and the East River, (observation point;) thence following the course of the Harlem River to the foot of Ninth Avenue, recognized by a sharp left bend at the foot of said avenue, marked by railway bridge; thence to the intersection of the Harlem and Hudson Rivers (observation point on railroad bridge); thence returning and following the course of the Hudson River and the Bay to the aerodrome at Oakwood Heights.

Article 11. Controls must be passed with the control on the left hand of the aviator and aviators shall at all times keep the shores of Manhattan Island to their left.

Article 12. Machines must pass over all bridges and a minimum average altitude of 2,000 feet must be maintained at all times north of Governors Island.

Article 13. The race must be flown at not less than 2,000 feet altitude.

Article 14. Each contestant must cross the finishing line at an altitude of not more than 500 feet and there shall be a well defined white line laid out on the field at right angle with an imaginary line drawn from the centre of the field to the centre of Battery Park, and the time of the contestant shall be taken as he crosses this line. The ends of the White line shall be marked with white flags upon poles.

Article 15. Each contestant must land and remove his machine from the field as quickly as possible after crossing the finish line as above.

Article 16. The winner shall be adjudged as the one who completes the course in the shortest space of time; the second and third shall be similarly adjudged in accordance with the time occupied in completing the course.

Article 17. Five judges have been appointed as follows: Frank C. Coffyn, William A. Read, Lewis R. Adams, F. W. Barker, Earle L. Ovington. If, however, the aviators prefer to appoint four out of these five judges they are to have the privilege of so doing on or before 10 A. M., Monday, Oct. 13, 1913, by signing their names to a suitable statement committing themselves on the matter of judges.

Article 18. The majority vote of the judges shall determine all awards and penalties and interpretations of the rules.

Must Make Preliminary Flight.

Article three of the rules, making obligatory a preliminary flight, was discussed at length. It was decided to make such a flight a condition of entrance to the Derby both to assure the safety of spectators and the aviator. The aviators made no objection to the judges selected. Frank Coffyn, who was present at the meeting of the Aeronautical Society, will represent the aviators. He was proposed by one of the aviators and accepted promptly by the society.

The committee of Arrangements announced yesterday more details of the programme which will precede the Derby. The first event will be an exhibition flight of models. The next will be a flight by Gilpatric, carrying a passenger. He expects to attain an altitude of 3,500 feet. Then will follow altitude flights by Gilpatric, Wood, Kantner, Johnson, Luckey, Niles, Cecil, Paoli, and Jannus. A demonstration of "fancy flying" will include cutting eights, spiral ascents and volplaning; landing with motor cold; landing with motor "throttled," and accuracy tests in landing.

Then will follow bomb dropping and aerial sharpshooting. From a military standpoint the most interesting event of the day will be Marvin Wood's performance in Blue Bird, a military type of monoplane. Wood has a record of landing his aeroplane, taking it apart, and packing it for shipment in two minutes and twenty-three seconds. Another feat of this aviator is to ascend 9,000 feet and shut off his motor, volplaning to the ground. The meet will end with a flight of aviators around the Statue of Liberty and their bombardment of the statue with roses.

Expect Good Weather.

Manager Hall of the meet and Gilpatric, who made a flight over the upper bay to get an idea of the air currents there, expressed confidence yesterday that conditions would be good on Monday.

"I believe that the weather will be good on Monday," said Mr. Hall. "The atmospheric conditions, I am sure, will be good for flying. I think the committee did a wise thing to rule that the contestants in the Derby must fly high. Our experience teaches us that there is less danger in flying at a high altitude over the city than low down. Then in case of engine trouble it gives the aviator a chance to glide and pick out a landing place."

Manager Hall announced late last night that Frank Fitzsimmons had entered THE NEW YORK TIMES Aerial Derby. He will fly a Nieuport aeroplane. This will mark the return of Fitzsimmons to aviation. He was injured while flying some months ago. He has made many brilliant exhibition flights. In July, 1911, Fitzsimmons came near losing his life by falling into Esopus Creek. He was flying at an altitude of seventy feet when the rudder broke and his aeroplane fell.

The aviator was pinned under his aeroplane, but was rescued by men who were camping in the neighborhood. In addition to Mr. Fitzsimmons, those who will compete in THE NEW YORK TIMES race are C. Murvin Wood, who will fly a Moisant monoplane; J. Guy Gilpatric in a Sloane-Deperdussin monoplane, Allen Adams in a Sloane-Deperdussin monoplane, George Mestach in a Morane Saulnier monoplane, Walter Johnston in a Thomas biplane, Frank Burnside in a Thomas biplane, W. A. Luckey in a Curtiss biplane, Frank Niles in a Curtiss biplane, Tony Jannus in a Bruonist tractor biplane, Capt. William Walb in a Schneider biplane, Arch Freeman in a Wright biplane, J. H. Jewell in a Moisant monoplane, and Harold Kantner, who will fly a Moisant monoplane.

Gimbel Bros. to Sell Subway Bonds.

Gimbel Brothers announced in advertisements sent to the newspapers last night that they had obtained for their customers $200,000 of Interborough Rapid Transit Company first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent. gold bonds, registered or coupon, interchangeable, in denomination of $1,000, due on Jan. 1, 1966. The bonds will be offered at 98½ and accrued interest, a $1,000 bond for $985, at which price they will yield about 5.08 per cent., exempt from State, county, and city taxes.

MITCHEL AIDS FIGHT ON BIRD'S TICKET

SURE TO BEAT GOOD MEN

And Make Tammany Dominant in Board, They Say — Appeal for Unity of Anti-Tammany Forces.

John Purroy Mitchel added his voice last night to the chorus of protest which has greeted the action of County Chairman Bird of the Progressive Party in favoring the nomination of Progressive candidates to run against such Republicans as Aldermen Curran, Bolles, and Boschen.

"I greatly regret," said Mr. Mitchel, "that there has not been complete anti-Tammany fusion throughout the city on Aldermen and Assemblymen. As early as last July, in my letter to the Progressive City Committee, I pointed out the necessity for electing an anti-Tammany Legislature. I recognized then the importance of fusion on those officers in order that we might have a free and representative Assembly and Board of Aldermen.

"I have been ready at all times to do anything that I properly could to bring about such fusion, and I have done what I could to that end. I particularly regret that Anti-Tammany candidates with such excellent records of service to the city as Mr. Curran, Mr. Bolles, Mr. Boschen and others, should have failed of nomination by all elements sincerely opposed to Tammany Hall and what it and its candidates represent in this campaign.

"Party considerations and questions of reciprocation should have nothing to do with this matter. Men for these offices should be selected and nominated primarily with a view to their records, their efficiency and their known opposition to the Tammany system.

"There is no reason why the various elements in this Fusion movement should not yet combine and agree on all candidates for the Assembly and Board of Aldermen. A little mutual tolerance and some reasonable concessions are necessary. The city has a right to expect that much in view of the importance of keeping Tammany from control of the next Assembly and Board of Aldermen."

In addition to Mr. Mitchel, Borough President McAneny and Republican County Chairman Koenig issued statements in which they assumed that the nomination of Progressives would go far to give the domination of the next Board of Aldermen to Tammany.

"The only test to be applied to an Aldermanic candidate," said Mr. McAneny, "is that of fitness and merit. Mr. Curran, Mr. Bolles, and Mr. Boschen are among the best men who have sat in the board for years, and they are entitled on the record to re-election. Each is likely to be defeated, one or two of them pretty certainly, under the opposition of a separate Progressive candidate It is not too late to correct the situation, and I earnestly hope that a union of forces may yet be effected."

Mr. Koenig, in a statement, asked whether Mr. Bird really wished to make out that the leading members of the Republican organization, such as Henry L. Stimson, Ogden L. Mills, Herbert Parsons, Seth Low, and William D. Guthrie were of the same stamp as Tammany camp followers. Moreover, he urged that the records of Aldermen Curran and Bolles was of just that sort which should have insured them Progressive support.

Alderman Curran himself denied absolutely the statement of Mr. Bird that the Progressives had offered to nominate him if he would not attack the Progressive Party. The bargain they tried to force on him, he said, was that he should not help elect his friend Frank Stoddard to the Assembly and this, considering the record of Mr. Stoddard, he refused to do.

McCALL TURNS ON MITCHEL.

Scathing in Denouncing His Subway Record—Hits Pulitzer.

Edward E. McCall met a delegation of taxpayers from Queens at his headquarters in the Hotel Martinique yesterday and talked to them somewhat in a political way on subway prospects. The delegation was made up of members of the McCall Non-Partisan League. Mr. McCall attacked John Purroy Mitchel, saying that he had attempted to delay the completion of the rapid transit system. Mr. McCall said:

"I have said all along and shall continue to proclaim that I do not seek to take credit from any man who helped to bring about the adoption of the great dual subway contracts, but once I signed them I deemed it to be my duty to see that there was no unnecessary delay in construction and operation.

"This unthinking gentleman who opposes me, this man of intemperate speech as well as judgment, goes prating about the city charging me and my commission with delay in awarding the contracts for construction. Does it look like delay when on the last day of December, nine months after the contracts were entered into, you will find over three-fourths of the construction work actually under way?

"Almost the first thing I discovered when I took office was that the Steinway Tunnel, the Centre Street loop, and the Manhattan Bridge had for years been lying idle. No effort by any one in the Board of Estimate had been made to put them into service, to the great shame of the city. The latter two structures cost the city large amounts annually for interest on the bonds which were issued for construction, and the Fourth Avenue subway in Brooklyn was nearly ready for operation. Steps were taken to put the Centre Street loop and the Steinway Tunnel in immediate service. The two contracts which would bring this about were prepared simultaneously. The Centre Street loop is in operation and has been for two months, affording great relief to the people along the lines which reach it, and had the Board of Estimate approved the contract for the work in the Steinway Tunnel promptly, the people of Queens would be riding in that tube to-day, with free transfers to the subway system in New York.

"My opponent charges me with an attempt to change the operating contracts so as to favor the lessee. He knows the statement is false when he utters it. The 10 per cent., a bonus, as he willfully misstates it, was specifically set forth in the proposed agreement to cover the cost of engineering, administrative and legal expenses, and figures upon the actual net cost of labor and materials used in construction.

"I stand firmly on what my board did in that tunnel matter, and I defy him or his sponsors to show that aught but the good of you people and the people of our great city influenced our action. Call it an amendment of the contract or whatever name you may. It was done to stop the scandal of completed structures lying idle at our very doors, costing the city large amounts just for carrying charges and burdening an already overtaxed and over-assessed people.

"I am willing to stand criticism and even abuse from my opponent, but the man who attacks my personal integrity or personal reputation will have to answer and to me personally, and when I come to your borough to speak I will tell you something about these gentlemen. I suppose I will have to take the abuse which is being heaped upon me by his ally, Pulitzer, the young man but a few years out of Harvard, who has had thrust upon him the great responsibility of conducting a metropolitan newspaper, and a man whom not one of you would hire at ten dollars a week in your business.

"I will take his abuse and feel it a privilege and great honor that his scurrilous attacks have been transferred from my esteemed friend, the late Mayor, to myself."

WHITMAN FIGHTS FRAUD.

Many Challenges Cause Repeaters to Leave Registration Places.

Several arrests were made yesterday at the registration places as the result of alleged attempts to register illegally. District Attorney Charles S. Whitman took a vigorous hand in the proceedings. Talcott Williams, President of the Honest Ballot Association, appealed to the District Attorney, and as a result Mr. Whitman appointed Arthur C. Train a special Assistant District Attorney to prosecute election frauds.

Several hundred challenges, which caused repeaters to leave the lines, were reported by the Honest Ballot Association at the end of the first registration day. In the Second Assembly District five polling places were closed before six o'clock although they should have kept open until 10 o'clock. The Jewish holiday beginning at sunset was the reason assigned for closing the polling places.

Patrolman John Harrison of the Clinton Street Station reported last night that Charles Werner, the Election Inspector in charge of the registration booth at 127 Rivington Street, which is in the Fifteenth Election District of the Eighth Assembly District, had closed his booth at 5:30 yesterday afternoon on account of the Jewish Holiday. According to the law the booth should have remained open until 10 o'clock, but the police said last night that they would take no action in the case until instructed by the Board of Elections.

Three election inspectors in the Seventh Election District of the Second Assembly District were arrested last night on a warrant signed by Chief Justice Russell of Special Sessions on the charge of refusing to perform their duties as election inspectors. They were locked up at the Oak Street Station. They were Harry Strumpf, 241 Henry Street; Lawrence Byrnes, 66 New Chambers Street, and David Klivan of 180 Madison Street. The complaint was made by John Rofano, a watcher for the Independence League at the registration booth, 64 Madison Street, where the arrests were made.

Rofano challenged a man who registered from 56 Madison Street, and was said to live at Bath Beach. Rofano says that he was ordered out of the polling place. Harry Strumpf, who was the Chairman of the Election Inspectors, took the books to the station with him. The prisoners will be arraigned in the Toombs Police Court to-day.

A group of lawyers, including C. E. Hughes, Jr., kept going from the Honest Ballot Association headquarters, in the Vanderbilt Avenue Building, to registration places throughout the day to answer calls for assistance. In a polling place in the Twelfth Assembly District, at 332 East Twenty-third Street, W. M. Gropper of the Honest Ballot Association challenged Daniel Sullivan on the ground of false registration. Sullivan registered and was arrested. He will be arraigned in the East Fifty-seventh Street Police Court this morning.

Labor Men Attack Prendergast.

Delegates to the convention of the Central Federated Union of the American Federation of Labor, at a meeting held last night in the Labor Temple, passed a resolution attacking Controller Prendergast as "the worst foe to organized labor in the city." Several of the delegates spoke bitterly against Mr. Prendergast and Borough President McAneny.

SLOW TO REGISTER ON THE FIRST DAY

Manhattan and Bronx More Than 3,000 Behind Last Mayoralty Campaign.

WHOLE CITY'S TOTAL LESS

Queens Shows a Big Jump Over Recent Years—Brooklyn Borough Is Slightly Behind.

Figures for the first day of registration this year in Manhattan and the Brown show a falling off of more than 3,000 as compared with first day registration figures of 1909, the last Mayoralty campaign. As compared to last year the first day's figures show a falling off of more than 7,000. Brooklyn did better than Manhattan, the first day's figures showing a difference of little more than 1,000 as compared to the figures of 1909.

The downtown Tammany districts showed a considerable falling off excepting ni one or two instances. At the same time the uptown strongly Republican districts also were behind the last Mayoralty figures with the exception of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Districts, both Republican strongholds. In the Twenty-third District the figures were 2,000 better than in 1909, but this was due partly to increase in population.

The fact that the Jewish holiday began at sunset, and that interest was centered largely in the world's series baseball games were given as reasons for the light registration as compared to previous years. The Bronx, which for the first time in a new county this year, showed an increase over the figures both of 1909, 1910, and 1912.

The registration in Brooklyn for the first day was considered excellent by the political leaders there. In several districts, notably where the foreign population is large and where pro-Sulzer sentiment is said to prevail, the figures were much better tha nthose of four years ago. This was true in the thirteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, eighteenth and twenty-third districts.

In Queens the registration was more than 4,000 better than the figures of 1909 and more than 2,000 better than those of last year, a Presidential year. This is due to increase in population and to the fact that Borough President Connolly is waging a hot fight there for re-election. The following tables show the figures for the first day's registration this year as compared to the first days of 1909, 1910 and 1912:

LEAGUE NAMES SUTRO.

Makes Him Nominee for Controller —Simmons as Head of Aldermen.

The City Committee of the Independence League at a meeting at Arlington Hall, St. Mark's Place, last night nominated Theodore Sutro for Controller and Maurice Simmons for President of the Board of Aldermen. Several members of the committee were in favor of indorsing Herman A. Metz, the Tammany candidate for Controller, while still others thought that William R. Hearst would be the ideal candidate. When the matter was put to a vote, however, Mr. Sutro won.

Mr. Sutro is a lawyer. He is Honorary President of the German-American Alliance of the State of New York, and was Commissioner of Taxes in this city from 1895 to 1898. He is an anti-Tammany Democrat. Mr. Simmons is also a lawyer. He is National Commander of the United States Spanish War Veterans.

BEEF TRUST STARTS ARGENTINE IMPORTS

THREE MONTHS' EXPERIMENT

Chicago Packer Predicts Fall in Price Everywhere—May Shift Part of Industry Here.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—With the importation of chilled beef from Argentina, made possible by the new tariff, a long step will be taken toward lowering the price of that product according to Chicago packers who expect to land their first shipment in New York to-morrow when the Celtic arrives.

More than two thousand quarters comprised the shipment sent from Liverpool where it has been kept in refrigeration for several weeks, awaiting the enactment of the new tariff.

In discussing the importation of Argentine beef to-day F. E. White of Armour & Co. said that the shipping in of chilled meat was an experiment by the packers.

"Although frozen beef can be shipped much cheaper, we are making this test with chilled beef," he said. "The range cattle of Argentina are of a much better beef quality than those of this country. In shipping, the beef is kept just about the freezing point, while frozen beef is often kept below zero."

According to the packers, this beef will, for the time being at least, be sold only along the Atlantic seaboard. The extra freight to Chicago and other Western points would more than make up for the difference in price of the two kinds of beef. Chicago will, however, feel the decrease in price because less beef will be shipped from the West to the Eastern territories, thus increasing the supply here.

There is, according to the packers, a surplus of about 4,000 beef cattle weekly in Argentina, after that country and Eurpoean markets have been supplied. The average number of beef cattle used for consumption in this country is 120,000 per week. The Eastern States receive more than 70 per cent. of their beef supply from the West, and it is argued that if the 4,000 surplus beef cattle from Argentina are consumed in the East it will soon lower the price of beef there and in the West also.

Mr. White to-day said the 3-day experiment would be continued at least three months, and he expects that an appreciable decrease in the price of steaks will result.

"Arrangements have been made with the Lamport & Holt Line of New York and Liverpool to use all their refrigerator space in shipping this beef from Argentina to New York," he said. "A contract to this effect has been signed for three months. In that time we can tell how this South American beef is being received, and also what effect it has had upon the general beef market."

There is widespread feeling among Chicago packers that with the advent of free meat from Argentina, Canada, and elsewhere, the supremacy of this city as the centre of the packing industry may wane and the removal of some canning branches of the industry to New York and other points on the Atlantic seaboard is likely.

Hail the University Club.

It's that totally different Derby that Truly Warner has just introduced to Mr. Goodresser. The feature of this hat is its unusual and graceful drooping brim, that produces the over the ears effect, although the hat fits the head perfectly and naturally.

Mr. Goodresser was never treated to such a comfortable and smart Derby style as the University Club. It's an exclusive Truly Warner creation and can be had only at Truly Warner's stores. The price is $2.
